In any organized government, and particularly in a democracy, the question of law enforcement is of first importance. No government can exist without law and order, and in the proportion in which law is enforced is the security of our person and the stability of our property rights made certain.

There is today a very general criticism of our legal machinery and of the delay and uncertainties incident to the administration of law. This is directed to the civil, as well as the criminal branches of our courts. While the situation is not entirely the fault of the courts, or of the bar, the time has come when lawyers and judges must join in bringing our courts up to the highest point of efficiency.

Unreasonable delay in the trial of civil cases amounts to a denial of justice. Lax administration of the criminal law makes for increasing lawlessness. The criminal law must be administered so that everyone will know that the punishment for wrongdoing will be swift and certain.

The commission appointed by our Governor for the revision of our penal code has made a splendid start, and is entitled to the cordial support of the bench and bar in its endeavors to bring the law abreast of present day needs. Justice in the administration of the criminal law means justice to the people of the community upon which the criminal has preyed as well as to the individual whose passions or avarice have led him so far astray.

If elected to the Superior Court I pledge a continuance of my efforts to increase the efficiency of and the respect for our courts. The obligations of a judge to the people of a community are large. I realize them fully and shall strive to maintain them.

Judge Edmonds in 1907 arrived in Los Angeles, where he attended University of Southern California, and was admitted to the Bar in 1910, and has ever since been in the active practice of law in Los Angeles. He is a Mason and Shriner, a member of the Masonic club, the Los Angeles Athletic Club, Suri and Sand Club and Sons of the Revolution.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Ask the men or women who are acquainted with California legislative affairs during the past ten years, whether Frank F. Merriam, who has been Speaker of the Assembly for the past four years, would be a good man for lieutenant governor.

Ask them whether he is honest.

Ask them whether he is fair-minded.

Ask them as to his ability and his insight into public questions.

Ask them whether he has used his influence on the side of the best interests of the people or not.

Ask them whether a man with years of recent experience in state affairs, if he is honest and fair-minded and able and has the public welfare at heart, would be a wise choice for such a responsible office as lieutenant governor.

If you would use the same good judgment in selecting a lieutenant governor as you would in employing someone to work for you in your own business, you will vote for the best qualified candidate, Frank F. Merriam.

SAN JOAQUIN THE COUNTY OF NATIVES' GRAND PRESIDENTS.

San Joaquin County, says the "Stockton Independent," is honored in claiming the presidents of two such outstanding organizations as the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West and the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, in the persons of Hilliard E. Welch of Lodi and Mrs. Pearl Lamb of Tracy.

"The distinction is one that will in the nature of things very seldom fall to any one county and it is a fine compliment to the leadership developed by splendid Parlors of each organization in San Joaquin, where membership is made up of sons and daughters of some of the most prominent Pioneers of this section.

"In addition to the tribute paid to the past through their remarkable work in conserving and marking historic spots and landmarks, these organizations have made a splendid contribution to the future in their program of child welfare, which has included the placing of thousands of orphan children in homes for adoption. The very greatest care and discretion is taken in the

The many friends of RUBEN S. SCHMIDT are glad to learn that he is a candidate this year for Judge of the Superior Court, full term. He is not opposing any incumbent, but seeking election to one of the two places being vacated.

For the past six years, at the request of judges and attorneys, he has acted as tempory judge in numerous cases, devoting from one-fourth to one-third of his time to the work of relieving the congestion existing in the Superior Court calendars.

Mr. Schmidt was born in Los Angeles, where his early education was had in the public schools. After reading in a law-office for a year he entered the University of Michigan, from which he graduated from the Literary Department in 1903 and from the Law Department in 1905. He has been in active practice in Los Angeles ever since.

placing of such children in the right sort of homes and at the same time the foster parents are accorded such information as will acquaint them with the type of child they are taking.

"And now the Native Daughters, extending their benefits still wider to include encouragement to deserving boys and girls eager for education, have announced two $2,500 scholarships. Then, in order to preserve for the future not only the works and records of the Pioneers but also those magnificent gifts with which nature has so abundantly enriched California, the Native Daughters at their recent convention in Sacramento voted to buy a grove of redwoods in Humboldt County as a Native Daughters' memorial.

"Such work is an honor to the organization itself, to the state which it represents and to the pioneer forebears of its members.

EL DORADO ABOUNDS IN SHRINES OF EARLY CALIFORNIA HISTORY.

The motorist of today who has not visited the old mining towns of El Dorado County and the land of the Pony Express has not seen the heart of California, according to "Motor Land," the official magazine of the California State Automobile Association. An illustrared article by J. E. Thrash entitled "El Dorado and the Lake of the Sky," describing El Dorado County as the center of the district haloed by the spirit of '49, says, in part:

"It is like turning back the pages of history and living over again those stirring times to visit the shrines of early California history, to travel the very paths over which the gold hunters toiled and to feel the inspiration of the scenic canyons of the American River.

"You can spend days motoring over the roads that lead from Placerville to Coloma, Kelsey, Gold Hill, Diamond Springs, Pleasant Valley, Indian Diggings, Pilot Hill, Greenwood, Georgetown and other towns whose names hark back to the days of the Argonauts.

"Or, if he chooses to go on, the motorist finds ahead of him a road that leads to the 'Lake of the Sky' [Tahoe] and one of the finest recreation grounds in America—a land of dense forests and rushing streams, of snow-capped peaks and sparkling lakes, of romance and adventure.

"The highway from Placerville to Lake Tahoe, sixty-three miles, is not only one of the best mountain roads in the West, but it is one of the oldest. Over this road rolled the Central Overland California stagecoaches in the sixties, as well as the many big freight wagons loaded with supplies for the Comstock in the later days when Virginia City was the greatest mining camp in America."

CALIFORNIA'S POPULATION, AS ESTIMATED BY NEW SYSTEM.

Basing his estimate on property values, revealed in the assessment rolls of the several counties, State Controller Ray L. Riley figures that the present population of California is 5,066,288. Employing the same system, he estimates the cities' populations, the largest, in order, being:

Los Angeles, 1,260,315.
San Francisco, 622,603.
Oakland, 280,663.
Long Beach, 123,758.
Sacramento, 98,869.
San Diego, 97,821.
Pasadena, 80,643.
Glendale, 75,296.
Berkeley, 74,764.
Fresno, 66,592.
Stockton, 46,562.

DOWNIEVILLE

(CONSTANCE WILLIS CAMP.)

Nestled in among the mountains,
Where 'tis peaceful, calm and still,
Lies an old romantic hamlet—
The quaint town of Downieville.
Here the rugged "Forty-Niners"
Struggled on through heat and cold,
Thinking naught of all the hardships
In their eagerness for gold;
Came and settled with their families,
Knew no worry, had no strife,
For these people—farmers, miners,—
Loved and lived the Simple Life.

Fish are sporting in the water,
Birds are singing in the tree,
While the rippling, gurgling river
Slowly wanders to the sea.
Happy children's voices calling,
Laughing as they saunter by;
And when hush of evening settles
Bright stars twinkle in the sky.
Far from city cares and noises
In this village I would stay,
To be taught by Mother Nature
How to live the Simple Way.

—Mountain Messenger.

IRVIN S. COBB'S OPINION OF CALIFORNIA.

"If I could order my affairs as to be able to spend the rest of my life in that part of America which offers most in natural beauty and in the attractiveness of its people, I should choose California.

"Always, from the hour when I first set foot upon the soil of that state to this present moment, I steadfastly have held that California leads every state of this union in a majority of essentials which make for comfort and happiness in living and for the glory of physical surroundings.

"Californians work just as hard as New Yorkers do—when they work—but when they play they put in their playing a zest and a spirit, and most of all, a naturalness which one looks for in vain anywhere along the Eastern seaboard. Her natural advantages are such that her people can find outdoor pleasures in simple and in homely things.

"The eye is pleased with beauty. The mind is soothed by the most equable climate that we have on this continent. The imagination is stimulated by the wholesouled and hearty optimism of her sons and her daughters.

"In California you find, as you find nowhere else in the union, a delectable blending of the hospitality of the South, the energy of the North, and the traditional inclinations of her Spanish and her American Pioneers."—Calaveras Prospect.

"The world goes up and the world goes down; and the sunshine follows the rain; and yesterday's sneer and yesterday's frown can never come over again."—Charles Kingsley.

The ceremonies will begin with the arrival of a stagecoach, accompanied by vaqueros in costume. Music will be provided, both for the ceremonies and for the dancing to follow. ### INSTALLATION DRAWS.

The Glendale Tuesday Afternocn Clubhouse was filled with Native Sons and Native Daughters July 10, gathered to witness a joint installation of the officers of the Los Angeles City and Glendale Parlors. D.D.G.P. Burrel D. Neighbours was the master of ceremonies, and during the evening addresses were made by Sheriff William I. Traeger, Past Grand President N.S.G.W.; Miss Marvel Thomas, Grand Trustee N.D.G.W., and John T. Newell, Grand Trustee N.S.G.W.

D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt, assisted by Bernice Rankens (Long Beach 154 N.D.G.W.) as acting grand marshal, installed the officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. and the pretty cermony, splendidly executed, was roundly applauded.

D.D.G.P. Ronald M. Ross, assisted by D.D.G.P. Albert Cron as acting grand marshal, then, at one time, installed the officers of five Native Son Parlors—Los Angeles No. 45, Ramona No. 109, Hollywood No. 196, Vaquero No. 262, Glendale No. 264. Richard S. Milton (Ramona 109 N.S.G.W.) was the pianist for both installation ceremonies, which were concluded with a dance.

RECEPTION AND DANCE.

There was a large attendance at the July 7 meeting of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. to greet Marvel Thomas on her return from the Sacramento Grand Parlor, where she was elected a Grand Trustee. D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt and representatives from Long Beach and Rudecinda Parlors were among those present. July 23 the members enjoyed a "Topsy and Eva" theater party, arranged by Grace Yarwood and Grace Haven, complimentary to the Duncan sisters, natives of Los Angeles. The Parlor presented them with a floral remembrance, suitably inscribed in recognition of their artistic ability.

July 21 Grand Trustee Thomas, on Los Angeles' behalf, presented Katheryn Ronan, the retiring president, with a gold pencil; she was commended for the progress which, through her efforts largely, the Parlor has made. Grace Yarwood donated a beautiful picture-hat which, it is hoped, will bring a substantial sum toward the $100 pledged by the Parlor for a tree in the Na-

EXPORT TRADE INCREASES BY MILLIONS

DURING THE FISCAL YEAR ENDED June 30, there went out of the Los Angeles Harbor district, which embraces San Pedro, merchandise to the value of over $83,000,000, according to the trade extension department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. This was an increase, compared with the preceding fiscal year, of over $10,000,000.

Petroleum products led the exports, amounting in value to more than $65,000,000, and gasoline was the leader among the petroleum products. Cotton ranked second, with a value of $6,164,845, and canned sardines, of an approximate value of $2,000,000, came third. Fruits exported had a value of $772,611 for canned, $594,186 for fresh and $112,165 for dried. Oil-well machinery exported aggregated $1,627,261 in value, and the borax shipped out was valued at $1,157,933.

BARBECUE HUGE SUCCESS.

The June 27 barbecue at White Point, sponsored jointly by Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. and Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W., to raise money for the San Pedro 1927 Grand Parlor entertainment fund, was a huge success, netting close to $2,000. Incidentally, the occasion also was an observance of the Parlors' birthday anniversaries. Ramon Sepulveda donated the park, which he had profusely decorated with American and State (Bear) Flags, and the beef, mutton, etc., were also contributed. The culinary committee included Cosme Arcy, James H. Dodson Sr., J. V. Alvarado, Tony Leonardo, August Traub.

Ralph Harbison, who worked so faithfully to assure a success, had charge of the program, over which Burrel D. Neighbours presided. Among the speakers were Chief Justice William H. Waste (Berkeley 210) of the California Supreme Court, Judge Robert M. Clarke (Ramona 109), Judge Rex B. Goodcell (Arrowhead 110), Appellate Court Justice John M. York (Hollywood 196).

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' DOINGS.

Officers of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. were installed July 9 by D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt, assisted by a corps of acting grand officers from Long Beach Parlor No. 154, Catherine Ross becoming president. On behalf of the Parlor, Second Vice-president Hazel Raines presented Charlotte K. Bennett, retiring president, with an emblematic ring, and flowers were presented D.D.G.P. Hitt and Recording Secretary Carrie Lenhouse.

Girls beautifully frocked in novel crepe dresses and picture hats served delicious refreshments following the installation ceremonies and a program was enjoyed. A committee composed of Hazel Raines, Marie Smith and Amy Hagenow had charge of this feature. At the Sacramento Grand Parlor Rudecinda's delegates pledged a tree for the proposed Native Daughters' memorial grove of redwoods, and the Parlor voted to name the tree Rudecinda F. S. de Dodson, after whom the Parlor was named.

Mrs. Hazel Raines entertained at cards at her home June 30. Mrs. Charlotte Bennett, retiring president of Rudecinda, was the honor-guest and, in appreciation for her efficient work, was given a miscellaneous shower. Dainty refreshments were served. July 13 Mrs. Marie Smith, who has returned to the Parlor after several months absence due to illness, was surprised at her home and given a handkerchief shower. Mary Bailey and Louise Steinkamp have returned from an enjoyable trip to the northern part of the state.

NATIVE SONS' ACTIVITIES.

The final meeting, July 13, in "Bill" Reuter's term as president of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. witnessed the initiation of seven more candidates. The report for the term showed the Parlor had advanced to 261 members and has a substantial treasury. There was a large attendance of visitors representing many Parlors—Long Beach, Los Angeles, San Diego, Ramona, Sacramento, Fruitvale, Vaquero and Fortuna.

Speakers of the evening included Grand Trustee John T. Newell, George A. Burns, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, Edgar Crowell, D.D.G.P. Albert Cron, Ralph Harbison, Harold Oliver, "So-and So" Carroll, W. H. Trollinger, Ramon Sepulveda and others. The Parlor named a committee to arrange for participation in the Sacramento Admission Day festivities.

July 17, Sepulveda's officers were publicly installed by D.D.G.P. Albert Cron, Edward E. Baldwin becoming president. Members of Rudecinda Parlor N.D.G.W. were guests, and there was a good attendance. At the conclusion of the installation ceremonies dancing was enjoyed. Frank D. Foot, an old-time San Pedroan, died July 13; he was the father of Clyde Foot, affiliated with Sepulveda, and was a great favorite among the members of the Parlor, who deplore his passing.

It is bad practice to let the engine remain idle. With the throttle closed the suction of the pistons will draw oil from the crank case, fouling the spark plug and carbonizing the engine.

tive Daughters' proposed memorial grove of redwoods in Humboldt County.

In honor of Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, Los Angeles will hold a reception and dance August 25 at I.O.O.F. Hall, Washington and Oak streets. All Natives are cordially invited, and a pleasant evening is assured. Beginning in September the Parlor will feature a monthly dance on the fourth Wednesday of each month.

WATERMELON FEAST.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. initiated several candidates during July. President Andrew Beazell has appointed committees which will present an attractive after-vacation schedule of events. It is planned to especially feature athletics, and it may be that a clubroom will be fitted up. Several out-of-city members of the Order were visitors during the month. At the July 14 meeting Sidney B. Witkowski, having become a senior past president, was presented with an emblematic jewel, D.D.G.P. Ronald M. Ross making the presentation address.

The July 31 wiene bake at Howard Bentley's Los Flores Canyon cabin was largely attended and greatly enjoyed. The Parlor will hold an initiation August 12, and in conjunction with Hollywood 196 have a watermelon feast August 19 at Los Angeles' meeting-place.

CARTHAY CIRCLE THEATER NIGHT.

The best attended affair of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. in a long time was that of July 16, when the officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 3 Native Sons of the Golden State were entertained. The Golden State Sons are affiliated with the Chinese-American Citizens Alliance. President Leon Leonard of Ramona called the assemblage to order and introduced Frank Fewins, who presented a program of vaudeville numbers.

During the evening addresses were made by Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, George A. Burns and Burrell D. Neighbours of the Native Sons, and Y. C. Hong and Peter Soohoo of the Golden States. Following the gathering all went to a down-town cafe and enjoyed a repast. Ramona's past presidents had a reunion July 24 at the Pico-Fremont memorial.

Ramona's program for August includes motion pictures the 13th and initiation the 20th. The "mystery box" is opened every Friday night. J. Harvey McCarthy, a member of the Parlor, has arranged for special rates for Native Sons and Native Daughters at the Carthay Circle theater August 10, where the "Volga Boatman" is showing. Not only will the members witness a good picture, but they will be enabled to inspect this unique theater and to view the numerous fine paintings of early-day history that adorn the showhouse.

NEW HOMES.

The United States National Bank is now located in new quarters at the northwest corner of Eighth and Spring streets, which will, in future, be the main bank.

Hill Bros. & Co. formally opened its new furniture home at 1501-35 West Washington, near Vermont, July 1. The attractive structure stands as a symbol of the firm's progress.

Garrett Brothers are now located in their new and complete mortuary, 921 Venice boulevard, formerly known as West sixteenth street.

SMOKER.

President Floyd Riley is sponsoring a membership drive for Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. and expects to add a hundred and more names to the muster-roll before his term expires. An attractive new seal, typical of Hollywood, has been approved.

Hollywood's program for August, in addition to the regular Monday meetings, includes a "feed" the 2nd, and a smoker and entertainment the 16th.

HOUSE PARTY.

The July 14 dance of Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. proved highly enjoyable. The prize waltz was won by Grace Haven and Grand Trustee John T. Newell, and the prize foxtrot an important part in an advisory role. Building committee—Gilbert H. Beesemyer, Parker V. Foster, George I. Eastman.

A somewhat changed personnel of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce board of directors witnessed the completion of and dedicated the new building to community service. With Executive Secretary Carl Bush still in an advisory and general supervisorial capacity, the structure was completed early in July 1926 and plans were immediately inaugurated for an appropriate opening ceremony.

The dedicatory board was composed of Frank Galloway, president; Parker V. Foster, first vice-president; J. Don Mahaffey, second vice-president; Sam Kress, treasurer; Gilbert H. Beesemyer, Charles A. Best, C. E. Boag, E. F. Bogardus, R. J. Harwood, Wm. S. Holman, Harry E. Jones, Mrs. Burdette H. Norton, M. F. Palmer, Herbert S. Scholfield, William Stromberg. No change was made in the personnel of the original building committee, but a furnishing committee was added this year, composed of Mrs. Norton, M. F. Palmer and H. Ellis Reed. With Mrs. Norton as chairman, the latter committee and the building committee were combined to complete the governing board.

With the occupancy of the new administration building by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, the executive board of that organization will inaugurate a new policy of community affairs administration through the medium of special and standing committees. This plan, fostered and encouraged by the chief officers of the board, was given heartiest support by the board of directors as a whole at a recent meeting.

As outlined by President Frank K. Galloway, the plan contemplates the organization of thirteen departmental committees and one general committee embracing advisory bodies for each of the seven districts of the chamber. These separate committees of the general body will act as advisory to the district directors in problems that are indigenous to each of the zones. Each of the bodies will be assigned some specific work to perform, and in this will be assisted by the executive personnel of the chamber office.

It is the opinion of President Frank Galloway and all of the board members that much can be accomplished for Hollywood as a whole through the medium of operative committes, and with the personnel selected with a view to the ability of each individual member to cope with problems that have direct bearing on the particular subjects assigned that committee. It is also the expressed belief that through the individual members of all committes community co-operation of highest type can be brought about in furthering all matters of importance to Hollywood, centralizing this effort in the chamber of commerce.

GROVE OF GIANT REDWOODS ONE OF CALAVERAS COUNTY'S ATTRACTIONS.

One of the finest of the redwood groves in California, says the "Calaveras Prospect," is the Calaveras, which is situated in a small valley near the headwaters of the San Antonio at an elevation of 4,700 feet. The highway to these big trees, which extends from Angels, Calaveras County, into the heart of the Mother Lode, reaches the grove by way of Murphys.

The Calaveras grove contains ten trees, each thirty feet in diameter, and over seventy between fifteen and twenty feet. In 1853, one of the largest trees, ninety-two feet in circumference and over three hundred feet high, was cut down. Five men worked twenty-five days in felling, using large augers. The stump of this tree has been smoothed off and now accommodates thirty-two dancers. Theatrical performances have been held upon it, and in 1858 a newspaper, "The Big Trees Bulletin," was printed there.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

VAGABOND HAT THE LAST WORD

THIS IS A SUMMER OF SLEEVES, collars and capes. Everything is "very this" or "very that." Sleeves, as everyone knows, are very important this year and one soon learns that they are very soft, very short or very long. Sometimes very full, many times very much embroidered, but in all cases very interesting.

When collars are discussed, which is practically all the time, one hears that they are very original, very flattering and very much given to ends and bows. Speaking of bows, it is their summer, too. They are very large or very small, very coquettish under an ear or very quaint or primly chic at the throat.

The accent this season is on softness with curved lines, blousings, shirrings, tiny tucks, plaits, loose panels, flares and things of that sort, until the frock is a soft and feminine thing, with flying ribbon ends and fluttering full skirts. Prints, with colorful landscapes, and plaids and polka dots are seen everywhere.

Red is doing its best and brightest to make this a gay season, along with black and white, navy blue and white, a new yellow called "sun," crayon blue, mint green, rose and orchid. Chartreuse and tangerine are chic, with white, canary and jade print. Violet and geranium colors are used on sand. Peacock and nile green make a print that is unusually lovely.

The silk and cotton voiles, and the embroideries on light, airy tissues of soft, sweet colors are new. August represents the full-blown blossom time and brings us the greatest joy. One finds in these fragile dresses a fullness that is surprising.

The sports frock is the most boyishly nonchalant and the most flattering youthful type of dress a woman ever wore. High-school girls, college students and mature matrons have all claimed it for their own. From morning until night, and often later, sports clothes are insistently in evidence.

The sweater suit is first cousin to the jumper frock, and an inevitable development of the sports style. We have had sweaters before and we have had knitted sports suits in soft wools and interesting weaves, but never before have there been such surprising combinations of materials such as silk and zephyr, wool and crepe de chine, jersey and satin, and never have smarter models been so elaborately designed.

A blue and white striped "slip-on" with a student collar is worn with a solid blue long-sleeved coat. The double sweaters sometimes have a knitted skirt that matches the solid-colored coat or shirt, otherwise they are worn with skirts of light-weight wool, french flannel or pleated silk.

Stripes have won such approval that almost every sweater costume is barred and banded in some fashion, if not with plain stripes of a contrasting color, in self-colored rayon or in bands of different knitted weaves or blister stitches.

With such a number of most wearable sports togs, is it any wonder that women spend half their waking time in sports attire? There is not a woman who does not revel in the freedom and smartness of these simple and becoming frocks and hats.

The vagabond hat with a nonchalant brim is the last word. Wherever smart women gather, the vagabond hat with the becoming droop to its brim is certain to be in high favor. Black or navy blue grosgrain contrasts pleasantly with the exquisite sports shades of the felt. We see the plaid woven in the straw with the patterns in bright-colored scotch effects. The crowns are pinched up a bit, or laid in individual creases. A simple grosgrain ribbon is the only trimming. The matter of binding the edge depends upon the breadth of the brim.

Where the brim is rather broad and with a fixed contour, binding is very often used. The hat which has a collapsible brim is usually unbound, as binding interfers with turning the brim up at the desired and becoming angle. The manner in which the unbound brim droops enhances its air of freedom and unrestraint.

In plain colored felts, a decided preference is for the rosy beige and vanilla shades. The smartest hats in these colors are the round crowned types, which have flat, curved folds and small, drooping brims.

Drooping garden hats to wear with flower-like frocks afford such a range of possibilities that a milliner may give free rein to her imagination. The so-called dress hat offers varied opportunities for individual touches, but the simple sports hats, depending, like the tailored dress, on material and line for distinction and chic, have tried the mettle of designers.

No matter how interested we may be in what will be worn in the fall, summer is still with us and summer's needs must receive first consideration. The movement to develop a "hat consciousness" has resulted in women now wearing hats which are in better taste for the occasion and a more harmonious complement of the costume than at any time in the past.

Gloves are pleasing in quality and coloring. Not only are the gloves of both fabric and of kid excellent in fit and shape, but the cuffs are embellished with rich embroidery and with hand painting. Silk gloves, both long and short, come in the pastel tints of frocks and wraps, vieing with hosiery in their beauty.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

The shawl angels will not relinquish its hold upon feminine favor. The most recent appearance of this fleecy one is the topping of a dainty afternoon gown in black satin. The shawl takes shape in a large oblong of rose-colored chiffon, the four corners of which fall well down upon the skirt with the central opening fitted to a rounded neck.

The boys are showing wonderful shawls of plain silk with deep fringe and embroidery also lace and wool. Many look like a crazy quilt of vari-colored crochet in squares and curved pieces, joined and finished with a deep fringe. Many scarfs are seen with all sorts of designs in the gayest colors.

Although it seemed that beaded hand bags had reached the limit of elaborate loveliness, the newest imports rival any heretofore seen. The finest of beads form intricate scenes and floral masses, the coloring of which fits these accessories to go with any costume.

Sterling silver bags of "baby mesh" have touches of enamel on the frame and handles of finely braided silver. The new costume jewelry called "carmencita" is, as you may have guessed, Spanish in design, and is carefully copied from antiques.

MY RADIO

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

The hours I spend holding to thee,
And count the stations come and go, —
I count them out in agony,
My radio, my radio
Each call a shriek, each sound a thrill,
To cheer a heart that seeks for more;
I catch each static loud and shrill
While both my ears are cramped and sore.
Oh expectations, just to hear;
Oh lively hope, so sure to burn;
I press the phone close to my ear
And give the dial another turn, another turn.

THREE IMPORTANT STEPS TOWARD SUCCESS IN HOME CANNING.

Successful canning is based on an understanding of the causes for the rapid spoilage of fresh foods and on a knowledge of the methods by which this spoilage may be prevented, says the United States Department of Agriculture in its latest publication on home canning.

One of the causes of spoilage is the presence of substances called "enzymes" in all fresh fruits and vegetables. These enzymes bring about the normal ripening of the products, and, unless checked, they bring on final decay. The heat of cooking and canning checks their action, so it is only necessary to prevent the changes they may bring about between the time the material is gathered and the time it is cooked or canned. This is the reason for the emphasis upon canning fruits and vegetables as soon as possible after they have been gathered.

The second and more important cause of food spoilage is the action of minute organisms which are present in the air, soil, water and in fact, on everything—yeasts, molds and bacteria. Yeasts and molds are easier to kill than bacteria and do not cause so much difficulty in canning. Many kinds of bacteria are able, when unfavorable conditions arise, to go over into a so-called spore form, in which they are very difficult to kill. For this reason bacteria are the chief factors to be considered in canning. If all bacteria are killed and the product is sealed steaming hot within a sterile airtight container the food is said to be sterilized. The application of heat to foods during canning in order to kill bacteria is called processing.

The presence of air has always been associated with food spoilage, owing to the fact that these small plants are present in the air even though they cannot be seen with the naked eye. When unheated air comes in contact with food it spoils, not because of the air but because of the bacteria, yeasts and molds it contains. Choosing fresh fruits and vegetables for canning, proper processing and airtight sealing are therefore the three steps toward success in home canning.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES READY.

An announcement of courses which the University of California will give during the year 1926-27 to residents of the state or any others desiring help, by correspondence, is now ready for distribution.

Bulletins containing a complete description of the courses and procedure for enrolling in them may be obtained at the Department of Correspondence Instruction in Berkeley, San Francisco, Oakland, Stockton, Sacramento, Los Angeles, San Diego or Long Beach.

Landscaping—

Older residents of California are familiar with the fact that Howard & Smith have created many of the most beautiful gardens in the State. With the vast development which has recently taken place in Southern California, however, it may be that some of the newer residents are not aware of the fact that Howard & Smith have a landscape department capable of rendering the very highest service in the treatment of their grounds. ¶In the development of a property, confidence can only be placed in those having a thorough understanding of landscaping in its entirety. A full comprehension of this subject, from the minutest detail to the placing of the house itself, is essential if beauty and harmony are to be the ultimate result.

If you are contemplating the development of your grounds we will be pleased to have you confer with us.

PASADENA AND THE STORY OF RANCHO SAN PASCUAL

"Happy," I said "whose home is here!
Fair fortunes to the mountaineer!
Boon nature to his poorest shed
Has royal pleasure grounds outspread!"
—R. W. Emerson.

That writers of the past could see well into the future, is evidenced by this story of historical interest which appeared in a "History of Los Angeles County," published in 1889. The chapter devoted to "Pasadena, and the Story of Rancho San Pascual" is credited to Mrs. Jeanne C. Carr.

Contrast the Pasadena of that time, 1889, with the "Crown City" of today, with its magnificent homes, church structures, schools and other public buildings. Pasadena is but one of the many California communities that are making almost unbelievable development strides forward, indicating that Bishop Berkeley's prophecy has been fulfilled—"Westward the star of empire [has taken] its way."—Editor.

FOR ALL THAT MAKES SOUTHERN California pre-eminent for salubrity, picturesque beauty and productiveness, she is in debt to the sea and to her mountains. And among the many snow-born rivers whose sources lie far back in the forested summits, the Arroyo Seco is the most enchanting to lovers of wild nature.

The ascent from Pasadena to Mount Wilson and Disappointment Peak, by either fork of this marvelous stream, is literally by water, so frequent are the cascades, so numerous the crossings where one is tempted to linger under the canopies of oak and sycamore, or to lose himself in the fragrant chapparal, that richest many-colored robe woven only for the mountains of the Pacific Coast.

The Arroyo Seco anciently flowed through a richly-wooded and populous region before entering the Los Angeles River; and several large Indian rancheros formerly occupied the lands now covered by Pasadena, Garvanza and Lincoln Park. Evidence of this abounds in the frequency with which stone mortars and other implements of Indian life are met with, wherever the virgin soil is opened for cultivation.

The first visit of White men to this territory occurred on the 17th of January, 1770, when Governor Gaspar de Portola, returning southward with the first land expedition sent out from Loreto in search of Monterey, having missed the trail along the coast, entered the San Fernando Valley through the Simi Pass; and moving on, having crossed the Verdugo Hills, mistook the Arroyo Seco, then a full stream, swollen by winter rains, for the Porciuncula, or Los Angeles River. The hungry and travel-worn soldiers found the hospitable natives ready to share their simple stores of dried meat and acorns; and the "capitan," filling his long-stemmed pipe with leaves of the wild tobacco, presented it to the Spanish officer, whose supply of the foreign weed had been long exhausted. Thus the consoling "pespihuta," the Indian name of this plant, became the foundation of a lively traffic between the aborigines and Spaniards, who paid for it in trinkets and beads.

Ere long a well-broken trail through the territory connected the parent missions of San Diego and Monterey, and was known as Camino del Rey, over which all the dispatches were sent northward from Mexico and Guatemala.

According to the earlier records, this Indian "capitan" was baptised at old Mission San Gabriel by the name of Pascual. It is uncertain whether this circumstance gave the locality its name, or the subsequent grant through the influence of Father Sanchez of the San Gabriel Mission of three and a half leagues of its lands to Eulalia Perez, in consideration of her services as nurse and midwife; and also in teaching the Indians the arts of civilized life, an event which occurred on the day of San Pascual. The Indian name of the region was Acurangna, signifying "where streams meet."

After the removal of Mission San Gabriel to its present site, the San Pascual Indians were employed as herders; the "bell mare," fleetest and most beautiful of the padre's stock, ranged in the glades and led the band of wild horses to crop the grasses of the Altadena uplands.

La Sabanellas de San Pascual was the name given by Spanish sailors to the vast fields of poppies seen far out at sea, the same glorious "altar cloth," or bridal veil, which adorns the foothills of North Pasadena with the return of every spring.

It was the wooded slopes of the Arroyo Seco which furnished timber for the dwellings of the "City of Our Lady, the Queen of the Angels," [Los Angeles], and there also the bears were lassoed for the rude sports which entertained her people in primitive times. The removal of the San Gabriel Mission to its present site greatly affected the destiny of the San Pascual Indians.

California, one of their number, was held in great esteem by the padres and the intendants of the mission. During the intendancy of Juan Bandini he was major domo, and he gave Mr. Coronel many interesting reminiscences of primitive conditions, of the discovery of silver in the San Gabriel Mountains, and of penances imposed upon the discoverers. He died about 1840, more than a century old, and with his dark-skinned fellow-laborers had built all the houses in the country and planted all its fields and vineyards. In B. D. Wilson's report to the United States Government in 1852 he said: "Under the missions the wild Indians had become masons, carpenters, plasterers, soap-makers, tanners, shoemakers, blacksmiths, carters and cart-makers, weavers and spinners, saddlers, shepherds, vignerons and vaqueros; in a word, they filled all the occupations known to civilized society; all of which marvelous changes had fallen under the eyes of old California."

A "Mexican grant" carried with it the obligation to occupy and improve the same, and as Eulalia Perez, devoted to her beneficent labors, failed to comply with this requirement, it came to pass that Manual Garfias, a gay and popular soldier, received from his friend, Governor Micheltorena, the title to the Rancho San Pascual. A house of considerable pretension for the time, delightfully placed among the spreading oaks on the banks of the Arroyo Seco, was the scene of much rural hospitality during several years, when the Garfias family suddenly abandoned it for a home in Mexico. Thenceforth it swiftly lapsed to ruin, and Nature had effaced nearly every trace of human occupancy when the California colony, of Indiana, in August 1873, sent out from Indianapolis a committee to select the most favorable spot for a settlement and for the culture of oranges and other fruit.

After a careful survey of many charming locations in Los Angeles, San Diego and San Bernardino Counties, the association purchased the interest of Dr. J. S. Griffin, consisting of about 4,000 acres of the Rancho San Pascual. One of the incorporators, B. S. Eaton, was already residing in the neighborhood, and rendered invaluable service to the new-comers, especially in the management and supervision of the water-works, by which an ample supply of pure mountain water was secured to every homestead.

To Dr. Elliott, the colony is indebted for its pleasing name, Pasadena, an Algonquin word, signifying the "Crown of the Valley." Thomas Croft, at a critical moment in the negotiations for the purchase, lent them the required amount and was for a brief period sole owner of this fair domain.

John H. Baker and D. M. Berry, the Caleb and Joshua" of the California Colony of Indiana, were present on the bright winter morning of January 27, 1874, when the twenty-seven incorporators met for the selection of the individual homesteads. Among them was Calvin Fletcher, a wealthy citizen of Indiana, who was one of the largest stockholders. Many were wealthy, others had brought their careful savings to secure a humble home and summer all the year 'round. Nearly all had a choice spot in view, and it was an anxious moment when, the lovely landscape at their feet and the maps outspread, the bidding was about to begin. Mr. Fletcher moved that the owners of a single share be first invited to make their selections. And such was the diversity of soil, location and topography, that each of the twenty-seven stockholders secured his chosen homestead without interfering with that of his neighbor.

Two years later C. F. Clarkson of Iowa, at the second anniversary dinner, paid a glowing tribute to the wisdom and foresight which had selected so rare a location, laid so broad a foundation of social prosperity, and predicted a future which the most sanguine of Pasadenians had not conceived of. They had not overestimated their obvious advantages. The elevation of nearly 1,000 feet above the City of Los Angeles, was a sufficient guaranty of exemption from malaria; soil, drainage and the apparently inexhaustible water supply were most satisfactory. The Arroyo Seco flowed in perpetual benediction through wooded glens and sylvan openings; game and fish were abundant; the mountain barriers shut out the north winds; the blue Pacific, with Catalina Island in the distance, enchanted the eye and tempered the midday heats. Los Angeles was ten miles distant, and three miles to the east was the Southern Pacific railroad station of San Gabriel Mission. The great, busy commercial world was near, yet not too near for the purposes of an ideal life in nature's most delightful seclusion.

The original purchase also included mountain lands upon the slopes of the Sierra Madre, arroyo lots filled with valuable timber, a magnificent grove of liveoaks on the road to Los Angeles, covering 400 acres, making a natural park exactly suited for picnics, camp-meetings and holiday enjoyments of every kind.

But Pasadena was even more favored in the practical encouragement of the great ranches which surround it. Santa Anita and Sunny Slope, the estates of Messrs. Baldwin and Rose, had already become famous for the variety of their products. An orange grove of 16,000 bearing trees; the rosy snow of blossoming almonds; the rich verdure of alfalfa fields, in which fine cattle were feeding; the long avenues of eucalyptus trees, leading to stables with the perfect horse, from colthood to the fullest perfection of equine power, were but a small part of the attractions of the Santa Anita ranch. The superb orange orchards of the Duarte were near, and Riverside was making immense strides for pre-eminence in semi-tropic cultures.

The first Pasadena marriage was that of Charles H. Watts to Millie, a daughter of Major Erie Locke, one of the pioneers. The bachelor quarters of Watts had served also as a place of worship for the Presbyterians, in 1874; the advent of Harvey Watts, the first man-child born in the colony, made it necessary to secure a more suitable place of worship, and the first church edifice was erected in 1875-76, at a cost of $2,300. To this a parsonage was soon added, costing $1,800 more. The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Pasadena, organized in this church, has been among the most useful institutions. The first Methodist society was organized in 1875 and their first chapel dedicated January 7, 1887.

Both these denominations have long since outgrown their primitive temples; indeed, the story of the development of schools and churches reads like a fable to those who have not watched Pasadena's growth. While the eleven congregations of Pasadena are all provided with commodious places of worship, those of the Universalists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists and Methodists would be objects of interest in any city of the East. With their neatly-kept lawns, occupying commanding sites, they seem to preserve the traditional consecration of the land, which was made at San Gabriel in the last century. From the simple meeting-house of the Friends to the spacious Tabernacle, built as an annex to the Methodist church, every denomination is sustained by large congregations, and the churches and church property represent an investment of more than $400,000.

about twenty-five miles south of Catalina Island. Charter parties from Long Beach go to these waters for one- or two-day trips and return with loaded boats and stories which rival the wildest fish stories ever told. The fish in these waters are particularly large and gamy, and the fishermen who invade these waters are well rewarded by large hauls and great sport. San Clemente is unsettled except for a few sheep herders' huts, and one is at liberty to camp there if he so desires.

NATIVE SONS' DOINGS.

Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. had a largely attended meeting July 7, when officers, with Edgar C. Crowell as president, were installed by D.D.G.P. Albert Cron. Visitors were present from Los Angeles, San Pedro and Santa Ana. One candidate was initiated and several applications were filed.

Speakers of the evening included, among others, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, President William Reuter of Sepulveda Parlor, President Andrew Stodel of Los Angeles Parlor, John Cadogan (Sacramento 3), A. E. Selvidge (Santa Ana 265), D.D.G.P. Cron, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer. Praising him for the service rendered the Parlor as an officer, Secretary S. T. Luce, on behalf of Long Beach, presented an emblematic jewel to Senior Past President Elmer L. Hann. Refreshments were served at the meeting's close.

President Crowell and his "gang of youngsters" visited Sepulveda at San Pedro July 13. In fact, the Parlor is always well represented at all Natives' functions. It has a committee composed of Harold Oliver, Edgar Crowell and Dr. S. T. Luce working out a plan to raise funds for the entertainment fund of the 1927 Grand Parlor, which meets at San Pedro.

Edgar McFadyen, a member of 239, his wife and daughter, Miss Marie, both affiliated with Long Beach No. 154 N.D.G.W., enjoyed an extended trip through the northern part of the state and into Oregon during July.

N.D. THIMBLE CLUB PICNICS.

The California Thimble Club of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. had its annual picnic at Bixby Park the evening of July 15, and a large number of the members and their families and friends were in attendance with well-filled baskets of eatables. President Julia Arborn was kept busy pouring coffee. The evening was spent with music and games, and jolly groups discussed the olden days.

A welcome visitor was S. C. Cox, 84 years old and a resident of California for seventy-eight years. He is a charter member of the San Bernardino County Pioneer Society, and in the course of his reminiscences said that his father, Anslee Jackie Cox, built the first White man's house at Mud Springs, now known as El Dorado Springs, in 1850.

Bertha Hitt, past president of Long Beach Parlor, has been appointed district deputy grand president for the Parlors in Los Angeles and Orange Counties. With a corps of assistants from 154 she has been busy during July installing the Parlors' officers.

WILMINGTON

Customs duties collected by the Federal Government in the fiscal year just closed amounted to about five million dollars, or better than a fifty percent return on the entire amount spent in federal improvements.

The first railroad between Los Angeles and Wilmington was built in 1868. This line was later acquired by the Southern Pacific Company, and in 1882 was extended to San Pedro. Some time later the line now known as the Union Pacific was built from Los Angeles via Long Beach to East San Pedro. Later came the Pacific Electric and just recently the Santa Fe, so we now have four railroads handling over 100,000 cars of freight annually to and from the port. Only a few years ago it was necessary to handle freight from a vessel anchored in the open sea to a point where the community of Wilmington now stands. Many people can well remember the days when even small ships could not enter what is now a harbor where the largest vessels can be accommodated.

This is truly a remarkable development, and one which Wilmington citizens may justly be proud of.

REMARKABLE TREE SURGERY TO SAVE WORLD'S LARGEST PEPPERWOOD.

What is said to be one of the most remarkable examples of tree surgery in history, was recently performed near Cloverdale, Sonoma County, by A. G. Haskell of Saint Helena, Napa County. The tree, a giant pepperwood "laurel" on the ranch of Mrs. M. F. Sink, is eleven and one-half feet in diameter at the base, and Haskell claims that it is the largest specimen of its kind in the world.

In order that the decayed cavity of the tree might be filled much of the trunk had to be dug out, and the excavation extended even into the roots; 250 pounds of cement was used to fill the cavity. The trunk of the tree was then wired together and the cement was reinforced as laid. Dead branches were cut away and the stubs were jointed and capped with iron.

In 1916 Haskell was employed by the late Annie E. K. Bidwell to stop the ravages of decay in the famous Hooker Oak at Chico, Butte County, and, at the request of the Butte County Pioneer Association, he also operated upon the Lewis oak near Gridley, Butte County.

TO PROTECT WOOD FROM TERMITES.

Some time ago the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agricultural warned builders that tar and tar paper, used in waterproofing wood in flooring, would not prevent attack by our native subterranean termites or "white ants."

These insects penetrate such moisture-proofing materials and carry to the wood the moisture necessary for their life. Insulation of the wood from the ground by the use of concrete or by impregnating wood with coal-tar creosote is necessary to protect it from termites.

A BIT O' FARMING

CONGRESS FAILED TO HELP FARMERS

CONGRESS ADJOURNED WITHOUT taking action on the much-debated plans for the relief of farmers. Apparently, the majority of the congressmen are of the opinion that prosperity cannot be legislated to the agricultural industry, but there are those who are just as certain that the Haugen plan, a modification of protective tariff, will bring profits for the farmer just as the tariff wall has protected the manufacturing industries. Whatever the arguments and their strength, it is quite likely the next session of Congress will pass some bill designed to placate the rural interests. Two reasons point to this action. In the first place, a national election will be in sight, and the votes of the Middle Western farming states in particular, and other farming districts in general, must not be overlooked. And in the second place, the Middle West never has gone after legislation with its united force without accomplishing the major part of its purpose.

Just how far the relief measure will go, remains to be seen. Grain-growers, it is intended, are to be given first aid. This will reach California to no small extent, but there also are other crops here that should be included in the plan, if a workable one is developed. Notable among these is raisins. More of this crop, by far, is produced than can be used at home; and if an artificial stimulus is to be given agriculture, all those crops which might profit must be included. The raisin-growers are solving their own problems without legislative aid, however, in developing of markets, marketing methods and by cutting costs of productions. Their example might be one the producers of other crops which are crying for help might well follow.

DREAD SCOURGE GONE.

The foot and mouth disease, the dread scourge of cloven-footed animals that caused such enormous losses in California two years ago, finally has passed into history. The last quarantine on California territory, in the Sierra Mountains where the deer were stricken, has been released, just one year after the last appearance of the disease. Almost at the same time, Great Britain raised its quarantine against hay and straw from California, the final barrier to the exporting of products from this state. State and federal officials, who, by their prompt and vigorous action, stamped out the disease, may be thanked for the present situation, which marks the first time where the disease has gained a foothold among wild animals and been successfully exterminated.

MATURITY FOR SHIPPING FRUIT.

Placer County is continuing its work this year in determining the proper maturity for fruit shipped fresh to Eastern markets. The factors are many. If the fruit is picked green, it gets to market in good shape, but usually is unfit for consumption and makes for a trade resistance. If it is too ripe, it breaks down after being taken from the refrigerator cars, and is spoiled before it can reach the consumer.

While it appears the determination of proper maturity might be easy, it must be remembered that a refrigerator car's temperature varies many degrees. If fruit picked at what might be termed an average state of maturity is packed in a car, that near the ice bunkers at the ends and at the bottom of the car will show little change. But working upwards and towards the center of the car, the temperatures increase, and the fruit will continue to ripen and even to spoil.

The Placer County Fruit-growers' Convention has a committee headed by J. A. Teagarden, which is working on this problem, aided by Dr. J. R. Magness of the United States Department of Agriculture, F. W. Allen of the Department of Pomology of the University of California and W. F. Allewalt, in charge of standardization in the State Department of Agriculture.

IRRIGATION AND DRAINAGE.

The increase in the drainage of California irrigated lands is one of the most pleasing indications of a permanent agriculture the state has shown. Irrigation, without drainage, means a temporary farming industry. That truth is as old as irrigation, testimony being borne by the ruined lands in Egypt, barren for centuries as a result of too much water. In California, it is evidenced by the hundreds of acres of alkali land in the San Joaquin Valley, the encroachment of alkali with the rising water tables in the Southern California counties, and less notably in other parts of the state.

Without drainage, the water tables rise. It comes near the surface, and the roots are forced to feed in a shallow layer of soil. Alkali inevitably is brought up with the water and soon the land is waste. Experiments now under way near the Riverside Citrus Experiment Station of the University of California indicate the problem of reclaiming such land is nearing solution. But it is a far more costly process than the prevention would have been through drainage. Only when irrigation and drainage are considered together, and established together, can agriculture have a hope of permanent success.

CULTIVATION PROTECTION.

Watch out for damage to the trees in cultivation. The automobile furnishes the latest means of protection against such injury. Chain traces, singletree ends and hooks and harrows are the principal sources of such trouble. By slipping a piece of an old inner tube from an automobile tire over the end of the singletree when the trace is hooked, tying it at one end and then stretching it a little and tying at the other end, will protect the trees against chains and hooks. A piece of an old casing from a wornout tire, tied to the harrow, solves that problem. Other machinery may be similarly equipped to protect the trees, and cultivation will be made easier and replantings obviated.

NO LABOR SHORTAGE.

A veritable army of fruit-pickers are engaged in aiding in the harvest in the San Joaquin Valley. Three hundred soldiers, recently discharged from the army, found at least temporary employment in the valley, according to E. R. Simmermacher, secretary of the agricultural labor bureau of that district. While the fruit harvest this year is large, there appears no serious labor shortage, and indications are that it will be handled in good shape. Incidentally, price predictions are quite favorable, and the horticultural industry of the state appears to be entering the last stage of a profitable season.

SUBSOILING BRINGS RESULTS.

Subsoiling operations may be profitably utilized at about this season of the year. Under the surface of the soil, a running together of the particles brings about plow-sole, irrigation-pan and hardpan. The first two are easily handled by light subsoiling implements. They are near the surface, not deep or hard to break, although they are almost impervious to water. Hardpan, where it occurs, may range in depth from a few inches to several feet below the surface. Its thickness varies, too; and heavy machinery pulled by big tractors may be necessary to break it.

But if subsoilers are used between the tree rows, and water then applied in the subsoil ditches, an improvement in the condition of the orchard is sure to result, an improvement that will more than pay for the cost of the operation. Orange groves have been rejuvenated, vineyards brought to early and profitable bearings, and all kinds of trees improved and stimulated by this process. It brings best results when the soil is perfectly dry, so that the ground is shattered and not packed by the subsoiler.

NEW PROCESS TO REPLACE PAPER.

Wrapping of fruit in paper, a process that has been considered indispensable in the shipping of fresh fruit, may be replaced by a new process, just announced. A liquid paper, pure cellulose, is used. The fruit is dipped in the solution, which is claimed to be non-adhesive and transparent, hermetically sealing and protecting it. The discovery holds much promise, but lacks one essential, the cushioning protection against bruises that paper affords.

FARMERS TO LOOK INTO TAXES.

The California Farm Bureau Federation plans an exhaustive research into the taxation situation in the state. Farmers have long claimed they are bearing an unjust share of the tax burden, and they plan to make this so apparent that relief will be furnished. It has been suggested the Indiana plan be followed, whereby a budget is published, covering all governmental expenditures, with an opportunity for taxpayers to be heard before it becomes effective. The farmers' organization plans the establishment of a department, with a taxation expert at its head, to go thoroughly into the details of the situation.

FARMERS ATTEND SCHOOL.

Ten thousand farmers in California have been attending evening classes in agriculture throughout the state, according to Ralph N. Brown, a graduate student at the University of California, who has been studying the subject. In twenty different high-schools 273 classes were held, with an average attendance of 33.3. The subjects considered included dairying, orchard practice, poultry production, fruit packing, home beautification, farm mechanics, soils and irrigation.

BIG REVENUE.

Dairymen of Kings County last year received four and a third millions of dollars for the products of their herds, according to figures compiled by E. E. Kaufman, agricultural statistician. Butterfat was the principal item, $3,765,767 being received for 8,343,871 pounds sold. These figures show an increase of more than half a million dollars over the preceding year, due in no small part to better producing animals brought about through testing and culling.

CONDITIONS IMPROVING.

Agricultural conditions the nation over are improving, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. In a recent investigation covering 15,330 farms in all parts of the country, a net financial return of $1,297 per farm was reported, as against $1,220 in the preceding year, $1,020 in 1923 and $917 in 1922. The outlook for the present year appears to be continuing the improvement.

FARMER NEEDS VACATION.

Don't forget the vacation. The farmer is entitled to it as much as the man in any other business or industry. Oftentimes it is not possible, owing to the harvest season, to take vacations from the farm when others do, but as soon as the harvest is cleaned up, the farm family should have its rest and recreation. The money is well spent, and the theory just as sound for farms as for cities.

DAIRY SHOW.

R. E. Jones, well known to the agricultural industry of the state and particularly to dairymen, has accepted the management of the Pacific Slope Dairy Show, which he made such a success of two years ago. The show will be held again in Oakland, and the dairy cattle department will be a feature. Jones has opened offices in Oakland.

AUSPICIOUS FRUIT SEASON.

Never before, since the fruit industry of California attained anything like its present size, has the season opened so auspiciously, in a market way. R. N. Wilson, director of the agricultural department of the California Development Association, says carry-overs of dried fruits have been entirely cleared up, and canned packs are in the same situation with the single exception of pears.

N.S.G.W., N.D.G.W. GRAND PRESIDENTS HONORED AT STOCKTON FUNCTION.

STOCKTON—NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE Daughters in large numbers from all parts of San Joaquin County attended the reception and dance sponsored July 17 by all the Subordinate Parlors of both Orders in the county in honor of Hilliard E. Welch of Lodi, Grand President N.S.G.W., and Mrs. Pearl Lamb of Tracy, Grand President N.D.G.W.

Hubert R. McNoble, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., introduced the honor guests, and also Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer of San Diego. Grand President Welch said, in response following an ovation, that both Orders were formed to preserve the history of California and to perpetuate the memory of the Pioneers who laid the foundation for the now-greatest state in the union. Grand President Lamb concluded her response with: "If the Native Daughters will give me the support that I know the Native Sons will give Welch, I will be very thankful."

The grand march was led by Grand President Lamb and her husband, James Lamb, followed by Grand President and Mrs. Welch, Deputy Grand President and Mrs. Mayrhofer, and 150 couples. The joint dance committee was headed by Wesley A. Strong (Stockton 7) and the joint reception committee by Past Grand President McNoble. The affair, held in the Civic Memorial Auditorium, was a great success, and indicated the popularity of the two Natives of San Joaquin County in whose honor it was given.

SUPERINTENDENT SCHOOLS

PESIDENT PLYMOUTH PARLOR NO. 48 N.S.G.W.

PRIMARY ELECTION

Tuesday, August 31, 1926.

Proceedings Distributed.

During July, Grand Secretary John T. Regan sent copies of the Proceedings of the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor, held at Santa Rosa in May, to Subordinate Parlors and members of the Grand Parlor. An excellent likeness of Judge Fletcher A. Cutler who, as Grand President, presided at the Santa Rosa session, adorns the book.

Institution Anniversary Observed.

San Rafael—Following the installation July 12 of its officers by D.D.G.P. Lester R. Knutte, Mount Tamalpais 64 observed its forty-first institution anniversary with an elaborate banquet. Frank Happersberger is the new president.

Charles Redding, Marin County treasurer, presided at the festal board and Pete Sunberg favored with several vocal selections. Among the speakers were Charter Member George Agnew, who gave a graphic account of Parlor doings forty years ago; Grand Trustee Alfred H. M. Knew, who predicted a successful Grand Parlor year; County Tax Collector John Saunders; Sam O'Connor; Lewis Hughes, and Jack Clemmer who, in conclusion, admonished his hearers: "Be loyal to your officers, help them out by attending more regularly, and don't be afraid to argue."

Protests Proposed Road.

San Bernardino—The birthday celebration of Arrowhead 110 at its Crestline clubhouse July 4 was largely attended. A barbecue was served and dancing was enjoyed. Grand Trustee and Mrs. John T. Newell were among those present. A surprise featured the Parlor's July 7 meeting, Mrs. Charles McElvaine appearing, along with Mms. J. S. Mee, W. E. Keir, Ed. Poppett, W. L. Stewart and R. W. Brazelton. They brought along a big birthday cake and ice-cream, which were served in honor of the natal day of Charles E. McElvaine, a 110-er.

Officers of Arrowhead were installed July 14 by D.D.G.P. "Sid" Mee, Benjamin Harrison becoming president. The Parlor has sent to the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors a protest against the construction of a proposed new highway into the San Bernardino Mountains. If the road is built the Parlor's extensive holdings at Crestline will be cut off from the main route of travel.

GOOD IDEA—CO-OPERATE!

Grand President Hilliard E. Welch is endeavoring to work out a plan that will center responsibilities for the several Subordinate Parlors' activities in those who have been elected to Grand Parlor office from various sections. With that end in view, the Board of Grand Officers assigned the various visiting districts to the grand officers residing in or nearest to those districts.

Outlining his plans, Grand President Welch has had meetings, with men prominent in the Order's affairs, in the Sacramento Valley—at Marysville May 28—in San Francisco City June 18, and in the San Joaquin Valley—at Modesto July 18. In each instance those co-workers assumed the responsibility of producing results in there respective sections.

In due time, Grand President Welch will have conferences in the coast regions, the mountain regions, and the south. And it is assured that he will have the hearty support of those he confers with in those sections.

Progress is a simple matter of co-operation. Give Grand President Welch that co-operation which he seeks in the Order's behalf, and the Order cannot fail to progress in every section of California.—C.M.H.

Pilgrimage To Historic Spot.

Santa Rosa—Many members of Santa Rosa 28 and Sebastopal 143 made a pilgrimage to historic Fort Ross over the Independence Day holiday. They camped near the old structure, had a picnic and viewed the ruins of the former Russian settlement, abandoned in 1812.

For the second time in 114 years services were held in the Russian church at the fort and were largely attended. A choir, rendering the old chants, added to the effectiveness of the services, which were presided over by Father Vladimar Sakovich of the San Francisco cathedral and Rev. William Seymour Short of the Santa Rosa Episcopal church.

Notable Addition to Pioneer Gallery.

Colusa—Superior Judge Ernest Weyand, affiliated with Colusa 69, has received a notable addition to the collection of Colusa County Pioneers' pictures that he has for some time been engaged in making.

The new addition came from Frank S. Boggs of Stockton, who sent a picture of his deceased father, John Boggs, a native of Missouri who crossed the plains to California in 1849 and settled in Colusa County in 1854. Until his death in 1899 he was active in state affairs.

Officers Jointly Installed.

Selma—Officers of Fresno 25 and Selma 107 were jointly installed July 7 by D.D.G.P. George Haines, F. M. Lane and T. H. Thompson becoming the respective presidents. A "feed" followed the ceremonies and there were addresses by G. P. Johnson, charter member California 1, President Lane, Senior Past President H. J. Wildgrube, Hubert McDowell and others.

Selma Parlor has voted to participate in the elaborate Armistice Day program being arranged for this city by the local American Legion.

Retiring President Voted Thanks.

Ventura—A good crowd were present at the June 25 meeting of Cabrillo 114, when officers were elected, David Bennett being chosen for president. A rising vote of thanks was tendered Adolfo Camarillo, retiring president, for his activity in the Parlor's behalf. The new corps of officers includes some of the best-known and most-popular men in Ventura County and the progress of 114 is therefore assured.

Membership Standing Largest Parlors.

San Francisco—Grand Secretary John T. Regan reports the standing of the Subordinate Parlors having a membership of over 400 July

San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W. wishes herewith to thank, through its Official Publication indirectly, all the Native Daughters and collectively the Subordinate Parlors of California, for the support and kind consideration given to its candidate, Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, for Grand Vice-president, at Sacramento, during the last Grand Parlor.

San Diego Parlor feels justly proud of the very efficient manner Sister Heilbron conducted herself as the Grand Marshal during the Grand Parlor Session at Sacramento, and therefore, desires at this time that every Native Daughter throughout California should know that Sister Heilbron will again be a candidate for Grand Vice-president at the 1927 Grand Parlor Session.

San Diego Parlor is fully aware that Sister Heilbron possesses all the qualifications so needed for a Grand Vice-president, and this fact is well known throughout California. We therefore again thank every Native Daughter for loyalty in the past, and ask for due justice and honorable consideration in Sister Heilbron's behalf for 1927.

SAN DIEGO PARLOR No. 208 N.D.G.W.
By VIRGINIA BURKE, President.
EDITH DE VOE, Secretary.

Past Grand Banquetted.

This belated bit of news associated with the last Grand Parlor came to The Grizzly Bear after the July issue, with the Sacramento proceedings, had gone to press:

The banquet given Past Grand President Emma W. Humphrey at the Placerville Grand Parlor in 1925 by the Parlors instituted during her term proved to be such an enjoyable affair that it was decided to make it an annual custom. Castro 178 was chosen as the first hostess and Gabrielle Sandersfeld, by unanimous consent, was given the chairmanship.

In the empire-room of the Sacramento Hotel were gathered the delegates from Snow Peak 176, Fruitvale 177, Castro 178, San Juan Bautista 179, Ano Nuevo 180, El Carmelo 181, Laura Loma 182, Twin Peaks 185 and El Dorado 186 to receive their honored guest, Past Grand President Humphrey, and two invited guests, Grand President Sue J. Irwin and Grand President Pearl Lamb. The table was elaborately decorated with a wealth of beautiful flowers and at each place was a souvenir—a little jar of artificial flowers which, upon opening, was found to contain a prize. Beautiful corsage bouquets were at the places of the guest of honor and the invited guests.

Mrs. Sandersfeld, on behalf of the Parlors represented, presented Mrs. Humphrey with a beautiful cakeplate. The Past Grand responded in an eloquent address reminiscent with tender memories and overflowing with good wishes for the success and prosperity of the Parlors. Addresses were made by Grand President Irwin and Grand Vice-president Lamb, after which the assembled guests reluctantly left the festal board to attend the closing session of the Grand Parlor.

History Club Active.

Daly City—El Carmelo 181 is making elaborate preparation for a monster whist party to be given at the auditorium August 11; Miss Laura Figone is in charge. The Parlor drill-team, with Fred Collins in charge, trains weekly, in preparation for Admission Day. With D.D.G.P. Rena Mathias in charge, the Parlor's newly-elected officers will be installed August 4.

El Carmelo has a California History Club, and June 29 many of them attended the California Historical Society luncheon in San Francisco and heard Father Augustine tell about Santa Barbara Mission. The club is anxious to hear, from the life of the oldtimers themselves, reminiscences of early days in San Mateo County, for, following the vacation season, the club will study the county's history. The Parlor has "some" publicity agent in the person of Grand Trustee Josephine Johnson, and in the report of Grand President Sue J. Irwin at the Sacramento Grand Parlor her efforts were given deserved commendation.

Lawns Invaded.

Fresno—Fresno 187 and Fresno 25 N.S.G.W. sponsored the Independence Day street-dance, July 5. A city block was roped off and waxed, and over 5,000 were in attendance; needless to say, all had a good time. Officers of 187 were installed July 16 by D.D.G.P. Millie Benton, Maude Crosby becoming president. Refreshments were served and there were several talks after the ceremonies.

Owing to the warm weather, Fresno Native Daughters have taken to the lawns for their public card-parties. One was helu at the home of Mrs. M. R. Vierra, and the first of a series of six parties was given July 30 at the home of Mrs. C. H. Merrill. Prizes are to be given after each game, and at the conclusion of the series a grand prize will be awarded the holder of high score for the series.

Past Grand's Daughter Weds.

Ferndale—Miss Claire Monroe, daughter of Past Grand President Anna L. Monroe, was wedded July 5 at Nairobi, British East Africa, to Arthur Francis Martyn, who holds a government position there. Later they will make their home at Cornwall, England.

The couple first met three years ago in England, while Miss Monroe was on a world tour. Early in February this year she left Ferndale for another around-the-world trip and met Martyn at Nairobi, where the wedding took place.

Grand Marshal Enthuses.

San Jose—Josephine C. Barboni, elected Grand Marshal at the Sacramento Grand Parlor, was given a royal welcome by her home-Parlor, Vendome 100, July 1. At the regular meeting's conclusion, while Mrs. Gertrude Mathers sang "We Love You Truly. Twenty members, wearing their diamond jubilee costumes of white satin and gold, entered the hall carrying arm bouquets, went through a catchy drill and finally formed a perfect Ace of Clubs. This tribute to the grand matriarch was arranged by Mrs. Hazel Heath. An adjournment was made to the dining hall, where the fun and celebration were held. The decorations were in the national colors. Baskets of red, white and blue flowers, along with dainty napkins with the American shield, were on the tables. Everybody was provided with a cap of the colors, the effect being extremely striking. Delicious refreshments were served and then followed the community singing, accompanied by lusty cheers for everybody and everything. Enthusiasm was at top-notch.

Led by Grand Marshal Barboni, a large delegation of Vendomites attended the first social function of the recently-instituted Betsy Ross 238 at Centerville, Alameda County, July 17. Officers of No. 100 were installed July 22 by D.D.G.P. Harriett McPheters, Huldah Buehren becoming president.

State Flag Presented School.

Hollister—In the spacious auditorium of the Monterey-street grammar-school a class of forty-five students were recently granted their diplomas of graduation. As the closing number of a highly entertaining program of addresses and musical numbers, Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs presented to the school, on behalf of the membership of Copa de Oro 105 and Fremont 44 N.S.G.W., a handsome silk flag. In her address, Past Grand President Briggs related the history of the flag and paid an eloquent tribute to the Pioneers of California. The flag was graciously accepted for the school by Neva Smith, a member of the grauduating class.

At the June 24 meeting of Copa de Oro Parlor a charming kitchen shower was tendered Past President Dorothy Johnson, whose marriage to Lyle J. Hoffman of San Francisco was solemnized a few days later. The gifts to the bride were presented in a daintily decorated bassinet. Appetizing refreshments were served at prettily decorated tables, carrying out the artistic color scheme.

Great Occasion.

Jackson—The county-seat of Amador County had a wonderful July Fourth celebration, thanks to the newly-organized band of Ursula 1, which planned the occasion, and which was eulogized by Superior Judge C. P. Vicini in his address of welcome at the literary exercises.

Mrs. Lilly O. Reichling-Dyer, Founder of the Order, told how the "mother"-Parlor, Ursula, was organized, forty years ago. Dr. Louise C. Heilbron was also a speaker, and Ralph McGee gave the day's oration.

The Independence Day parade was a great attraction, having many beautiful floats. That of Ursula, in white, decorated with poppies, received second prize.

Reception for Grand President.

Tracy—The home-Parlor of Grand President Pearl Lamb gave a reception in her honor July 19. Many visitors were present, and Mrs. Lamb was presented with a suitcase for use on her itinerary throughout the state during her term as head of the Order. Delicious refreshments were served. Wishes for a successful year for the Order under her administration were showered upon Grand President Lamb.

Initiates Six.

Sutter Creek—Six candidates were initiated July 9 by Amapola 80, the ritual being impressively exemplified by the officers, headed by President Rose Castle. There wsa a large attendance. Following the ceremonies a delicious luncheon was served.

Joint Installation.

Alameda—Officers of Encinal 156, Alameda 47 N.S.G.W. and Halcyon 157 N.S.G.W. were jointly installed July 14 by D.D.G.P. Irene Rose and D.D.G.P. James P. Conin, the presidents, respectively, being M. Cronin, Fred Schulte, C. Chase.

A program consisting of several solos and addresses by Past Grand President Harry G. Williams and D.D.G.P. Cronin was presented after the ceremonies. Following the program refreshments were served and then dancing was in order.

Past Presidents Organize.

Sacramento—Past Presidents' Association No 4, organized by Elizabeth S. Smith, state organizer, assisted by Grand Trustee Lillie M. Tilden, was instituted June 25. Josephine Schmidt, Emily Clifford, Elizabeth Smith and Emily Lawson of the General Assembly conducted the institu-

GOOD PRICE FOR APRICOT PITS.

Apricot pits are becoming a source of revenue to the orchardists who cut and dry this fruit. The principal market is in Germany, where the pits are used in the production of a favorite liquor. Lodi farmers received $35.50 a ton for their pits this year. The California Prune and Apricot Association has for several years saved this by-product a source of considerable revenue.

DIMINISHING TAHOE INDIANS NOT INTERESTED RACE'S PAST SPLENDOR.

Folk lore and tribal customs of the Washo Indians, a tribe inhabiting western Nevada and eastern California in the vicinity of Lake Tahoe, as they existed before the coming of the White men, is the subject of a publication now in process of preparation by the department of anthropology of the University of California. Professor R. H. Lowie made a research trip among the various scattered families of the tribe, supplementing material gathered by Grace M. Dangberg, former graduate student and resident of the Tahoe district.

Like most tribes the Washo is diminishing in numbers steadily and those who are still living are more interested in making a living as housekeepers, fishermen, guides or hunters, than they are in the past splendor of their race. It is in an effort to collect data from the old men of the tribe before they die, and the culture of the tribe is forgotten, that the present work is being carried out.

ADJUST CLUTCH PROPERLY.

Should the clutch on a car slip, the first thing to do is to see that the clutch pedal is not pressing against the floor-board. There should be at least one inch of play between the pedal and the floor-board when the clutch is engaged.

ABEL STEARNS

of wood which fall before the despoilers, when I remember the men, Chara and Majors, by the muscle of whom the sturdy pines and cedars of Mount San Bernardino were, for the material to be used for the woodwork of this house, converted into boards, joists and beams by means of a pitsaw, and those rude ox carts upon which this wood was brought hither, drawn by weary oxen, yoked as were those which in ancient time hauled to the primeval shipyard the material with which Noah built the first passenger and immigrant vessel of which history furnishes any record. Nor can I, without heartfelt sorrow, look upon the now roofless walls of that dining-room, crumbling, tottering and falling, within which was spread the well-furnished table, ever made joyful by the smiles of the mistress of the house, Dona Arcadia. Colonel Baker and wife, Dona Arcadia, have taken rooms at Pico house. The site of the Stearns mansion will be covered by a fine three-story brick building, to cost about $125,000."

Besides the pieces of property in the City of Los Angeles already mentioned Stearns owned numerous other parcels in and around Los Angeles at one time or another.

STEARNS' LAST DAYS.

In 1853 Don Abel Stearns was again alcalde at Los Angeles, and in 1861 was a member of the State Assembly. Constantly on the watch for the interests of Los Angeles, in the latter year he learned of the willingness of Eastern capitalists to build a railroad from Los Angeles to San Pedro within eighteen months, providing the county would subscribe $100,000 toward the undertaking and Los Angeles City $50,000. With the aid of Murray Morrison, also an assemblyman, he succeeded in getting the franchise passed. It was not until 1863 that any life was given to the movement.

Abel Stearns was devoted to the interests of California, and particularly to Los Angeles. At one time he was supervisor and councilman. There was never a task too small for him to perform, if it was for the welfare of the people. In 1871 R. W. Widney interested him in the founding of a university in Southern California. Widney and Don Abel had nearly matured a plan to put the Laguna rancho, embracing some 11,000 acres adjoining Los Angeles City, into a building and endowment fund for a university, when Stearns was called to San Francisco, where he was taken sick and died, August 23, 1871, at the Grand hotel in that city. The funeral took place from Saint Mary's cathedral August 27, and the remains were placed in a vault. Late in October the body was brought to Los Angeles for final interment.

The death of Don Abel Stearns marked the passing of one of the most influential men in California history. A shrewd man of business, somewhat tricky in the petty transactions of early years, but honorable in the larger operations of later years. A warm politician, who hated Mexico and the Mexicans, but liked the Californians. He was always interested in the development of California, and worked for its interest. He was a man of quick temper and strong prejudices, but hospitable, and not pecunious. He was a good friend and a kind husband.

CAPTAIN WEBER
THE HERO OF STOCKTON

(FORMER GRAND TRUSTEE N. D. G. W.)

THE YEAR WAS 1846 AND THE LOC-luma Indians, whose huts were charred and smoldering dully, had feasted several times on the White man's horses, and there were traces of many cattle, now none were within eyesight. Such was the place of the future site of Stockton, in the year 1846.

Captain Charles David Maria Weber was born February 16, 1814, in Homburg, Department of Mont Tonnere, during the reign of Emperor Napoleon I. His parents were of German lineage. He was a baker and miller of the Pueblo San Jose, and the recipient of a huge land grant from the Mexican governor, Micheltorena, of California, and came forth to found the city that became Stockton and the county that is San Joaquin.

Upon hearing of trouble and fighting between the Loc-luma Indians and other settlers Captain Weber was, indeed, distressed, but when word reached him of the death of Thomas Lindsay, his vaquero-in-chief, he raged and swore in true pioneer fashion. "By all that's holy, I'll leave San Jose and settle that grant myself!" said he to his partner, William Gulnac.

Captain Weber, April 3, 1846, bought the grant from W. Gulnac. The latter, in fact, had acted merely as Weber's dummy in getting the land, for he was a Mexican citizen while Captain Weber was a naturalized American. The ranch itself was huge—48,747 acres, nearly seventy-seven full sections, cut out of the heart of Central California. The only settlement upon it was that at French Camp, a tiny trading post on a dangerous frontier. The grant was called Campo de Los Francesos.

By Mexican law, the rancho must be settled within a year, or be abandoned. Micheltorena would hold Weber to strict account, for the Mexican war was on and Americans were unpopular. The slaying of Thomas Lindsay had forced the captain's hand.

Captain Weber later told that his admiration for the Campo de Los Francesos had been a case of love at first sight. He had been in California hardly a week when he rode across the place, studied its rare combination of rich land and access by water to San Francisco Bay, and determined to possess it. "I loved the spot," he once said, "because of the huge oak trees. It looked like an old-time English estate, but was finer. And the men at French Camp told me it was a good country for stock."

A great and strange man was Captain Weber, a bold pioneer in his early days and a tragic figure at the last. In the expedition which came west from Saint Louis bringing him were General John Bidwell of Chico, Judge Josiah Belden of Santa Clara, Charles Hopper of Napa, and others of historic names. Mrs. Benjamin Kelsey, the only woman, was said to be the first woman to cross the plains to California. Her husband was killed by Indians enroute.

Late in '42 they reached the rancho of Dr. John Marsh, "pioneer of pioneers," on the eastern slopes of Mount Diablo. Captain Weber had letters to Captain Sutter at Sutter's Fort, and a few days later he left on horseback to present them. Swimming and splashing his horse over tule marshes, he reached French Camp and talked with the trappers and traders. The beauty of the vast empty valley left an impression that never died.

Reaching Sutter's Fort, Weber was greeted kindly by Captain Sutter. There he went to work, and planted the first tobacco ever raised in California. He was a genius for making things grow; all planning, preparing. From Sacramento he went to San Jose, starting a flour-mill and bakery that supplied great quantities of bread to American troops during the Mexican war.

A unique figure in the annals of California was Captain Weber,—hot headed, violent, domineering, far-seeing, generous, tender-hearted and kind. He dreamed a city, and brought it forth. No town in the world is, or could be, more wholly a one-man job than Stockton. He had his dream of a city and clung to it obstinately. His whole life was a battle for the reality of that dream. The gold rush abruptly descended and knocked his vision sadly askew.

He is remembered today as he strode through Stockton's streets in his later life—a man aloof and friendless, heavy-set, bearded, and with military stride that betrayed his early training in the military schools of Germany. When accosted he would stare nervously into the air beyond the speaker's head, replying briefly, if at all. He had a passion against trespassers, and if he came upon small boys swimming in his sloughs he would chase them, and if he caught them he caned them soundly.

There is another side which the people better appreciate today. Captain Weber saved Stockton's priceless waterfront from railroad interests and kept it to be the public's perpetually. He planted trees along the thoroughfares, caring for them with his own hand. He gave land prodigally for streets, churches and schools. His benefactions to poor settlers, who were good men but lacked money to pay, were astonishing; he gave them houses, land and money for crops with royal generosity.

As early as 1847—before there were a hundred settlers on the grant—Captain Weber surveyed and laid out Stockton much as it stands today. He seemed to see a century into the future. That magnificent equipment of no less than seventeen public squares and parks—unusual for far larger cities—was Weber's own idea. He deeded these parks to the city with a "string" tied to them, so that if posterity ever seeks to divert them from their public use they will revert to the Weber estate.

Many interesting stories have been told that typify the strange, contradictory character of this man. Something of a baron at heart, claiming the Campo de Los Francesos, he turned city-planner and philanthropist. The people, in turn, swept the idea beyond him, out of his hands, and took away from him the final shaping and control of his mighty dream.

Concerning the home of Captain Weber, much could be written. A tract of land between two sloughs had been transformed into a beautiful garden and here nestled one of the most delightful villas ever in existence. A thick hedge, outside of which was a row of semi-tropical trees, surrounded the peninsula. The gate opened into a lofty avenue of trellis work and on either hand beds of roses filled the air with odor. The house was low, but spacious, with woodwork of natural redwood. Vine-covered verandas surrounded the house, and every window disclosed a vision of plants that could have been the glory of any greenhouse. The walks were deep in fuschias and geraniums, and many beautiful pepper trees graced the gardens. He was a lover of flowers and experimented with every kind of seed or shrub that came under his notice. Many of these he obtained from Japan and Europe, and also from the missions. For many years his garden was open at all times to the public.

The marriage of Captain Weber, November 29, 1850, united him with Miss Helen Murphy, daughter of Martin and Mary (Foley) Murphy. She was a member of the celebrated Murphy party of 1844. Three children were born to them, and the only daughter, Miss Julia H., still resides near the City of Stockton.

Captain Weber passed away May 14, 1881, and his demise was regarded as a public loss. A large concourse assembled to pay him the final tribute of respect. Doubtless, he died thinking the people had marred his vision forever. It is a pity that he could not have lived beyond those troublous early times to see the San Joaquin County of today.

THE CAVE OF THE MAGIC POOL

Scripps Institute of Oceanography.)

SOMEWHERE IN CALIFORNIA, IN THE walls of a mountain valley, is "The Cave of the Magic Pool." As runs a local Indian legend, three maidens of the tribe once implored one of their old women to aid them to increase their beauty and personal charm. She told them of a magic pool at the bottom of a deep hole in a hidden cave, the reflection of which would help those who gazed upon it while making the proper incantations. The maidens found the cave, they crawled to the brink of the hole and cautiously looked inward, but one slipped on the slimy edge and plunged downward. She was caught and held a moment by the other two, who in turn began to slip and who released her just in time to save themselves. In horror they returned to their village and told of their awful experience and how their companion had fallen, how they tried to hold her, how she was allowed to go on, how "she struck and struck, and struck again and then all was still."

In Washington last December I heard Dr. J. C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington and former professor of palaeontology in the University of California, tell this legend and follow it with a story of exploration of this remarkable cave which might not have been made if the Indian legend had not indicated some possibilities fascinating for the scientist.

I have never read the technical report on the exploration of this cave, but I have no doubt that for most of us it would seem as dry as any other technical paper on geology. Dr. Merriam took this unpromising material, added to it some vivid colors, translated it into common language, and presented a popular story more fascinating than the average novel.

The important, deep cave was almost concealed behind a common sort of front cave, to which it was connected by only a small opening, difficult to find and use. Few of us would care to venture on a rope ladder down that dark shaft through which the maiden had fallen to unknown depths, even if we were able to find it. Only one man was working with Dr. Merriam. After drawing lots, one went down while the other tended the rope ladder. They found the bones of the maiden and the bones of many animals, but no magic pool. The human bones were restored to the Indians. In trying to lift out a large skull of one of the most important animals the tackle gave way just as it reached the brink of the shaft and the fall shattered the specimen into little pieces which had to be laboriously collected and patiently cemented together.

At one side of the cave, many yards from the bones of the maiden, Dr. Merriam found a fragment of human tooth. Some of us might have concluded that human beings had used the cave along with the many animals, but Dr. Merriam found that it fitted a broken tooth in the maiden's skull, and he concluded that in the fall the tooth had broken against a jutting rock near the top of the shaft and the fragment had been thrown to the long distance. He also reasoned that so many animals would not have reached the cave through the little opening known to him, so he and his companion calculated where the main opening should have been, ages ago. Then they went around on the mountain slope and dug away the land slide which had covered the ancient entrance.

While listening to this lecture, three things especially impressed me. First, the speaker's skill in getting with dry material not only the interest but the understanding of his audience; second, the difficulties surmounted in exploration, by keeness and courage in search, drudgery in excavation and the transport, and repair after heartbreaking accident; and third, the caution in reaching conclusions from slight evidences.

AUTHORITY ADVISES VACATIONISTS

"TAKE YOUR VACATION AS YOU would take a trip to Europe—with the idea of getting the most out of your time and expenditures by planning it intelligtntly," advises Dr. H. C. Bryant, economic ornithologist of the museum of vertebrate zoology at the University of California.

In addition to his work at the university, Dr. Bryant is head of the department of education and research of the State Fish and Game Commission. His duties have made him familiar with California vacation spots at almost every season of the year, and he offers some valuable facts for the consideration of potential vacationists, as follows:

"Unlike Christmas shopping, vacationing needn't be done early in the season. The time for a vacation depends largely upon the individual and what he expects to get out of it.

"The California Sierras are admittedly the finest spots in the world in which to seek recreation. They offer the wildest diversity of scenery and opportunity for fascinating study. Mount Shasta is a decidedly interesting specimen of an extinct cone.

"The three greatest masses of granite in the country are Watkins, El Capitan and Half Dome in the Yosemite National Park. The highest peak in the United States is in California. The lowest point below sea level is not far away, in Death Valley. California has the finest forests in the world, of sugar pine and redwood. Of the seventeen national forest reserves in California, ten are in the Sierra mountains. These are only a few of the attractions.

"As to the time for a vacation in the Sierras, one must consider first of all the snow. The passes are not all open until July 15. If one is interested in water, the waterfalls and streams of the Sierras are at their best at the end of May and during the first part of June.

"If one enjoys the beauties of wild flowers, these are at their finest in June at the elevation of 5,000 feet or in July at 9,000 feet. Mosquitoes, too, must be taken into consideration. These insects make vacations difficult during the latter part of July at the elevation of 5,000 feet and in August at 9,000 feet.

"Hunting and fishing, of course, are regulated by open and closed seasons. The best hunting in the Sierras is found during the fall."

Dr. Bryant suggests that Californians taking their vacations in the national parks may make them far more interesting by choosing the times of year best suited to subjects which interest them. A background, he says, is a good thing. For instance, a person interested in wild life might choose some one plant or animal to study, perhaps more than one, and go to the spot where this can be done and at a time when it can be accomplished most profitably.

To this end, he has for a number of years been conducting in Yosemite Park, with the cooperation of the National Park Board, a number of natural history lectures and trips afield, where the layman can learn during his visit there. The work is in the hands of trained assistants and has met with remarkable success, he says.

COSTS MONEY TO GROW.

To keep pace with the needs of Los Angeles' growing public-schools, the board of supervisors has increased the 1926-27 school tax rate to $1.61. This will take care of a budget calling for an expenditure of $27,057,624.

City Superintendent of Schools Susan M. Dorsey explained that the increase was necessary because of the building of thirty new schools, requiring the employment of 285 additional teachers.

ADMISSION DAY AT SACRAMENTO

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THE NATIVE SONS OF SACRAMENTO, through a joint committee from the local Parlors, are rapidly perfecting arrangements for an elaborate statewide Admission Day celebration there September 9. On that date Native Sons and Native Daughters from all parts of the state will gather in the Capital City in recognition of California's admission-to-statehood birthday. In magnitude and splendor the celebration will rival the world-renowned diamond jubilee staged by the state's two popular Orders—the Native Sons of the Golden West and the Native Daughters of the Golden West—in San Francisco on last year's Admission Day.

The general committee in charge of arrangements for the Sacramento celebration is officered as follows: Grand Trustee John T. Skelton, chairman; George A. Burns, vice-chairman; Albert W. Katzenstein, secretary; Edward H. Kraus, treasurer. Headquarters are being maintaind at suite 205, Sacramento Hotel, where all inquiries should be directed. Sub-committees handling the various details connected with the celebration include:

Executive and Finance—W. E. Holmes (chairman), Edward E. Reese, George A. Burns, Albert W. Katzenstein, J. Frank Didion. Literary—Judge J. F. Pullen (chairman), C. L. Katzenstein, J. T. Stafford, Past Grand President C. E. McLaughlin. Parade—Frank Lafferty (chairman), Al. Cohn, S. E. Ammons, Chief of Police Ted N. Koening, H. R. Chalmers. Floats—Past Grand President Clarence E. Jarvis, J. H. Miller, Howard Johnson, C. H. Breuner, C. S. Simpson. Headquarters—Jos. L. Knowles (chairman), June Longshore, Robert Younger. Music—Assemblyman Percy G. West, Wilkie Ogg, Dr. D. L. Durst, C. F. Hartmeyer, J. R. Strachan. Entertainment—Elwood Mier (chairman), E. A Kuechler, Myron Greer, C. D. Wulff, John Perry. Decorations—A. G. Labhardt (chairman), Ed. Cox, Otto Schuchard, G. E. Hook. Uniforms—Richard Martin (chairman), Frank Showers, F. W. Harms, Raymond Russell, Godfrey F. Mix Jr., J. Meehan, Chas Dietz. Wells-Fargo Marker—Chester Gannon (chairman), H. G. Taynton, Fred J. Johns Jr., J. W. Bates. Other sub-committees are chairmaned as follows: Joseph Berry, transportation; Thomas W. McAuliffe, housing; David W. Wasserman, store closing; John J. Monteverde, reception.

The big Admission Day feature will be the parade, which will pass through the principal business streets of Sacramento, disbanding at the Twelfth and L reviewing stand. J. Hartley Russell, Grand Marshal N.S.G.W., will direct the parade and will be assisted by J. W. Bates as chief of staff, and Irving Gibson and Ted S. Largas as chief aids. The march will begin at 10:30 a.m. Prizes will be awarded for the most elaborate and most historic floats.

Immediately following the colorful parade, the literary exercises will be held in the State Capitol grounds. In the early afternoon a marker will be placed upon the site of the first Wells-Fargo office in Sacramento.

The California State Fair being in full swing Admission Day week, the day's activities will then be transferred to the fair grounds, where there will be drill-team and drum-corps contests for silver trophies. These will be participated in by both Native Daughters and Native Sons. In the evening there will be a display of specially-prepared fireworks, including several set-pieces of an historical nature. The State Agricultural Association is furnishing this attraction and co-operating in every way with the Native Sons to make this year's Admission Day celebration in Sacramento one ever to be remembered.

A "side" attraction which adds much to the pleasure of each Admission Day's festivities is the "open house" maintained by the Native Son Parlors. Headquarters for this purpose are daily been secured in Sacramento, the list to date including: Pacific 10 (San Francisco), Senator Hotel; Golden Gate 29 (San Francisco), Masonic Temple; Mission 38 (San Francisco), Masonic Temple; San Francisco 49, Odd Fellows' Hall; Rincon 72 (San Francisco), new Elks' Hall; Stanford 76 (San Francisco), Pythian Hall; South San Francisco 157, Tuesday Clubhouse; Precita 187 (San Francisco), Sacramento Hotel; Presidio 194 (San Francisco), old Elks' Hall; Athens 195 (Oakland), Foresters' Hall; Twin Peaks 214 (San Francisco), old Elks' Hall; Castro 232 (San Francisco), old Elks' Hall; Balboa 234 (San Francisco), Sacramento Hotel.

Sacramento's principal business streets will be appropriately decorated for the Admission Day fete, and many of the business-houses will put up elaborate exterior decorations. As the visitors arrive by train, boat and stage they will be met by Native Sons' welcoming committees and escorted to their various headquarters. Numerous advance reservations at the hotels indicate an enormous crowd will be in Sacramento for Admission Day, and, in fact, from September 4 to 11—when the State Fair will be "on," but—

"One thing we are trying to impress on the general public," writes secretary Katzenstein of the Admission Day committee to The Grizzly Bear, "is that Sacramento can accommodate all who desire to attend the celebration."

LOOK OUT FOR CHICKENPOX.

Watch out for chickenpox. Don't be deceived into inviting it in the summer in the hope of immunizing the flock when its effects are least harmful. Keep it out and guard against it all the time. If the disease appears, vaccinate the fowls at once. The germs may persist for a year, so use other runs. Plow the ground deep and sow green feed crops. Don't invite any disease into the flock at any time.

AUTO-PAS SAFETY LIGHT

AUTO-PAS light on your machine will make the "other fellow" think of you and see you at night.

It is a safety light for automobiles, attached to the left running board opposite the driver's seat to eliminate front, rear and side collisions and side-swiping. Just as important protection as headlights and tail lights. Meets a want never cared for heretofore in successful manner—3 lights in one.

It reflects a white light upward, a green light forward and a red light toward the rear. The white light shows the hand signal plainly for a great distance; heretofore it has been difficult to see the hand at night—it is generally conceded the hand signal is the most practical and safe signal to use. The passing driver realizes that by clearing the green or red lights he takes little chance of running off the highway and passes in safety.

At intersections, the driver approaching from the left sees both green and red lights, indicating your right of way.

Because of its location the AUTO PAS is the only light on your car that you can always be sure is burning, and if your tail light goes out the AUTO-PAS red light furnishes a satisfactory substitute and may save you a fine.

THE AUTO-PAS ASSOCIATION

927 So. Main St., LOS ANGELES, Calif.

¶ The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is founded upon the same broad patriotic principles that have been the inspiration of similar organizations in older States of the Union. Each State has its history. Into that history is interwoven a narrative of deeds performed by a mighty race of men who frontiered and pioneered the pathway for the countless thousands to follow. They transplanted the spirit, the life, the institutions of the Colonists, and wherever a State was erected there were established the ideals of the Fathers of the Republic.

¶ Therefore, the membership of our Order is limited to those born within the State, because we believe that pride of nativity is inherent in the breast of every person and moves that person to a consecrated loyalty to his native land. We do not maintain that birthplace alone confers any special privilege; rather do we teach that this casts upon the citizen an increased obligation to become interested in all material matters affecting its development and progress. National strength and national greatness have been commensurate with State strength and State greatness.

¶ California was the thirty-first State to be admitted into the Union. She contributed a citizenship and a golden treasure at an opportune time in the affairs of the nation. The many events connected with its settlement and organization as a State played a prominent part in shaping the destiny of the American people, and geographically she occupies a strategic position in the world-wide problems of the present and the future.

¶ We have taken an active interest in the conservation of our natural resources; the preservation of our scenic wonders and making them accessible to all; the retention of the State and its soil for the White race; all legislation, Federal and State, affecting the State and its interests.

¶ In our Fellowship endowment at the University of California we have expended over fifty thousand dollars in the preparation and preservation of the history of California and the Pacific Coast, and it has become the incentive for the Student Body of that institution and of the high-schools throughout the State to learn and teach that history. In this work we have laid the foundation for a text-book to be used in the public schools.

¶ We visit places where important events transpired and we have identified and marked the same with tablet and monument. Responding to the patriotic objects of our Order, we observe each recurring anniversary day of the Admission of California into the Union by public ceremonies in the various cities of the State. We actively participate in public dedicatory ceremonies of grammar-school and high-school buildings, on which occasions the students and citizens are addressed by officials of our Order on patriotic subjects.

¶ We maintain a "Homeless Children" Bureau and have placed in the childless homes over twenty-six hundred homeless boys and girls, insuring their development into a splendid citizenship amid elevating environments. In this activity we have expended over two hundred thousand dollars, contributed generously and voluntarily by the membership of the Order.

¶ It thus appears that the work of our organization appeals to every citizen of the State, irrespective of place of birth. It matters not where we were born in this land of ours; we are all citizens of a common country, we pledge our allegiance to one flag, and we are best evidencing our love of country and our loyalty to that flag by deservedly wearing the badge of public service wherever we exist and have our home.

¶ We welcome to our Membership the sons of California, and we promise nothing in return, save that compensation which comes to the citizen who conscientiously endeavors to perform his part in the cause of a greater and better civilization.

DIGEST THIS!

EVERY CITIZEN SHOULD READ THIS message, received by the editor, and thoroughly digest the contents thereof. It was dated Geneva, Switzerland, where it was mailed August 8. Its writer is W. B. Shearer, well known to readers of The Grizzly Bear, for last year, in a series of articles, he made known some startling facts regarding this country, particularly as regards its unpreparedness.

Shearer is one of the best versed men on world affairs in this country, and he is every inch an American. With eyes and ears ever alert to see and hear all that is going on,—even on the "inside"—he traveled the world extensively in the past, and recently departed on another seeing and hearing tour of the Orient and Europe:

"In Europe, there are two sides to every question—British and right. In the United States, it is the Standard Oil and the Federal Government. . . .

"Mussolini, the only great man produced through the war, inspired Italy. The spirit of Nationalism burned out every other thought. In Great Britain, France and all Europe and Asia, it is Nationalism.

"The United States stands alone in the impractical preachment of Internationalism. The hyphenated American and the Internationalist are the only forces working to force the United States into foreign entanglements.

"League of Nations, World's Court, or what you will, is but a political cry of politicians under the lash of party rule and influence. Politicians, like parties, are only interested in vote values and are always ready to pass a law which increases their patronage and their hold on the public.

"Mussolini is loved, feared or envied, but always recognized. He made his party and rode to power. Great Britain is shaken for the want of a strong man, as are many other nations, including the United States.

"In the United States, there are two outstanding figures, both independent: Senator William E. Borah and Senator James A. Reed. They are far apart, with the exception of their opposition to foreign entanglements.

"President Coolidge, in a speech which was almost an appeal, asked the people to vote, pointing out the dangers of not voting. Party politics have been so exposed the people are no longer interested in partisan politics. Money politics have corrupted everything; those in control of the nation's wealth have prostituted every issue, crime has increased, and law is no longer enforced. We are living under a super-government of blackmail, intimidation and corruption. Personal liberty is bought by graft.

"The great Theodore Roosevelt was told by those monied interests, 'We will buy Congress and, if necessary, the judiciary.' The American people have the choice of breaking their political chains or bowing under the lash of the super-government which controls both parties.

"This super-government would make a treasonable delivery of the United States to the League of Nations or the World's Court—a double-barreled gun in the hands of Europe and aimed at the very heart of the nation. Their cry is idealism.

"The complete and absolute [illegible] of Europe is the open declaration of [illegible] hatred for America, and we are [illegible] vote on either party's issue, namely, the League of Nations or the World's Court. Choose you the Hague or the Harne via Geneva.

"When the United States wants and needs [illegible] NATIONAL issue. The Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States can only be saved by an independent leader of the people. A political party controlled and dictated to candidates is a thing of the past.

"The answer to 'How regain public voting interest?' is, candidates controlling and dictating to the parties. Not political, machine-made, rubber-stamp candidates, but independent Americans."

As a state of the union, California will celebrate its seventy-sixth anniversary Admission Day, September 9. The general festivities are to be held at Sacramento, the Capital City, under the auspices of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West.

Of course, everyone cannot go to Sacramento to celebrate California's birthday anniversary, and therefore some sort of festivity should be arranged for in every locality. In the heart of every loyal Californian, Admission Day should arouse such patriotism as the Fourth of July creates in the breast of every loyal American.

California's claim to distinction is briefly outlined in the Great Seal of State, reproduced on the cover-page of this issue of The Grizzly Bear. The stars indicate that it was the thirty-first state to enter the union, the robed goddess-in-arms signifies that, Minerva-like, it went, full-armed and without territorial childhood, into the nation's family; the Eureka reminds that the Pioneers, after traversing the breadth of a continent, found here, under one sky, the wealth and the beauty of all the world.

In Japan, 1,165 schools are giving compulsory military training to 475,000 middle-school and university students. The war and education departments are co-operating to see that the training is thorough and that no student escapes. An investigation disclosing the fact that most of the young Japs receive only an elementary-school education, the training is to be extended to them, 1,500,000 additional in number.

But, Japan is not preparing for war, say the brotherhood-of-mankindists, and, sad to relate, they are, through their extensive propaganda, making the people of the United States so think. And so, this country sleeps—or disarms when awake—while Japan, never asleep, feverishly prepares for the inevitable conflict, with California and the Pacific Coast as its goal.

GRAND PRESIDENT

"To Officers and Members, Subordinate Parlors, Native Daughters of the Golden West—Dear Sisters: By virtue of the authority you have invested in me as your Grand President, it is my duty and privilege to call your attention at this time to the nearing of Admission Day, September ninth, when we will celebrate the seventy-sixth anniversary of California's admission into the Union of States.

"By invitation we will join the Native Sons of the Golden West in the Capital City, Sacramento, on that day, together with all loyal citizens of the Golden State. What a great pleasure it will be to renew our pledges to uphold the ideals of our Order, to commemorate that eventful date in history when California became one of the most important stars in the galaxy of a united government.

"Not only on this day do we pledge allegiance to State and Nation, but to venerate the beloved Pioneers. I am confident I have responsive sentiment in each and every member of our Order as I greet you today. My heart is overflowing with the joy and gratitude of living in such a glorious state—California.

"We may be justly proud to have been so blessed by Divine Providence as to have been born in God's Garden of Love and Golden Opportunities. It is not unbecoming of us to take inventory each year of the marvelous achievements and progress made in every avenue of life by her citizenry. It is to the heroic Pathfinders and Pioneers that we pay homage for this splendid advancement; to the sainted band of Franciscan Missionaries, led by Junipero Serra and the Pioneers, who paid with nature's lawful coin, by labor which the head and heart allows. They knew at the end of the rainbow, if they found a pot of gold, it would bring new responsibilities.

"Those noble men and women possessed the dignity of self-reliance and self-confidence. Their history is unique and inspiring. We have been left a heritage that we shall cherish and preserve and shall ever pay loyal tribute to their marvelous achievement. We must not fail to carry on, and leave for those who come after us a record worthy of our forefathers.

"Sincerely yours,
"PEARL LAMB,
"Grand President.

(SIDNEY B. WITKOWSKI.)

Out of His wealth of glory
God took a bit of His best
And put down on the Western slope
The finish to all the rest.

And it seemed to be the climax
Of a work that could ne'er be forgot—
A place that all the world has named
GOD'S GARDEN SPOT:

With just a little more sunshine,
With just a few more flowers,
With snows that seem like a halo
Where the mighty mountain peak towers.

From up where massive Shasta
Reaches high into the skies,
To down where the glorious Southland
Amid her orange groves lies,

The blue of San Francisco Bay
Gleams like silver on a moonlit night,
And there's not a spot from North to South
That shines with a glimmer less bright.

From down where the padres started
To build their Mission chain,
To where the Oregon line begins
The birds sing a sweeter refrain.

From the East, from the South,
From the North, and across the foam,
There came the best, then followed the rest,
To make this spot their home.

Here in a setting of beauty,
Here in a haven of rest,
Here in a blaze of glory—
No wonder the world is impressed.

Out where the broad Pacific
Breaks gently along the coast,
Is the spot we love, infinitely blest—
CALIFORNIA, our toast.

"Officers and Members of All Parlors of the Native Sons of the Golden West—Dear Sirs and Brothers: The last session of the Grand Parlor designated Sacramento as the place for holding the seventy-sixth anniversary of the admission of the State of California into the Union. The Parlors of that city, in fact the whole citizenry of Sacramento, are working to make this celebration an unqualified success.

"The State Board of Agriculture, having in charge the State Fair, which will be held in that city during the same week, are lending every assistance within their power toward making this anniversary celebration one to be long remembered.

"Admission Day is a legal holiday and it is our duty as Native Sons to assist in its proper annual observance. There is no better way for us to pay homage to the hardy Pioneers who blazed the trails to this Western shore; no surer method of instilling in the minds of the youth of today the traditions of the days of '49.

"As Grand President, may I express the hope that each and every Parlor will be suitably represented at Sacramento on September 9, 1926.

"In communities so remote that attendance at Sacramento is impossible it is desirable that fitting services be conducted to commemorate this auspicious occasion.

"With every good wish to the Order and its members, as well as to the communities in which they are located, I am

SACRAMENTO YESTERDAY AND TODAY

Sacramento Chamber of Commerce

SACRAMENTO'S "YESTERDAY" IS NOT so long ago, as measured by the stretch of time which it might be considered is needed to develop a metropolitan city from a wilderness.

Sacramento's "yesterday" is scarcely more than seventy-five years ago. Let the imagination run back through that short time and picture a fertile valley between the Sierra Nevada and the Coast Range Mountains, through which winds a beautiful river from the foot of Mount Shasta on the north to the Pacific Ocean.

In the heart of this valley, carpeted with wildflowers at that time so profuse, that "had ninety-nine out of every hundred been plucked, the land would still have been considered extravagantly flowery," was the spot at the confluence of the Sacramento and American Rivers which was destined to be the cradle of California's early history.

And in this "yesterday" there came a man with the stout heart of an adventurer and the vision of a prophet—a man in whom the Creator had stirred the unrest of a pioneer. That man was Captain John A. Sutter. Sacramento is today what Captain John A. Sutter visioned in that "yesterday."

The unmatched beauty of the Sacramento Valley, with its still-extravagant growth of wildflowers, remains, but it is animated by healthy and happy people who have found herein an abundant life that runs far beyond the dreams of the Pioneers.

Standing on the spot where skyscrapers now rise and where the State Capitol's beautiful golden dome towers, Captain John A. Sutter visioned the Sacramento that was to be. He saw Sacramento as the center of a great agricultural empire. He was building for this when the discovery of gold at his sawmill, by James Marshall, at Coloma, El Dorado County, changed for a time the course of events.

Sutter did not allow the gold rush to change his mind as to the destiny of Sacramento and the valley. While the mining which followed the discovery of gold has brought untold wealth to the state, and while untold wealth still lies buried in the hills and mountains of the Mother Lode, the great, inexhaustible source of wealth lies in the rich soil of the valleys and foothills.

"Those who are wise are not wasting their time hunting for gold, but are cultivating the land," Sutter wrote to a friend in Ohio in 1849. Those who believe the only wealth of this section of the state was in minerals were mistaken, for, as the years passed, those who followed Sutter's advice found the everlasting wealth.

Sutter had come up the Sacramento River from San Francisco in 1839. He was a Swiss who sought out California as the new land of promise. With him were three White companions, a small group of Kanakas and a limited supply of provisions.

A picture of Sacramento at the time of its founding is to be seen in the wealth of historical relics preserved at Sutter's Fort through the untiring efforts of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West.

The main building in the center of the fort is to be found virtually as it was left by Sutter. The walls about this building have been restored and a park has been created. This park and the fort are given perpetual care through state legislation and appropriations sponsored by the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West.

THE TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILROAD.

Sacramento enjoyed a rapid development as the years progressed. It sprang into national prominence as the result of the plans of four leading merchants of Sacramento—Charles W. Crocker, Mark Hopkins, Collis P. Huntington and Leland Stanford—for a transcontinental railroad from this city to Saint Joseph, Missouri.

In spite of almost insurmountable obstacles, both from a physical and financial standpoint, these men and their associates, with that indomitable spirit which had founded the city, carried forward this tremendous project, at that time unmatched in the history of the world, to a successful conclusion, and in 1869 the railroad was completed.

SACRAMENTO MADE STATE CAPITAL.

Sacramento was not legally made the capital of California until 1854, four years after the state's admission to the union. The seat of government, as fixed by the constitutional convention in 1849, was San Jose, and accordingly the Legislature held its first session there in December of that year. However, the accommodations were not satisfactory, and the Legislature eagerly accepted the hospitality of the City of Vallejo, Solano County, as offered by General M. G. Vallejo, for its next session. But when that body convened in January, 1852, at Vallejo, circumstances there were even worse than at San Jose. General Vallejo had been unable to fulfill his part of the agreement, and the legislators were more than glad to accept Sacramento's offer of its courthouse.

Then began the hot and exciting fight for the honor of being the capital of the state. The Legislature passed a bill in April, 1852, making Vallejo the capital, but General Vallejo secured a release from his contract, and when the legislators met in Vallejo in 1853 they declared Benicia, Solano County, the capital, and moved to that city. At the beginning of the 1854 session, Sacramento's inducements, including a deed to the block bounded by I and J, Ninth and Tenth streets, secured the passage of Senator A. P. Catlin's bill making Sacramento the permanent capital.

FLOOD PROTECTION.

Safety from floods which, in the early history of the city, were a great menace, has been provided by a system of levees. A concrete wall has been constructed along Sacramento's river frontage and a wide and high levee skirts the city on the north and east as ample protection from the high waters of the American River.

In addition to this, the city carried out relief measures by a weir leading into the Yolo bypass. When the waters of the Sacramento reach a high stage, the floodgates are opened and the water is carried into the Yolo basin.

E. B. CROCKER ART GALLERY.

Sacramento has attained a leadership in art, as the result of the donation to the city, by Mrs. Margaret E. Crocker, of the E. B. Crocker Art Gallery and Museum.

The magnificent home of the art gallery was erected as a private gallery, ballroom and place of entertainment by Judge and Mrs. E. B. Crocker. During the Franco-Prussian war (1870-73) the Crockers were traveling in Europe and collecting paintings for this gallery. Because of the war conditions and the fact that they were able to pay immense sums, the Crockers purchased many rare paintings which ordinarily could not have been bought. Practically the whole collection of seven hundred paintings were obtained on that trip.

When the California Museum Association wished to give an art loan exhibition to obtain money for a hall for itself in 1884, Mrs. Margaret E. Crocker, widow of Judge Crocker, kindly loaned the art gallery. In the midst of this exhibition, Mrs. Crocker donated the art gallery to the City of Sacramento.

This collection of paintings and drawings is one of the largest and most valuable in the United States. It contains the original works of several old masters, among whom are Van Dyck, Murillo, Franz Hals, Rubens, Guido Renni, Salvatore, Rose Carracci, Hemling and others whose works have become priceless with the passage of time.

SACRAMENTO TODAY

PROGRESSIVE GOVERNMENT.

For the past four and one-half years Sacramento has been under the city manager form of government. This plan has proved very successful, and the progress and development made during this short period exceeds that of any combined previous eighteen-year period. The improvements during this short space of time, consisting of building permits, bond funds, municipal budgets and allied activities, amount to more than $58,000,000. Following is a list of the important improvements completed during the past five years:

|---|---|
| Filtration plant .....$ | 2,700,000 |
| Municipal auditorium ....$ | 750,000 |
| Extension water system....$ | 200,000 |
| Removal Y-street levee....$ | 65,000 |
| Garbage incinerator .....$ | 216,000 |
| Harbor improvements ....$ | 250,000 |
| Extension sewer system..... | 91,000 |
| Additions police-fire alarm system .....$ | 25,000 |
| Levee revetment .....$ | 90,000 |
| Pedestrian lane, 12th street subway .....$ | 13,000 |
| Subway 16th street (city's portion) .....$ | 66,000 |

| Other municipal improvements financed through annual budgets, four-year period.....$ | 1,000,000 |
| Number of miles of new streets paved since July 1, 1921..... | 43.7 |

Sacramento has recently voted nearly $3,000,000 in bonds for public improvements, including extensions of the sewer and water systems and an addition to the filtration plant to take care of the increased population.

There have also been other civic improvements which have been of great benefit to the citizens, such as the development of William Land and William Curtis parks, installation of new municipal nine-hole golf course, a fifty percent increase in the activities of the recreation department, improvements added to Camp Sacramento—the city's summer vacationland—and the inauguration of the municipal symphony orchestra and chorus.

INDUSTRIAL SACRAMENTO.

The Sacramento Valley is an agricultural empire, while the surrounding mountain counties are rich in timber and mineral wealth. The City of Sacramento is strategically located, so that it is the natural center of this section.

Sacramento, because of this strategic location and the cheap transportation facilities both by rail and water, has become a large distribution center as well as an industrial center.

This entire section is experiencing rapid industrial development, due to certain economic factors, such as access to and low cost of obtaining raw materials, low cost of distribution, fine living conditions and a stabilized labor market.

A recent survey shows that Sacramento has 417 manufacturing establishments with an annual production of $64,000,000. Seventy-five percent of these manufactured products are marketed in California.

Sacramento's leading industries, in order of their importance, are: Canning and preserving, railroad repair shops, slaughtering and meat packing, flour and mill feeds, rice cleaning and polishing, bread and bakery products, automobile and radio batteries, butter and cheese, planing mill products, printing newspapers and periodicals, book and job printing, gas manufactured, ice cream, iron and steel products, food by-products, manufacture of ice, boxes, caskets, barrels, beverages, bookbinding and engraving, sheet metal products, confectionery, chemical and drug compounds, coffee roasting and grinding, auto bodies and parts, brick and pottery, lumber and wood products, cabinet and furniture plants, stone and clay products, marble and stone products, sheet metal products and electric fixtures.

Sacramento is particularly well situated to handle the fruit and vegetable products of the surrounding agricultural districts. Much of the raw material is delivered by trucks, and the freight rates are exceptionally low. Sacramento also has the advantage of being the Western terminal of the transcontinental railroads. One large canning firm makes Sacramento the distributing point for all its products which are sent East.

The lines of manufacture for which Sacramento is particularly adapted are fruit canning, vegetable canning, jams, jellies and specialized fruit products, cereals or malt extracts, rice by products, livestock by-products, milk or creamery products, cement or clay products, copper products, limestone fertilizer, asbestos fiber products and wood pulp and paper products.

POWER, FUEL AND WATER.

The rivers, lakes and mountain streams of this section supply an abundance of electric power, some of which is distributed to far-distant points. Development of hydro-electric power has been extensive and rapid during the past few years.

There are now three companies with high voltage transmission lines feeding into or traversing Sacramento. It is estimated that at the present time there is an available surplus of 39,000 k. w., which is an important item in Sacramento's industrial development.

Gas and oil are two of the most prominent fuels, and the development of large coal deposits in the northern counties that is now being carried on will eliminate, to a large extent, the importation of coal for gas manufacture and commercial purposes.

Sacramento owns and operates its own water system, and by means of a $3,000,000 filtration plant distributes water from the Sacramento River to the citizens which tests chemically pure. The water is rendered safe and pure at the filtration plant by the processes of coagulation, sedimentation, filtration and chlorination. Another important point is, that the water is furnished at an exceptionally low rate.

TRANSPORTATION OF TODAY.

Railroads, electric lines, river steamers and stages are available in Sacramento for transportation today.

There are two transcontinental railroads entering the city, while a third is available and easily reached by an electric line. One of these companies operates daily forty passenger trains and twenty-six freight trains out of Sacramento. The other lines carry heavy loads of freight, bearing the agricultural products of the Sacramento Valley to all parts of the United States.

This territory is served by four river transportation companies. These carry passengers and freight up and down the Sacramento River and form a cheap mode of transportation for agricultural products, particularly paddy rice, barley, asparagus and sugar-beets.

The annual tonnage carried by river boats is from 650,000 to 1,000,000 tons, and the number of passengers is from 200,000 to 250,000. The steam and interurban electric lines have interchange agreements which greatly facilitate the movement of freight.

LIVING CONDITIONS.

Sacramento's ideal climate makes the city an ideal home place. The absence of the severe and cold winters, and the delightful summers with their cool and pleasant evenings, attract many homeseekers to the city.

Sacramento also has many other advantages to offer as a home-city. One of the most important is the pure and unlimited supply of water at the lowest rate of any city in the United States—a flat rate of seventy-five cents a month for a five-room house.

The educational facilities are also of the highest standard. The school buildings are of moderate design and recent construction. There are several high-schools, and a junior-college which it is planned to develop into a four-year state university.

Living costs, such as food, rents, clothing and other necessities, compare very favorably with other cities in California.

The parks and playgrounds offer fine recreational advantages, and together with the beauty of the trees which line the streets, and the brilliant flower gardens, Sacramento is made an ideal setting for the true American home.

SACRAMENTO'S BANKING TODAY.

The banking conditions of a city form a clear and concise indication as to whether that city is advancing or standing still. Sacramento has four national banks and ten state banks. The total resources of the eleven banks that are reporting members of the Federal Reserve system amounted on December 31, 1925, to $101,249,359.97.

The Federal Reserve Bank determines the general condition of a bank upon the relations of its loans and discounts to its deposits, with the following ratios: Good—where loans and discounts are less than 80 percent of deposits. Fair—where loans and discounts are between 80 percent and 100 percent of deposits. Poor—where loans and discounts are over 100 percent of deposits.

Sacramento's ratio of loans and discounts to deposits was 85.5 percent in 1920, and on December 31, 1925, it had decreased to 59.3 percent. The bank-clearing records show a steady growth in business activity.

STAGE AND TRUCK LINES.

There are many fine highways leading into Sacramento and make the city a trucking center. A union stage depot increases the service of the eleven motor stage lines which run 120 auto stages in and out of the city daily.

Stage and truck facilities are particularly valuable in the outlying rural districts. Sacramento canneries, by means of auto trucks, draw products from a radius of fifty miles.

There are several large trucking firms in Sacramento which contract to handle all kinds of transportation jobs, such as mining and construction machinery, hoisting and erecting gas containers, etc. At times they even render services in Utah and Nevada.

BUILDING PERMITS.

In the last five years 16,137 building permits have been issued in Sacramento for construction costing $46,289,579.

SACRAMENTO'S ADMISSION DAY PROGRAM

SACRAMENTO'S NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE Daughters of the Golden West have arranged a program, full to overflowing with attractions, for the state-wide Admission Day celebration to be held in the Capital City, September 8 and 9.

The festivities will commence the evening of the 8th, with the arrival of the thousands of visitors, who will find the streets and many of the business-houses gaily decorated for the occasion with the Flag of the United States and the Banner of the Bear, the official State of California Flag.

All trains will be met by a band and a reception committee, and the visiting Parlors will be escorted to their festival headquarters, which include practically every meeting-place in the city.

The program for Admission Day, the 9th, starts at 9:30 a. m. with the placing of a plaque upon the site of the first Wells-Fargo office in Sacramento.

At 10:30 a. m., the big parade, details of which appear elsewhere in this number of The Grizzly Bear, is billed to start.

At 12:30, literary exercises will be held in Capitol Park. Judge J. F. Pullen will preside, and Hilliard E. Welch, Grand President N.S.G.W., will speak on "The Aims and Purposes of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters." The Admission Day oration will be delivered by Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., who will have for his subject "California." This will prove a treat, for Judge Cutler is one of the state's most brilliant orators and he knows the state from A to Z.

At 1:30 p. m., historic Sutter's Fort will be thrown open for inspection, and every Native Son and Native Daughter should visit it. There may be viewed relics of the days when California's Capital City was an infant and the conveniences of the present time were unheard of.

GEORGE A. BURNS,
Vice-chairman General Committee.

At this hour, too, there will be exhibition swimming contests at Joyland Park.

At 2 p. m., the activities will be transferred to the California State Fair grounds, so that all may have an opportunity to see the state's greatest exposition. The winners of the parade drills will be awarded their prizes here, and there will be band, drum-corps and drill-team contests for both Native Sons and Native Daughters, races and many other attractions.

At 5 p. m., the General Admission Day Committee of Sacramento Native Sons and Native Daughters will present to the State Agricultural Society a Flag of the United States and a California State (Bear) Flag. Hilliard E. Welch, Grand President N.S.G.W., will make the presentation for the committee.

At 8 p. m., there will be a display of specially-designed fireworks, many of the set-pieces being of an historical nature.

HEADQUARTERS

In addition to this general program, many of the Native Son Parlors will have open-house at their headquarters the night of the 8th and the afternoon and evening of the 9th.

The Sacramento County Parlors—Sacramento 3, Sunset 26, Elk Grove 41, Granite 83, Courtland 106, Sutter Fort 241 and Galt 243—will be quartered in Native Sons' Building, Eleventh and J streets. Dancing will be in order, and all Natives and their friends are extended an invitation to participate.

THE WORKERS

Long, arduously and faithfully, many of Sacramento County's prominent Native Sons have labored to provide a never-to-be-forgotten celebration in recognition of the seventy-sixth anniversary of California's admission as a state into the United States (September 9, 1850). Their efforts will be rewarded by the appearance in Sacramento City for this year's Admission Day festival of thousands of Native Sons and Native Daughters and other lovers of California.

ADMISSION DAY PARADE, SACRAMENTO

THE ADMISSION DAY PARADE IN SACramento the morning of September 9 promises to be one of the largest and most spectacular in the history of California—or, at least, since the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, who will compose the parade, have had the observance of the state's admission-to-statehood anniversary delegated, by common consent, to them.

Thousands of California's Sons and Daughters, some costumed in the styles of the long-ago, others in gorgeous modern uniforms, will be in line, thus paying public homage to the Golden State, the place of their nativity. They will be accompanied by their bands, drum and fife corps, and drill teams, and will, in many instances, act as escorts to floats either depicting some phase of California's romantic and resourceful history or representative of some notable resource of their particular localities. Every section of the state will send large delegations of its Native Sons and Native Daughters to the Capital City to participate in the big parade.

In charge of the Admission Day parade for the state Orders will be J. Hartley Russell of San Francisco, Grand Marshal N.S.G.W., and Mrs. Josie Barboni of Visalia, Grand Marshal N.D.G.W.

The Admission Day parade will form on Front street, between I and M streets. The line will move at 10:30 a. m. and the route will be from Second and J to Sixteenth, thence to K, down K to Fourth, thence to L, up L to Fifteenth. The division numbers will be carried by members of Pathfinder Troupe No. 7, Life Saving Scouts of the World.

At the time of The Grizzly Bear's going to press, favorable responses to the invitation of the Sacramento Admission Day Committee to participate in the parade were so numerous that eleven divisions, including the escort division, had been provided for. As responses are being received by the committee every day—and will continue to come in to the very hour set for the parade's start—the number of divisions is certain to be increased. To date (August 21) the line-up includes:

PLENTY OF ROOMS

A rumor that has been spread from some unknown source and for some unknown reason, to the effect that Sacramento has run out of accommodations for those who may want to visit that city for the Admission Day celebration and State Fair, is wholly false.

The Grizzly Bear has assurance that both the N.S.G.W. General Admission Day Celebration Committee and the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce have accommodations available for an unlimited number of visitors.

All that is necessary, to be assured of first-class Admission Day accommodations in Sacramento, is to write, wire or phone either the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce or Albert W. Katzenstein, secretary general committee, Sacramento Hotel.

SIERRA BRIDGE MEMORIALIZES THE PIONEER

DONNER SUMMIT BRIDGE, IN THE High Sierras of Nevada County, was dedicated and opened to traffic August 22, and at the same time there was unveiled a plaque—placed upon a pedestal in the observation platform constructed as a part of the bridge—to the memory of the California Pioneers. From this wayside resting-place may be viewed the formidable granite cliffs surrounding Donner Lake, upon the shores of which, a few years ago, the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West erected, and dedicated to the memory of California's Pioneer Men and Women, a magnificent bronze statue. The dedicatory and unveiling ceremonies of August 22 were under the joint auspices of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West and the California State Highway Commission.

Donner Summit bridge spans a chasm, not a stream, its construction being necessary to provide a 7 percent grade up the mountain. Its location is not far distant from the point where members of the Donner party were forced to turn back, in October 1846, in their effort to reach the Sacramento Valley, and for this reason it was deemed fitting by the highway commission that the bridge be dedicated to their memory and that of other Pioneers who followed in their footsteps.

The new highway from Donner Lake camp to the summit, eliminating 20 percent grades of the old road, was built by the California Highway Commission, while the section from the summit to Soda Springs is a forest highway project and is a contribution of the United States Forest Service to the highway system of California. The bureau of public roads has had charge of construction. The same holds true for the bridge, which also was financed with forest funds. Plans, however, were furnished by the bridge department of the California Highway Commission. Work on the bridge and the seven miles of new highway has been under way for more than three years. The bridge is the final important link in that section of the Victory highway between Sacramento and Reno, Nevada State.

The memorial tablet bears this inscription: "Donner Summit Bridge: Dedicated to the Pioneers Who Blazed the Overland Trail Through These Mountains. Built by the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads and the California Highway Commission; 1925-1926. This Tablet Placed by the Historic Landmarks Committee of the Native Sons of the Golden West." It bears, also, a replica of an ox-team and a Pioneer fighting their way through the fastnesses of the old Overland Trail.

To motorists who pause to enjoy the vista of lake and mountains which unfolds from the summit, the bronze tablet will recall the hardships of those who, nearly three generations ago, struggled through a land without roads. The dedicatory program was arranged by a committee of the following Native Sons, appointed by Grand President Hilliard E. Welch: Harvey M. Toy of San Francisco, chairman California Highway Commission; George G. Radcliff of Sacramento, chairman State Board of Control; John T. Skelton of Sacramento, Grand Trustee; John J. Monteverde of Sacramento and W. B. Gelatt of Donner Lake.

The dedicatory and unveiling ceremonies were attended by more than 500. Harvey M. Toy, as chairman of the day, called the assemblage to order and introduced C. C. Gildersleeve, the constructor of the bridge.

John T. Skelton, Grand Trustee N.S.G.W., followed, and read letters from two survivors of the Donner party—Mrs. J. S. Schenck of The Dalles, Oregon State, and Mrs. Margaret I. McMahon of San Francisco—expressing regret at their inability to be present.

Hilliard E. Welch, Grand President N.S.G.W., spoke of the generation of Pioneers and the present generation, and told how each played their part in the development of the Golden West.

Colonel C. F. McGlashan, author of "The History of the Donner Party," gave a graphic description of the coming of the Pioneers to the West.

Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen, Past Grand President, speaking for the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, said:

"Today, out of the sunshine and shadows of California's early history, come visions of the period when American civilization first crossed its mountain heights and entered its overland gateways.

"We can hear the tread of rushing, impatient feet, the lowing of many herds, and the re-echoing sounds of the sturdy Pioneer homeseekers. We know of their trying experiences and valorous deeds, of their hardships and high endeavors, making possible this glorious commonwealth which, to the sons and daughters of these noble men and women, is a well-beloved heritage.

"We Californians love our state, and the tendrils of our affection sink deep into the soil where our fathers wrought and where we, ourselves, abide. And the preservation of every shred of its picturesque history that is ever being enacted in the drama of life on these Western shores, is of the most vital importance to us.

"And here, in the presence of these mighty forces of Nature, in the midst of the grandeur of scenery that is so typical of California, we give tribute to those who have marked the steps of our ancestors, through the mountain fastnesses and fruitful valleys and over desert wastes, by the medium of a system of famous road building.

Past Grand President N.D.G.W.

"The silvered highway will continue to stretch into time and space until all peoples and all tongues shall meet here. And there will be an even more perfect civilization, a firmer faith and a more reverent worship.

"All this is prophesied in the words on this artistic plaque, dedicating the Donner Summit bridge to the memory of those who blazed the Overland Trail through the mountains. And, although many of the far-famed Donner party gave up their lives in this land of promise, the spirit which made possible today's ceremony convinces us that those people did not die in vain."

Fletcher A. Cutler, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., spoke of the advancement of civilization and said that the Donner Summit bridge would prove to be a blessing for humanity.

George G. Radcliff, chairman State Board of Control, expressed regret that Jo V. Snyder, a deceased Past Grand President N.S.G.W. who, during his lifetime, was so interested in preserving the memory of the Donner party, was not among those present. He loved the High Sierras, and spread their fame throughout the state.

Lewis F. Byington, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., recounted the days of Fremont, Carson, James Frazier Reed and the Donners, whose names hold glowing roles in California's annals.

Descendants of the Reed-Donner party present at the ceremonies were: James Frazier Lewis, Martha Jane Lewis and Susan A. Lewis of Santa Cruz, children of Martha Jane ("Little Patty") Reed-Lewis, deceased. Her father, James Frazier Reed, was the organizer of what has become popularly known as the "Donner" party.

THE "BEAR" FLAG

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THE FLAG OF THE CALIFORNIA REpublic, generally referred to as the Bear Flag, and for some time the official California State Flag, is again under discussion. The time is opportune, for Admission Day, September 9, approaches. The flag's hoisting at Sonoma, June 14, 1846, by a small band of Americans, resulted in the acquisition of California by the United States, and the state's admission into the union September 9, 1850.

Admission Day, a Legislature-decreed legal holiday, is the anniversary of California's admission to statehood. On that day, September 9, the historic Bear Flag should be prominently displayed throughout California, along with the Flag of the United States.

The present discussion came about through this letter, addressed to John T. Regan, Grand Secretary N.S.G.W., by J. C. Hearn, recording secretary of Athens Parlor No. 195, Oakland: "Argument has arisen in this Parlor as to the true meaning of the star in the Bear Flag. We would appreciate it if you can furnish us with any data in this respect." Naturally, Grand Secretary Regan referred the letter to Historiographer Roy W. Cloud of Redwood Parlor No. 66, Redwood City, whose response follows:

"Your letter to Grand Secretary Regan was referred to me for answer. The question you raise is interesting and, so far as I know, has attracted little notice in our state. I had always supposed that California was following the lead of Texas in putting a lone star upon its flag. I had never heard the matter discussed but took it for granted. Upon looking up the history of the flag, I found the following in Bancroft's works, Vol. 22, which is Vol. 5 of his 'History of California,' page 146: 'The need of a banner was naturally one of the first suggested. The insurgents had no right to unfurl the Stars and Stripes, as many of them would doubtless have preferred to do; yet any flag devised by Americans must needs have at least a star and stripe; and the appropriateness of a lone star could not fail to suggest itself to men familiar with the history of Texas, and the similarity of conditions between that country and what they hoped to make of California.'

"The following, while not bearing on the star, may be of interest, as it was taken from a letter of William B. Ide found in the 'Life of William B. Ide' by Simeon Ide, page 55: 'William Todd (a Norwegian) of Illinois assisted by old Peter Storm painted the Bear Flag. It was simply a piece of unbleached cotton-cloth about a yard and a half long by one yard wide. A rude figure of a bear standing on his hind legs, was sketched and painted by Todd and Storm, as stated above, in the presence of a number of the Bear party.'

"Also, in the 'Conquest of California,' written in 1856, Ide writes: 'The Bear Flag, made of plain cotton cloth and ornamented with the red flannel of a shirt from the back of one of the men, and christened by the words "California Republic" in red paint, lettered on both sides, was raised upon the standard where had floated to the breeze the Mexican flag. It was the 14th day of June '46.'

"By the two quotations you will notice that Ide, who was one of the leaders of the Bear Flag Party, was not real clear on the making of the flag. He also failed to make any mention of the star. I think, however, that the men who made the flag thought of Texas as the Lone Star State. California was to be in somewhat a similar position, so they decided to place a star upon their flag."

That Ide "was not real clear on the making of the flag" is a fact, for the original Bear Flag did not have a "bear standing on his hind legs." He evidently confused the Sonoma-made flag with one which, supposedly made in Santa Barbara, was painted in black and had a bear rampant. The original Bear Flag was long in the possession of the Society of California Pioneers, but was destroyed in the 1906 San Francisco conflagration, along with the Guidon of the Sonoma Troop, which had a lone star in the corner, the words "Republic of California" at the top, a bear in the center and a red stripe at the bottom. The generally accepted history of the Bear Flag may be found in the 1909 "California Blue Book," wherein is this reference to the lone star in the flag:

They [the Bear Flag Party] had thus started a revolution, and it was necessary to have a flag. Mrs. John Sears supplied the muslin, and William Todd was the artist. He started by painting A SINGLE STAR IN IMITATION OF THE LONE STAR OF TEXAS, when H. L. Ford suggested that a grizzly bear should be used as appropriate to the country. The idea was approved by all, and the bear was painted, and beneath him were the words 'California Republic'."

All historians are agreed that William L. Todd was the Bear Flag artist, so his description of its design should be accepted as the correct one. In a letter to the "Los Angeles Express" January 11, 1878, he thus describes the making of the original Bear Flag:

"I have to say in regard to the making of the original Bear Flag of California at Sonoma, in 1846, that when the Americans, who had taken up arms against the Spanish regime, had determined what kind of a flag should be adopted, the following persons performed the work: Granville P. Swift, Peter Storm, Henry L. Ford, and myself. We procured in the house where we made our headquarters a piece of new unbleached cotton domestic, not quite a yard wide, with stripes of red flanel about four inches wide, furnished by Mrs. John Sears, on the lower side of the canvas. On the upper left-hand corner was a star, and in the center was the image made to represent a grizzly bear passant, so common in this country at the time. The bear and star were painted with paint made of linseed oil and Venetian red or Spanish brown. Underneath the bear were the words 'California Republic.' The other persons engaged with me got the materials together, while I acted as artist. The forms of the bear and star and the letters were first lined out with pen and ink by myself, and the two forms were filled in with the red paint, but the letters with ink."

Illustrations of the original California Republic (Bear) Flag and the California State (Bear) Flag are here presented. Note that, while the symbols and lettering on both are identical, the design of the Bear Flag now in use does not exactly coincide with that of the original Bear Flag. This is inconsequential, however, for it is the spirit which prompted the bringing into being of the original flag that is

CALIFORNIA'S STATE FAIR AT SACRAMENTO

Charles W. Paine

(SECRETARY STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.)

THE NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE Daughters of the Golden West will be responsible, September 9, for breaking all attendance records for a single day in the history of the California State Fair. I do not hesitate to make this prediction, because I am familiar with the thorough arrangements which have been made for this year's celebration of Admission Day in Sacramento.

After the big parade in the down-town section the population of Sacramento on that day, re-inforced by the thousands of visitors, will shift to the State Fair grounds, and there will be a program of exceptional interest every minute of the afternoon and evening.

At five o'clock in the afternoon will come the feature event of the day—the presentation of American and State (Bear) Flags to the State Agricultural Society by the Native Sons and Native Daughters. This ceremony will take place in front of the horticultural pavilion, where two huge flagpoles have been erected.

The racetrack program for the afternoon will include some of the best events of fair week, such as the free-for-all pace in which the speedy "Bobby O.," last year's sensation, will again perform, and the 2:12 trot, the governor's stake of $2,000. There will also be running races, and interspersed with the track events will be circus aerial stunts and a spectacular "slide for life" in front of the grandstand.

Among the events on the evening program will be the horse show, and on this night the big open-air dance platform will be turned over exclusively to Native Sons and Native Daughters.

It can be stated without a stretch of the imagination that the State Fair this year will be a record-breaker in many ways. Visitors will be greatly impressed with the new grandstand building. This splendid structure, which cost $200,000, will be more than a grandstand, as the lower floor, measuring 360 feet in length by 90 feet in width, will house the big State Fair auto show. The second floor will contain a modern cafeteria on one side of the main entrance, and dressing-rooms, rest-rooms, and rooms for newspapermen on the other side.

Governor Friend W. Richardson, who has taken keen interest in the fair, visiting it every day, saw the need of a new grandstand building as the old wooden structure was in a poor and dangerous condition, and accordingly took steps immediately after the 1924 exposition to provide for a new building. The capacity of the new stand is over 7,000 persons and it will be of attractive architecture blending with and adding materially to the effect of the group of State Fair buildings, including the agricultural pavilion and the women's building.

This year, for the first time, the directors of the State Fair added to the premium offerings prizes of $400 for "meritorious exhibits of citrus fruits, or exhibits representing the citrus industry, quantity, quality and attractiveness to be considered." This opened the way for the participation of California's leading citrus counties. San Bernardino County, the home of the National Orange Show, is entering an exhibit for the first time in years.

A generous premium list was offered for the horse show this year and has likewise attracted a large and classy number of entrants, among them many Eastern stables. The exhibit of farm and irrigation machinery is steadily growing in interest with each fair and, in fact, this feature of the fair is an exposition in itself. A special attraction being arranged by officials in charge this year is a display of antique plows and other farm implements, which will provide a striking contrast to the machinery now in use.

This year entertainment features will far surpass those of recent years. Among the features arranged are a rodeo, with relay and chariot races; thrilling circus acts, an amusement zone and daily band concerts.

Paintings and etchings to be displayed in the art gallery will have a value of at least $100,000. In the past few years this feature of the fair has become so popular that many of the pictures could not be hung. It was therefore decided this year to accept paintings only through invitation, giving assurance of an exceptionally high-class display.

Among those who have accepted the invitations are such well-known California artists as Maurice Braun of Point Loma, Oscar Borg and Edward Vysekal of Los Angeles, Karl Yens and Clarence Hinkle of Laguna Beach, Miss Bertha Lum and Spencer and Constance Mackey of San Francisco, C. G. Cooper of Santa Barbara, Armen Hansen of Monterey, Hanson Puthuff of Crescenta, Miss M. DeNeale Morgan of Carmel, Benjamin Brown of Pasadena and Gattardo Piazzoni of Belvedere.

The largest educational display in the history of the fair is also assured. The entire school systems of fourteen counties will have displays in the educational building, with every high, grammar and rural school in those counties represented. In addition there will be exhibits by nearly 200 individual high and grammar schools. Six counties are taking part for the first time this year, showing the steadily increasing interest in this division of the fair. The counties which have entered exhibits to date are San Benito, Napa, Sutter, Colusa, Yuba, Sonoma, Fresno, Sacramento, Monterey, Kern, Placer, Trinity, Nevada and San Diego. Many trophies are to be awarded, in addition to $5,500 in cash premiums.

The horticultural pavilion will be a scene of extraordinary beauty. In honor of the Native Sons and Native Daughters, the decoration scheme of blue and gold will prevail throughout the huge structure. In the rotunda will be a flower show, and the exhibits, representative of nearly forty counties, will establish a new record for quantity and quality of products displayed, as well as for attractiveness in appearance.

In the livestock barns will be seen the most valuable collection of animals ever assembled in California. In the industrial building, poultry sheds and all other branches of the fair the same high standard will prevail.

From a "traveling exposition" with annual premiums of $5,000 as outlined in last month's issue of The Grizzly Bear, the State Fair has developed into a great, permanent educational institution with property worth $1,000,000, annual prizes and premiums of $100,000, and an annual display of products worth $3,000,000.

The board of directors for this year's State Fair are: Robert A. Condee of Chino, president; T. H. Ramsay of Red Bluff, vice-president; Chas. W. Paine of Sacramento, secretary-manager; J. K. Macomber of Tipton, I. L. Borden of San Francisco, John M. Perry of Stockton, Fred H. Bixby of Long Beach, W. H. Brooks of El Centro, Sam H. Greene of Oakland, Edward Dinkel-

NEVADA CITY STEPS OUT

NEVADA CITY, NEVADA COUNTY, THIS year had an Independance Day celebration which those who had the good fortunte to participate in are still talking about. Among the exhibits was one, here illustrated, sponsored by Hydraulic Parlor No. 56 N.S.G.W. of the Nevada County-seat. It drew this tribute from Roy Beach, one of the onlookers:

"Nevada City celebrated the Fourth this year. Not only the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of American Independence, but also in honor of the Pioneers who blazed the trails. Bidding good-bye to kith and kin and turning their faces to the then-unknown West, was, in a way of speaking, as momentous as the Declaration of '76. Our forefathers began a great work, our Pioneers carried it on. It is this spirit, the spirit of '76, the spirit of our Pioneers, we wish to nourish and maintain and from it draw courage and strength for empires and activities yet to come.

"It was in this that Nevada City stepped out. Alive to the possibilities, aglow with the thought of doing something really worthwhile, all did their best, and that proved to be considerable, when outsiders proclaimed the parade alone would do justice to any city twenty times its size.

"Local color, ingenuity and pride make up a combination hard to beat, and all the way along the line were surprises, one after the other, that were hailed enthusiastically. And the outstanding feature, the one that brought nods of approval and looks of admiration, was a representation of the Donner monument by E. J. Kilroy, past president of Hydraulic Parlor No. 56 N.S.G.W., Mrs. E. J. Kilroy, past president of Laurel Parlor No. 6 N.D.G.W. and little Margaret Phariss.

"Here was a masterpiece in thought, in care, in spirit. It carried us back to our forefathers, to the days of do or die. We visioned ourselves in the wilderness,—westward ho!—then journeyed for days and days and stopping each night, it seemed, a little closer to the setting sun. As we pushed on and on, it was then it came to us: that to give up was to go down, and to go down was to perish; that nature either makes a man or breaks him. In the most trying moments we consoled ourselves with thinking of the spirit of our forefathers, of our Pioneers, and imbibed of it as we imbibed of that something of the mountains—it was this that carried us over.

"Yes, it was in this that Nevada City stepped out; the spirit of '76, the Pioneer spirit of Western men, lives on and on."

There is a possibility that the Donner monument representation will be among the attractions in the Admission Day parade at Sacramento, September 9.

HONOR TO THE CALIFORNIA PIONEER

The Grizzly Bear presents herewith the oration of Hon. William Van Voorhies delivered before the Society of California Pioneers at San Francisco on the occasion of the third anniversary of California's admission to statehood, September 9, 1853, seventy-three years ago. The oration appears in the "Quarterly of the Society of California Pioneers," volume 2, number 1.

Born in Tennessee in 1823, Pioneer Van Voorhies arrived in San Francisco, on the "California," February 28, 1849, with a message from President Polk to the people of California. Delivering the message, he embarked upon a noted career as lawyer, statesman, politician, newspaper writer and poet. He was secretary of state under Governors Peter H. Burnett and John Bigler, and July 4, 1850, delivered the Independence Day oration at San Jose. He crossed the great divide at Eureka, Humboldt County, September 6, 1884.—Editor.

"MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN of the Society of California Pioneers: This is the third anniversary of the admission of our state into the union. To the train of events which led to its acquisition and admission, it is needless now to recur minutely. They were inevitable—'manifest destiny' decreed, and Anglo-American energy and enterprise consummated the decree. It was a magnificent but inevitable consummation. Location, climate, soil and productions marked it for our own sooner or later, and though the difficulties of the General Government with Mexico hastened its regeneration, it would have been ultimately none the less certain. The tide which had set westward in 1632 from the shores of the Chesapeake Bay, flowing slowly at first, but surely, at the rate of two miles and a half per year up to 1800, having advanced about 400 miles in the space of 160 years, or as far west as the Ohio River,—thence with increased and yet increasing impetus, rushing at the rate of thirty miles per year to the junction of the Osage with the Missouri River, 900 miles west of the Ohio at Wheeling—was still advancing with resistless force, sweeping away in its course English, Spanish, French and Indian possessions to the base of the Rocky Mountains, and was gradually overleaping even that tremendous barrier. As well might the French and Spanish have expected to remain masters of Louisiana and Florida, or to control the navigation of the Mississippi and Missouri, as Mexico, or any other power, have sought to retain the Californias against the strong necessity of American expansion on their own continent. A Western outlet for Eastern commerce, a great thoroughfare for the commercial nations of the world and homes and employment for accumulating millions, were and are becoming with us a strong necessity. Before it, no matter how, by conquest or by purchase, the grasp of feeble, weak, indolent Mexico must have been ultimately relinquished.

"The immense resources of California—agricultural, commercial and mineral—attracted the attention of our people, and the stupendous idea of a railway—stretching from ocean to ocean, from the Orient to the regions of the setting sun,—struggled into being, and its possession and occupation became at once a 'fixed fact', an absolute fatality. It required no treaty of Queretaro to secure it; it required no war with Mexico to thrust it violently into the embrace of the union. These were adjuncts—auxiliaries, hastening, but not producing, results. Of the Spaniard, the original and proud discoverer of this great continent, this mighty breakwater between two oceans, there remains now comparatively nothing in our pathway of legitimate progress; and with the exception of half a million of French peasants in Lower Canada, tenaciously adhering to the manners and customs which their fathers brought from Normandy two centuries ago, and a third part of that number of planters of French descent in Louisiana, there is nothing left to bear witness to the amazing fact that less than a century ago France was the mistress of the better half of North America—the mighty basins of the Mississippi and the Saint Lawrence.

"But I have not time to pursue this further. It is sufficient that we have acquired the territory, admitted the state, and are building a splendid commonwealth. What Californian, in contemplation of the past, reflection upon the present, and anticipation of the future, does not feel a thrill of proud exultation? I can well remember, and I am not, by many years, one of the 'oldest inhabitants,' when the Bay of San Francisco afforded 'ample room and verge enough' for the easy and unobstructed passage of the largest class mail steamers anywhere between Clark and Rincon Points; when one could make one's way from the summit of Telegraph Hill to the old Parker House by winding down its bare sides (now Broadway and Pacific streets), and leaping the slough (now Jackson street), wading through the bay (now Montgomery street), up a sand bank (now Washington street), to an open space (now Kearny street and the Plaza), thence fifty paces south to the point of destination. I can well remember, also, when an unobtrusive casa, compared with the immense structures which now rise heavenward here and there at 'magnificent distances,' was all in the way of internal, or for that matter external, improvements that met the eye; when the Parker House, the old Portsmouth House, the United States Hotel, Howards' store, the venerable adobe on the Plaza—then a custom house, afterwards a broker's shop and now no more—with one or two other shanties looked to us immigrants of '49 like palaces; when seraped natives chased the wild bullock over the surrounding hills, satisfying a lean, lank traffic, not commerce, with the offering of a hide or a horn; when a Chinese was a lusus naturae, and a woman on the street—which was an imaginary line drawn in red and blue ink on pasteboard—an absolute and unmitigated wonder.

"But now, how changed! The busy hum of active industry, like the tones of 'applauding thunder,' rings from mountain top to the bosom of the valleys; cities and villages, as if by magic, spring up; mountain fastnesses are penetrated and subdued; harbors whiten with the sails of a worldwide commerce; the remote West grasps the hand of the remote East, and Brother Jonathan, the 'Independent,' familiarly exchanges with John, the Chinaman, clocks for silks, teas and chessboard, while 'Hail Columbia' is sung under the walls of Nankin and 'Yankee Doodle' is whistled at the gates of Japan.

"In short, by the acquisition and admission of California, we have brought the world into social as well as commercial contact, and there remains now no such thing as that complex mystery of our school-boy days—the Antipodes. I know that there are those who consider this state of things to be ephemeral—an 'insubstantial pageant,' which is destined to fade and 'leave not a rack behind.' Croakers and skeptics have indulged the same doubts time and time again, of the union itself; but the union has continued to advance, and I must believe, therefore, that California, in spite of their incredulity, is also destined to perform a part in the world's drama at once imposing and permanent. Steamboats and clipper ships, those winged witches of the sea, have followed, and railroads must follow, its acquisition. The vast population gathering upon its shores; the vast interests creating, and the immense resources developing, are not, I submit, the emblems of decay nor the insignia of evanescence.

"I do not pretend to say that we are a perfect people, nor that there are not well-founded objections to our social and political organization. But I do pretend to say that we, I mean the United States, possess the elements of permanent prosperity which, if nourished vigilantly, and warmly cherished, cannot fail to ripen into maturity and produce the fruits of a world's regeneration. Perhaps I am enthusiastic, and am assigning to our people and government a position and influence to which they are not strictly entitled. But when we think of the quiet haven where the 'Mayflower' furled its tattered sails; of the feeble colony—call them Puritans, religious enthusiasts, fanatics, what you will,—planted upon the barren rock at Plymouth; of their revolt in 1775; of their immortal Declaration of 1776; of the sanguinary battles of their protracted Revolution; of the acknowledgment of their Independence, by treaty, in 1783; of the establishment of their great Federative Republic; and then following them in their career of territorial extension and national greatness, through the purchase of Louisiana in 1803, extending their possession south and north to the Pacific Ocean; the reduction of the Indian tribes and the extinguishment of their titles east and west of the Mississippi; the acquisition of Florida in 1819; the annexation of Texas in 1845; and the acquisition of New Mexico and California in 1848; thus in a mere span of time building for themselves a fabric of government under the sunlight of which the deep night of the Old World's systems passes away and the reflected dawn of struggling freedom in Europe heralds the glorious morn and splendid noonday of universal emancipation.

"When we think of all this, I say, is it wonderful or discourteous that we denounce the expression of a doubt touching our prospects of future usefulness or greatness as but the unfounded predictions of unmitigated croakers and inveterate 'fogys,' if you will allow me the use of a designation perhaps less elegant than significantly comprehensive? As with the General Government, so with California. The raven of incredulity is flapping and has flapped its sombre wings upon its pathway since its acquisition and since its admission. For a long time, actuated by these doubts, sagacious capitalists withheld investments; prudent statesmen denied protection; cautious editors at home set their warning types and issued their 'gorylock' bulletins. Our mountains of gold were bubbles, our valleys of sun shine unsubstantial dreams, and our vaunted resources but the ingenious conjurations of conscienceless speculators. Worse than this: a scoundrel, away up in the dark ravines of the Sierra Nevada, demands the purse or life of the adventurous miner, and we are all highwaymen; a dusky Sonorian steals a horse from an obscure 'corral,' and we are all horse thieves; a villian fells a drunken sailor with a slungshot at midnight, and we are all lawless; an incarnate devil fires a house and involves a city in ruins, and we are all incendiaries; an unfortunte, sometimes, but too often dishonest, debtor, 'incontinent does' his creditor, and we are all swindlers. In short, in the opinion of these croakers, there is neither law, order, religion, morality, decency, honor nor honesty amongst us, from the Bay of Humboldt to the mouth of the Gila, from Pah-Utah to the Pacific.

"But in the teeth of all this, we have steadily —nay, rapidly,—progressed. We have founded schools, we have erected churches, we have formed social organizations, temperance societies; sewing societies—not the least civilizing, by any means,—religious associations, and we have established and endowed institutions for the sick, the blind, the insane, to say nothing of the wicked and the vicious, for whom ample provision is made in the way of county jails and state prisons. In addition to this, we have formed a code of laws to supplant another entirely dissimilar; we have wrought system out of confusion; we have practically legislated for interests, and beneficially, too, which could not in the nature of things be at once thoroughly ascertained and comprehended; and we have done a great deal more than elsewhere could have been accomplished in a quarter of a century.

"It was and is to be expected that out of the incongrous materials which the discovery of gold, the occupation of a new territory, the settlement of a new world, had collected here, there could not immediately be wrought a perfect, entire, symmetrical edifice, morally or politically. Rash and reckless adventurers, men without character or principle, desperadoes and outcasts, were, of coursè, amongst the emigrants lured hither by what at first seemed fabulous stories of golden treasures concealed in the bowels of prolific mountains. Some of this character are yet amongst us, but their ability to do evil grows 'small by degrees and beautifully less.' A higher moral sentiment begins to obtain, a purer public opinion begins to prevail, and as a consequence, back to their dens and hiding-places begin to skulk these lawless, reckless ruffians, who were wont to stalk abroad at noonday and who made the early history of our state hideous with their accursed revels. I am not disposed to disguise it, that we still have much to do—morally, socially and politically—before about the hom of our adoption will cluster the elevating, refining, purifying influences that make glad the homes of our nativity. I know that there are still bad men here who are exerting bad influences; that the standard of public morals is not yet the purest; that an entirely healthy and controlling public opinion is not yet formed; that virtue is not yet the 'bright particular star' of our earnest worship, nor vice yet become that

'Monster of such hideous mien,
That to be hated needs but to se seen.'

"I know that in our eager search for gold we may, for a time, have lost sight of and neglected much that is chastening, softening and elevating. Domestic altars have not kept pace with the construction of temples devoted to the service of Mammon; family ties have snapped with the powerful tension of grasping avarice, and too many of us could detect no beauty in anything unconnected with gold or silver. But such is not the case now. A change in this respect is rapidly passing over the spirit of our dream. We are still a commercial, trading, business people; we have great respect for the 'almighty dollar,' because within its shining circumference are railroads, steamboats and clipper ships, together with great cities, affording employment and a competency for the laborer, and subsistence and home comforts for the comparatively indigent and industrious. At the same time, be it remembered, we are no longer a 'motley multitude' of mere temporary sojourners, lured hither by a sordid dream of gold, and intending immediately upon realizing a 'pile' to depart hence. We are citizens, permanently identified with the present and prospective interests of our adopted state. Wives and children, brothers, sisters and mothers are here, and homes, with their happy and cheerful firesides, and their throbbing circle of affectionate hearts genially penetrating the ruggedness, if you please, of California society are here waking us to a sense of the warmth and beauty of social life. We may have been wayward, but we are young; we may have been rude, but it was the rudeness of undisciplined childhood, which youth will soften and manhood chasten and subdue. A few years, and the untrained energies of the boy will have matured

MONUMENT TO MARK HISTORIC SPOT

Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes

(DIRECTOR AND CURATOR HISTORICAL SOCIETY SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.)

An imposing monument, marking an historic spot—the battle of La Mesa—in Los Angeles County, is to be dedicated Admission Day, September 9. It is the gift of Arthur G. Leonard, president of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, and Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific Railroad. While situated upon private property of the stock yards company, the site has been set aside for the monument. The program for the monument's dedication appears in the Los Angeles Bulletin section of this issue of The Grizzly Bear.

The accompanying article was prepared by Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes of the Historical Society of Southern California. It tells of La Mesa battle, describes the monument and gives a brief sketch of the careers of Commodore Robert Field Stockton and Lieutenant Joseph Warren Revere. Mrs. Forbes, while not a native Californian, is a lover of the historic landmarks of the state and an indefatigable worker for their preservation and marking—Editor.

ON THE PLAINS TO THE SOUTHEAST of Los Angeles, the part of the San Antonio rancho owned by Bandini, where the administration building of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards Company now stands, there occurred January 9, 1847, the battle of La Mesa, which proved to be the last stand of the California revolutionary forces, under command of General Jose Maria Flores, to save California to Mexico. It was little more than a skirmish, but was a decided victory to the Americans. The California (Mexican) forces retreated, leaving Commodore Robert Field Stockton and his men in possession of the field. Commodore Stockton's account of the engagement, as given in his official report to Secretary of the United States Navy George Bancroft, dated February 5, 1847, follows:

"At nine o'clock (January 9, 1847) our column commenced its march taking a direct course over the plain of the Mesa, towards Cuidad de los Angeles. We had advanced some six miles when the enemy appeared in front, deployed in open order, their line extending nearly across our road. Approaching a ravine to the left of their line in front, the enemy opened fire from their artillery, masked upon the edge of the bank, but with no other effect than killing an ox and a mule in the center of the square. Our artillery soon returned the fire while still continuing the march; the enemy now brought up two other pieces of artillery; our column halted; our artillery on the two flanks in front was now placed in battery. The six-pounder under Acting Master Thompson, upon our right flank in rear, now opened fire upon the enemy's nine-pounder, the shot telling upon it and cutting away the fixtures about the gun at every fire. The enemy in front and the right was now distant about six hundred yards; the nine-pounders, one of them in charge of Mr. Southwick, soon made it so warm for their artillery in front that the enemy bore it off to the rear.

"A reinforcement now joined them, and, soon after dawn, they came upon us, charging upon the left flank, front and rear. A shower of lead from the musketry under Renshaw and Guest, and Passed Midshipman Duncan's carbineers (who had today taken post on the left flank), being well delivered, at a distance of eighty yards, did so much havoc that their courage failed and caused them to draw off more to the rear, which had until this moment stood firm without firing a shot. The four-pounder now poured forth a charge of grape upon a party of the enemy about thirty yards distant, hurling four from their saddles, and they began to retire. The Californians now retreated, and we pursued our march along the Mesa and crossed the Rio San Fernando about three miles below the town, where we camped for the night." (Note—The name of the river should be Rio San Gabriel.)

The camp for the night was made at a grove of stately, wide-spreading sycamore trees that had long been a landmark on the road from Mission San Gabriel to Los Angeles. They proved to be the means of perfectly identifying the sight of the battle by two men who were participants in the skirmish—Major Edwin A. Sherman and Dr. John S. Griffin. A drawing of the location of the camp and battlefield was made at the time by W. H. Emory and was attached as part of the official records. The sycamores have been destroyed, the last one being chopped down by a wrecking company only last year, 1925.

Dr. John S. Griffin was assistant surgeon, United States Army, and made the following report of the wounded, which is copied from the official records:

"Wounded on the 9th, January, 1847. 1st, Mark A. Child, private, company C, 1st regiment of dragoons, gunshot wound in the right heel, penetrating upwards into the ankle-joint—serious; 2nd, James Cambell, ordinary seaman, United States ship Congress, company D, carbineers, wound in right foot, second toe amputated, accidental discharge of his own carbine—severe; 3rd, George Crawford, boatswain's mate United States ship Cyane, company D, musketeers, wound in left thigh—severe. Lieutenant Rowan, United States Navy and Captain Gillespie, California battalion, slightly contused by spent balls. I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient servant, John S. Griffin, Assistant Surgeon, United States Army."

We have no list of the killed or wounded of the California (Mexican) forces, but as many were seen unhorsed and carried away it is generally conceded that there was greater fatality among the revolutionists than among the United States troops. The armies were about equal in size and equipment. Commodore Stockton says, in his official report:

"We commenced our march on the 29th of December (from San Diego), with Captain Turner's company of 1st dragoons, dismounted, aided by Lieutenant Davidson; six pieces of artillery under Lieutenant R. L. Tilghman and Passed Midshipman William H. Thompson; Captain Gillespie's squadron of mounted riflemen, acting as the advance, the rear, and vanguard; the marines of the Congress and the Portsmouth, under Captain J. Zeilin, adjutant of the battalion; the musketeers of the Congress, Savannah, Cyane, and Portsmouth, commanded by Lieutenant William B. Renshaw, Passed Midshipman George E. Morgan, J. Van Ness Philips, Theodore Lee, Albert Allmand, B. F. Wells, Edward C. Grafton, Robert C. Duvall, Philip H. Haywood and William Simons, commodore's clerk; the carbineers of the Congress and Cyane, under the orders of Passed Midshipman Joseph Parish and Edmund Shepherd; in all a strength of about six hundred men. Brigadier-General Kearney commanding the division, and Lieutenant S. C. Rowan, from the ship Cyane, major of brigade; Captain W. H. Emory, of the topographical engineers, acting adjutant-general; Lieutenant George Miner, of the Savannah, quartermaster, in charge of transportation, aided by Mr. Daniel Fisher. Mr. Speiden, the purser of the Congress, performed the duties of commissary, aided by Mr. John Bidwell. Mr. Southwick, carpenter of the Congress, acted as chief engineer at the head of the sappers and miners. Dr. John S. Griffin, of the army, Dr. Andrew A. Henderson, of the Portsmouth, and Dr. Charles Eversfield, of the Congress, attended the troops. Lieutenant A. F. V. Gray and Captain Miguel de Pedrovena, aides-de-camp to the commander-in-chief."

After the battle of La Mesa the California (Mexican) troops retreated toward Los Angeles. Realizing that, with the entrance of Commodore Stockton and General Kearney with their troops into Los Angeles and the advance of Major John C. Fremont with an equal number of troops from the north, the utter impossibility of further resistance, General Flores turned the command of the California (Mexican) troops over to his assistants in the revolution, Jose Antonio Carillo and Andres Pico, and fled to Mexico.

The revolutionists returned to their homes or spread throughout the country, leaving but about one hundred and fifteen or twenty to meet and make terms of peace with Fremont. This was done on the 13th of January when the articles of capitulation, generally referred to as the Treaty of Cauenga, were signed at Campo de Cauenga by General Andres Pico and his appointed commissioners and Major John C. Fremont and his appointees. By this treaty California became a United States possession. There was no skirmish or engagement at Cauenga, thus leaving the battle of the Mesa as the last of the encounters between the California (Mexican) forces and the United States troops.

THE MONUMENT

A monument formed of four great granite boulders stands in front of the administration building of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards Company as an enduring memorial to the men who took part in the battle of La Mesa January 9, 1847. There were no fatalities, only wounded men, but some of the injuries were very serious. These boulders are there to remind all of us that the men were willing and ready to die in the discharge of their sworn duty. There is no greater or higher obligation.

At a conference held by the officers of the stock yards company, the Historical Society of Southern California and the Native Sons of the Golden West it was decided to mark this historic site of the battle of La Mesa. At the time of the battle the surrounding country was virtually uninhabited and mainly a cattle range. Therefore, to select a suitable monument that would reflect in a manner the character of the virgin country was taken into consideration, with the result that unchiseled native rock was selected and the great boulders decided on.

Arthur G. Leonard, president of the stock yards company, conferred with Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific system of railroads, who at once showed his great interest in this historical work by ordering an extended search throughout the canyons of several states, that suitable boulders might be found. Happy, indeed, was the committee when the great massive rocks that form the monument were located in California's own Arroyo Seco of San Gabriel. It took many men, with giant cranes and powerful engines, to dislodge and work the boulders out of their native hillside, and greater effort to load them upon trucks and haul them to their present home.

J. A. McNaughton and R. R. Mason attended to the proper allocation of the boulders and even weighed them, that we may have the pleasure of knowing that there are thirty tons of granite forming this imposing monument. The greatest of the boulders weighs over nine tons, two of them about seven tons each and the crowning one six and a half. The top boulder is in the form of an arrow, with the vortex resting within the hollow of the three that form the base. Upon this arrow-like boulder the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West has placed a bronze tablet with the following inscription: "On This Spot Was Fought La Batalla de la Mesa, Battle of La Mesa, January 9th, 1847. Commodore Robert Field Stockton, U. S. Navy, in Command of American Forces, and General Jose Maria Flores, Commanding the 'Californians.' Tablet Placed by Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, Assisted by Historical Society of Southern California. Sept. 9th, 1926."

Upon two of the great boulders forming the base, the stockyards company has placed tablets to the memory of Commodore Robert Field Stockton and Lieutenant Joseph Warren Revere. Upon the right boulder is a medallion of Commodore Stockton and the following words: "Commodore Robert Field Stockton, U. S. N. Born, Princeton, N. J.; Died 1866. Governor and Commander-in-chief American Forces in California from July 23rd, 1846, to Jan'y. 16th, 1847. Captured and First Raised Flag of U. S. at Los Angeles, Aug. 13th, 1846. Recaptured Los Angeles, Jan'y. 10th, 1847. Tablet Placed by Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, Assisted by Historical Society of Southern California. Sept. 9th, 1926."

Upon the left one a medallion of Lieutenant Revere and the words: "Lieutenant Joseph Warren Revere, U. S. N., Late Brig. General U. S. A. Born May 17th, 1812, Boston, Mass. Grandson of Colonel Paul Revere of American Revolution, 1775-1783. Birth of American Liberties! Lowered Bear Flag and Unfurled the Stars and Stripes (End of the California Republic and Birth of 31st State) at Sonoma, California, July 9th, 1846. Tablet Placed by Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, Assisted by Historical Society of Southern California. Sept 9th, 1926."

Upon either side of this wonderful mass of native rock, the generous and gracious gift to the public of Carl R. Gray, are placed two flagpoles, that the Flag of the United States and the State (Bear) Flag of California may fly upon all patriotic and special days. The inscribed boulders, the flying flags and the attractive administration building of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards Company, in typical design of California architecture, form a worthy and beautiful monument to mark the historic site of the battle of La Mesa. The dedication takes places at high noon, September 9, Admission Day.

THE SPOT SELECTED FOR THE PERmanent mission is about six miles up the valley from the original settlement on Presidio Hill. It possesses every advantage, in the way of soil and water, of sheltering hills and gentle climate, for an agricultural, industrial and pastoral establishment under a patriarchal form of government, like that of the mission fathers. If there was a drawback, it was the fact that the river did not furnish water at all seasons, and that some engineering skill and a large amount of labor were required to secure a reliable supply for the orchards and gardens. A perennial stream would have been an improvement, yet the water problem was readily solved after a time by going a few miles up the river, building a dam and conducting a supply to the place of use by means of tunnels and ditches. This was not done, however, at first, nor was there urgent need of it until the community had grown to some size. There was good pasturage; grain could be raised without irrigation; and water could be had from the natural flow of the stream for one crop of vegetables and small fruits each season, while the rich soil along the river, with plenty of underground water not far from the surface, encouraged the growth of trees. Thus the missionaries were able to make an early start in their new location and could safely reserve the finer forms of development until the time when they should be called upon to sustain hundreds or thousands by a more intensive cultivation of the soil.

Aside from these material considerations, the place must have appealed powerfully to the devoted priests. It was like their native Spain in all its essential aspects; it was in the midst of the Gentiles whom they wished to christianize and to make useful in field and shop; and the scenery offered by hill and valley, by sea and mountains, was as charming as the eye of man ever beheld. So there the missionaries went in August 1774, to make a new start and to lay the foundations of a mission which they fondly hoped might last for many centuries. For more than a year the work proceeded prosperously, with a constant increase in the number of converts, with growing herds and increasing crops, and with Fathers Fuster and Jaume in charge of affairs. All was as quiet as the hills and peaceful as the sunshine. The converted Indians seemed to enter more and more into the true spirit of the work.

Thus they celebrated the feast of Saint Francis, founder of the Franciscan order, with every evidence of satisfaction, on October 3 and 4, 1775. On the first day the priests baptized sixty new converts, and on the next day Spaniards and Indians assisted in the solemn mass and procession and, later, joined in sport and play. And yet within a month of that time the Indians rose in revolt, the mission was wiped from the face of the earth, and the cause of the Franciscans received a staggering blow at the moment when its promoters felt entirely secure.

There is no explanation of the event except the innate cruelty of the Indian character. They had received nothing but kindness from the missionaries. The soldiers had not attempted to oppress them. Those who had accepted the new faith had ben clothed and fed, while those who rejected the faith had been let alone. The Spaniards had been in the country for more than six years, and if the savages resented their presence it took them a long time to discover their state of mind. Had they been a people of any spirit they could have expelled or annihilated the intruders at short notice and killed the seed of civilization wherever it touched the soil. Instead, they acquiesced in the Spanish occupation, took all they could get from the missionaries, and then, when they had fully established their friendly character, turned into demons and sought to strike down the hand that was leading them from darkness to light. Such was the way of the Indian.

A few days after the feast, two of the new converts slyly left the mission and returned to the mountains, where they proceeded to agitate for a movement against the Spaniards, visiting one rancheria after another to urge an uprising. They found most of the villages eager for the adventure, though a few declined to have any part in it. November 4, 1775, was fixed upon as the date for the attack, and large numbers of Indians wended their way toward the seacoast to engage in the affair. The plan was to divide forces and attack the mission and the presidio, which were six miles apart, simultaneously, and it was arranged that the firing of the mission should be the signal for the attack upon the presidio. The eagerness of the force assigned to the mission saved the presidio, for the party which was headed down the valley saw the flames at the mission and reasoned that the soldiers at the fort would be alarmed at the sight and thus prepared to resist attack. They overestimated the Spanish soldiers, who were sound asleep instead of standing faithfully on guard; and they slept through that fateful night in blissful ignorance of the tragedy in progress a few miles up Mission Valley. The Indians, however, turned back and joined their companions in the assault upon the mission buildings. Thus it happened that the savages were eight hundred strong when they stealthily surrounded the sleeping Spaniards — eight hundred sneaking cowards, marshaled for a battle against eight friendly Whites under cover of midnight darkness! Surely, they should have made short work of them, yet when day dawned there were White men still alive in the mission and it was the savages who were fleeing, laden with dead and wounded. But it was an awful night up there in the shadow of the hills, where the stars looked down upon a scene which seemed eloquent of peace.

The first move of the Indians was to surround the huts of the converts, waken them gently, and command them to remain quiet, on pain of instant death; the next, to invade the vestry and steal the church ornaments. Evidently, none of the Spaniards were troubled with insomnia, for these preliminaries were accomplished without rousing them. Then the Indians snatched fire brands from the campfire which still burned in front of the guardhouse and applied them to the building, which was soon enveloped in flames. At last, the savages were ready to announce their presence, which they did by sending a horrible war-cry with all the power of their eight hundred lungs.

There were sleeping in the mission the two priests, Fathers Fuster and Jaume, two children who were the son and nephew of Lieutenant Ortega (then absent at Capistrano), four soldiers, two carpenters and a blacksmith—eleven in all, but only eight who could fight, as one of the carpenters was confined to his bed with illness and the children could do little but shriek.

The soldiers got to work promptly with their muskets and Father Fuster joined them in the guardhouse with the children. The blacksmith tried to do the same, but was killed in the attempt. One of the carpenters succeeded in reaching the guardhouse, but the one who was confined to his bed was terribly wounded and died the next day. "O Indian thou hast killed me, may God pardon thee!" he exclaimed, and when he made his testament the next morning, he left to the mission Indians his small savings and belongings. Could there be a more striking evidence of the lofty spirit with which the fathers imbued those around them than the Christ-like attitude of this dying carpenter?

But it is Father Luis Jaume who will stand out forever in boldest relief as men read the story of that terrible night. He was quickly awakened and instantly understood what was happening, yet he did not seek the shelter of the guardhouse nor seize a weapon for defense. He walked straight to the nearest and wildest group of savages and, extending his arms and smiling a gracious greeting, said: "Children, love God!" If there was ever a moment when the phrase, "Love God," meant "Love your fellow men," it was the moment when this saintly priest stood without fear in the midst of those howling demons. He loved them and would not have harmed a hair of their heads, but they fell upon him in overwhelming numbers, dragged him down to the river, tore his clothes from his body, tortured and stabbed him, and left him a mutilated mass of unrecognizable flesh.

In the meantime the six men and two children in the guardhouse were fighting for their lives in the midst of roaring flames. The place became too hot for them, and they decided to move into a slight building adjoining, which served as a temporary kitchen. It had only three sides and was wide open to attack on the other, and through this open side came constant volleys of arrows, clubs and firebrands. To improve their situation, the defenders brought boxes, sacks and chests from the adjoining storeroom and thus barricaded the open side. Only three remained to carry on the fight—two soldiers and Father Fuster—as all the others had been disabled. At this critical moment the party of Indians who had gone to the presidio returned and reinforced the crowd at the mission. It was then that the priest noticed that one of the chests forming the improvised breastwork contained all the powder that remained and was in imminent danger of exploding, for it was already afire.

He seized it, extinguished the flames, and, with the aid of the two children, proceeded to load the guns for the soldiers, who shot as fast as they could, and always shot to kill. So the fearful night wore on. Daybreak came, and the craven beseigers had not dared to carry the frail shanty and overwhelm its two active defenders by bold assault. They picked up their dead and wounded and went back to the mountains, leaving the presidio untouched, but the mission a smoking ruin.

The neophytes crawled out of their huts and, with tears and sobs, assured Father Fuster and his bleeding companions that they had been closely confined throughout the night and unable to lift a hand in their defense. This was probably true enough, yet it seems a pity that they did not avail themselves of the opportunity to write one noble page to the credit of their race by showing some evidence of loyalty to those who had befriended them. However, Father Fuster required no explanations, but sent some of the converts to notify the presidio, and others to finding the missing priest, Father Jaume. They found the lacerated corpse by the river and identified it by reason of its whiteness.

The lazy incompetents at the presidio listened with widemouthed wonder to the tale which the Indian messengers brought them from the mission. They had heard nothing, seen nothing, during the night, but had slept disgracefully well.

The destruction of the Mission of San Diego was a stunning blow to the Franciscans, and, indeed, to the whole scheme of Spanish settlement on the coast of California. The vibrations of the shock did not stop at Presidio Hill, but went on up the coast and culminated at Monterey in the form of a general alarm. A relief party was at once put in motion, and Father Serra hastened south to lend the inspiration of his courage and of his indomitable persistence in the holy cause. There was no serious thought of abandoning the settlement, for this would have encouraged both Indian and foreign aggression and might have put an end to Spanish dominion much sooner than it came in response to the inexorable logic of events.

The survivors of the mission fight were removed to the presidio and tenderly nursed back to health. The dead were buried at the presidio, but many years afterwards the body of Father Luis Jaume was removed to the mission and placed between the altars, where it yet rests. The place where he sleeps should be marked by an imperishable monument, for he was one of those rarest of heroes who, refusing to do violence even in self-defense, look smilingly into the face of death and go down to the dust with a prayer for their enemies on their saintly lips.

SAN DIEGO'S MARINE TRAFFIC on INCREASE

(W. S. CARSON,
San Diego Chamber of Commerce.)

The outstanding feature of the growth of San Diego is the rapid, yet steady, increase of marine traffic passing through the port. The growth has been most marked during the last five years, having its inception about 1920. Since that year both the volume of shipping and the work of harbor improvement have forged ahead steadily and today there is every indication that this increase will continue for a number of years to come. San Diego is becoming widely recognized as one of the chief ports of the Pacific Coast and because of its location, making it the first port of call north of the Panama Canal, it is assured further recognition.

Some idea of the growth of business of the port may be gained from comparison of tonnage and values. In 1921 the value of imports and exports was fixed at $18,213,149. In 1925 this had risen to $35,361,684, and so far this year the monthly reports indicate the upward swing of the curve will be continued. Tonnage in 1925 amounted to 820,560.

In 1921 there were only three steamship lines operating out of San Diego Harbor. Today there are twenty-one lines, representing the principal ports of the world, docking at local piers regularly. Cotton is the chief export product. One of the items was thirty-five tons of honey, all produced in San Diego County.

To meet the increased demands for dockage space and facilities for handling larger numbers of vessels, the harbor commission has been hard pressed in its development of the natural conditions. Last year the new mole pier was erected. More recently 340 feet of bulkheads have been completed, with a consequent addition of eighty acres of land through dredging and filling the newly-enclosed area. Dredging of areas "D," "E" and "F" is now under way, which makes the depth over the bar at low tide thirty-six feet and will allow vessels of deep draft to tie up on the north side of the new pier. The extension of the No. 1 pier is being urged by the harbormaster, as this would practically double the berthing space.

NATIVE SONS ARRANGE FOR ADMISSION DAY'S OBSERVANCE.

Officers of San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W. were installed August 2 by D.D.G.P. Steven Dove, Edward H. Dowell becoming president. Several candidates were initiated, and refreshments were served. Among the speakers of the evening were Grand Secretary John T. Regan of San Francisco, Grand Trustee John T. Newell of Los Angeles and Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, "San Diego's own."

Congressman Phil D. Swing affiliated with the Parlor August 23 and presented a framed copy of President Coolidge's proclamation giving to the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West the privilege to erect upon the Federal Government reservation, at the site of the old Spanish lighthouse on Point Loma, a monument to the memory of Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo. He also presented excellent suggestions as to how to raise the required funds for this tribute to the first White man to ever set foot upon California's soil. August 30 was given over to an old-timers' night celebration.

Admission Day, September 9, is to be recognized in San Diego this year, the Native Sons having arranged a celebration at Mission Beach. In the afternoon there will be a kiddies' historical pageant, and in the evening, in the ballroom, another historical pageant, staged by Native Sons and Native Daughters, who will represent famous California characters from the state's beginning to date. An old stagecoach, appropriately decorated and "passengered," will parade the streets of San Diego, calling attention to California's birthday party at the beach. John J. Howley and Joe Switzer have charge of the day's arrangements for the Parlor.

San Diego will be represented at the state-wide Admission Day celebration at Sacramento, too, No. 108 having arranged with Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, a member of San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W. residing in the Capital City, to have a floral float in the parade there.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS INSTALL.

Officers of San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W. were installed July 27 by D.D.G.P. Rosina M. Hertzbrun, Martha Klindt becoming president. Virginia Burke, retiring president, was the recipient of an emblematic pin, and presentations were made to the district deputy and officers. Refreshments were served by a committee of which Gertrude Farwell was chairman.

CALIFORNIA COUNTIES' NAMES

Former Grand Trustee N.D.G.W.)

THE FOLLOWING, RELATING TO THE derivation of the names of the twenty-seven original counties of California, created February 18, 1850, should prove of interest to all Californians, and particularly to the native borns:

Butte—French word for "detached hills," the name having been applied by French trappers to what are now known as the Marysville or Sutter Buttes.

Calaveras—Spanish word for skulls, used by Captain Moraga in naming the Calaveras River, along which he found many skulls, remains of Indian wars.

Colusa—After the Colusi Indians, and said to mean "scratcher." Colusi brides had the privilege of scratching their husbands' faces, hence the name.

Contra Costa—Meaning the "opposite coast" from San Francisco.

El Dorado—After the Spanish romance concerning a fabulous land of genial climate, never-fading verdure and precious metals.

Los Angeles—First referred to by the Spanish as "the town of the river of Our Lady, Queen of the Angels," the Virgin Mary.

Marin—After the chief of the Licatiut Indians who was baptized by the padres as "Marinero,' the mariner, because of his intimate knowledge of San Francisco and his skill in handling ferry boats.

Mariposa—Meaning "butterfly," and named by early explorers who found in that section beautiful lilies resembling the wings of butterflies.

Mendocino—After the cape discovered by Ferello and named for Mendoza, first viceroy of Mexico.

Monterey—After the bay discovered by Viscaino and named for his friend, the Count of Monterey.

Napa—Indian word for fish, with which the streams of the section teemed.

Sacramento—After the river which was named by the Spanish, signifying the holy sacrament.

San Diego—After Saint James, on whose day the bay was discovered.

San Francisco—After Saint Francis, on whose day the mission was founded.

San Joaquin—Referring to the parentage of the Virgin Mary and first used by Moraga in naming a stream which emptied into Buena Vista Lake, the name later being given to the large river of the valley.

San Luis Obispo—After Saint Louis.

Santa Barbara—After Saint Barbara, patron saint of sailors, and named by Viscaino when he passed this point on the saint's day.

Santa Clara—In honor of the founder of the Order of Saint Clara.

Santa Cruz—Meaning holy cross, a cross having been set up to mark the site of the mission.

Shasta—After the Indian Shastika tribe, the word meaning "cave dweller."

Solano—After the chief of the Suisune Indians, who was baptized by a missionary named Francisco Solano.

Sonoma—Indian word for "Valley of the Moon." The name was given to the chief of the Chocuyens when he was baptized.

Sutter—After the founder of Sutter Fort, John A. Sutter.

Trinity—After Trinidad Bay, discovered on Trinity Sunday.

Tuolumne—After Tahmalamne Indians, the word meaning caves or stones.

Yolo—After the Yoloy Indians, the word meaning "a place thick with rushes."

Yuba—From "uva," Spanish word for grapes, which were found there in abundance by Spanish explorers.

THE OLEO BILL.

Farmers are being urged to support the oleomargarine bill, which comes before the voters as a referendum measure at the November election. This bill was passed by the last Legislature and signed by the governor, but importing interests succeeded in obtaining a referendum. This measure, let it be clearly understood, does not prohibit the sale of oleomargarine or other butter substitutes, but it does provide that they cannot be sold so that the consumer thinks he is getting butter. Dairymen recognize the right of importers to sell produce from the Orient, but they are not willing it shall be sold in the guise of a product that costs more and upon which one of California's greatest agricultural industries is founded.

TREATMENT IMPROVED.

Round worms in poultry are controlled by administering capsules containing nicotine, but the process has been always a difficult one. In San Diego County, however, one poultryman has improved on the plan of putting the capsule in the hen's mouth and rubbing it down her neck. He takes a hard rubber tube with a wire plunger, inserts the tube into the hen's throat, pushes the capsule down and the dose is in her crop. He handles the 6,000 hens on his farm himself, treating them as fast as an assistant can hand them to him. He has lost but one bird by the treatment, and that he ascribes to carelessness.

Grape Day—Escondido, San Diego County, will stage its nineteenth anual grape-day festival Admission Day, September 9.

WILMINGTON VALUES STABLE

(W. T. CORBUSIER.)

IT HAS BEEN A SOURCE OF GREAT SURprise to many that during the past year or so of depression Wilmington real estate values have suffered no appreciable lowering, but, in proximity to the harbor, shown an upward trend. This, however, to the writer and those familiar with conditions, appears simple of explanation.

Realty values seem to radiate or revolve around a hub or center of activity. Wilmington proper is a very small area (some 9.92 square miles) the destiny of whose several localities, which are defined by the railroads, various inner harbor channels, boulevards and hills, is fairly certain. This last boom (as in the case of the previous one) revolved around the harbor and from Wilmington, as the center of the district, received its momentum. With the upward trend, the values increased in greater general proportion the farther the activity was removed from the hub.

Wilmington had been practically all subdivided for many years and the sudden acquiring of thousands of acres to the north by the big oil interests made expansion impossible. The small, or average, speculator looks for new ground; and the opening of a new subdivision or unit is his signal to plunge and usually overload. When everyone does this, the boom is on.

With this clearly in mind, it is plain why Wilmington, with its very limited area, was not inflated but kept on its steady and healthy growth. When the intense activity ceased there was very little adjustment necessary. The speculator of limited means had not been able to acquire all his heart desired and we were therefore left with the ones who could afford to hold on to what they had purchased. True, there were those who were forced out, but there has always been someone to pick up the sacrifices when offered.

In consequence, Wilmington was ready to step forward again long before the present activity began. Big projects move slowly. Henry Ford did not make up his mind over night to locate in Wilmington, but studied the whole field for many months. Options of large areas reveal the fact that others are no doubt doing likewise. This is why values are bound to increase, regardless of fluctuations or depressions in other localities. Values are determined of course by demand and supply, but when these are linked with dire necessity and a certainty of lowering of production cost and delivery, then there can be no doubt as to the stability of them.

Wilmington has become a necessity—not only to the manufacturer of commodities and the shipper, but to you and to me. This necessity is increasing at an enormous rate, and with it the supply becomes more limited. There is only one direction in which to expand—and that is skyward.

"AND NOW ABOUT THE SCHOOL DRESSES"

SUMMER HAS BEGUN TO LANGUISH and autumn, the most exquisite of seasons, is already in the air. Going off to school is one of life's big moments. It is the sort of thing that is done only a few times in a lifetime, and a whole lot depends on going properly equipped.

It is not so much the number of things one has to choose from, as it is knowing just what choice to make. One will want, of course, a smart traveling suit. Tweeds and checks are new this season, and they are such a happy thought for travel, as they do not show dust.

Perhaps one would like one of the plaid coats in the softer shades, like cocoa and darker brown to wear over a one-piece dark dress. Or one may wear nicely one of the new stroller coat-suits of checked wool. Black and white is good, or the brown and tan checks would be very pretty, should one have copper-colored hair. If one's traveling suit is plaid, a coat of dark color is suggested.

And now about the school dresses. One will want them rather tailored. Personally, I like jersey for one or maybe two of them, in some of the pretty new shades. There is a brand new make of jersey now, that does not sag nor stretch, which is an item to be considered. One will want a pretty silk dress or so, and why not choose satin crepe, which may have the satin side reversed for trimming. I have seen some stunning little afternoon dresses in black moire that are sophisticated, yet becomingly youthful.

Evening dresses should be simple to be smart, and there is such a range of colors and materials—perfectly delightful pastel tones, hollyhock pinks, maize, ash green and fascinating violet hues. All of which lend themselves to taffeta, or to the softer whims of georgette. They are quite bouffant as to skirt, and trimmed with a lovely artificial flower or a touch of black velvet ribbon.

There are dance slippers to match one's dance frock, and for afternoon some pretty one-strap slippers, either in the new two-tone combination leathers or in black patent leather, which is always good. A pair of low-heeled oxfords, to be worn with silk and lisle hose in some of the lighter tan shades, are good for school wear.

All girls know just what is most boyish and clever in sports and out-of-door togs, but do not overlook a light-weight sweater of some gay horizontal stripe and weave, as well as a swagger coat sweater.

The soft little felt hat will be serviceable for school when one wishes to wear a hat. And the larger shapes are charming with an afternoon frock.

The accessories must be chosen with great consideration, since the budget is not unlimited, and the best plan is to use the larger part of the available funds for coats, dresses and sports clothes of the more substantial nature. However, enough should be allowed so that one may have a long, flat, black, lacquer box to contain some sports ties to wear with the tailored blouses, a gay futuristic scarf of orange and black, and several pairs of washable pull-on gloves.

The styles of the elders are visited upon the daughters of the present generation, who wear them with amazing chic. They look with favor on the young lines of the two-piece mode and make it theirs by right of youth. They appropriate the prevailing vogues in plaits, shirrings, saddle shoulders, tucks, belts, soft blousings, scalloped edges, cape backs, the usual and unusual in collars and all the changes that ring upon the long sleeves. They wear their skirts but a little shorter than their elders, and all in all they are a very smart and very charming younger generation. They can hardly be otherwise, while it is so very fashionable just to be young.

The businesswoman finds simple frocks in tan, brown and green practical for autumn wear. Kasha, twill, crepe and velvet come in harmonizing shades of rust, brown, beige and gray.

The popularity of plaids is again attested in the ensemble. They may be developed in either a light or dark combination. Whatever the materials may be, the plaid and plain materials of red, gray and black are bound to be most striking.

Colors and plaids reflect autumn tints—color and more color. All the lovely shades that nature tints for us in the fall of the year will be reflected in autumn costumes. Glowing reds, browns, hunter's green and bewildering blues and grays all come in the most varied shades, so that the wearer may select the ones most flattering. The delightful plaids are especially charming in yarn-dyed silks.

Capes are being taken on slowly. Perhaps it is only the smart woman with a complete wardrobe who wishes to invest in a garment which, after all, is not so practical as the long outer coat or the tailored suit with the short jacket. There must be variety in outer garment combinations of wool, reps and flowered crepes, made with a short cape attachment. The cape, like the lower part of the gown, is made of the woolen material. The top of the gown is made of the same crepe which lines the cape. The woolen sports cape often has a lining of another material. Plain and embossed satin is used for the velvet evening cape. The new collars are round, like boas. Some are fur trimmed and others have appliqued band of wool in two shades. Buttons lend a bit of charm, and fur trimmings often appear from top to bottom. A great deal of woolen embroidery is done directly on the material or laid over it in the form of lattice work, ending in an inch deep fringe.

Most dresses have the belt line about the hips. It is impossible to ignore the many attempts to popularize a higher waist line. Belts are worn in an increasing numbers, and seem to be creeping upwards.

High chokers are not universally accepted. Some women think they give an aging appearance to the chin and, after all, why wear them when the cut out neck is so becoming? The square cut neck is considered smarter and newer than the round outline that has governed the summer fashion.

Sleeves are all worn long for the daytime and offer a charming diversity of styles this year. Very popular is the balloon sleeve, placed between wrist and elbow, and trimmed with cross or little ecru lace valants that are repeated in the collar.

While most vests tuck beneath the gown, there are some smart examples of batiste and embroideries that fasten generally with buttons over the gown front. We are only beginning the era of batiste attachments, and so that the effect may not be cheapened much fine lace, hand embroideries and fine hand pleats are used.

For street as well as sports wear, shoes of both suede and leather are a welcome addition to the fall fashions.

Smart use is made of gold, silver or red leather for trimmings on beige and kasha collars and cuffs and also on square patch pockets.

Tabs, here and there, help to decorate an otherwise plain costume.

GRAVE OF SHASTA COUNTY'S FIRST PIONEER IS MARKED.

Anderson (Shasta County)—In the little cemetery at Ball's Ferry, near here, there has been erected over the grave of Major Pierson B. Reading, Shasta County's earliest Pioneer, a bronze memorial tablet set in California granite.

Major Reading, a native of New Jersey, crossed the plains to California in 1843, and the year following, for services rendered, was granted a tract of 26,633 acres of land in what is now Shasta County by Governor Micheltorena. He named the tract Rancho Buena Ventura. And died there may 29, 1868.

EASY SILVER CLEANING.

Tarnish on silver may be removed by the electrolytic method. Various commercial devices for this may be bought for use at home, or it may be done in the following way: Fill an enameled or agateware kettle partly full of water in which has been dissolved one teaspoon of either washing-soda or baking-soda and one teaspoon salt to each quart of water; heat this solution to the boiling point, put in strips of aluminum or bright zinc, add the tarnished silver, and boil it.

The silver must be covered completely by the water and each piece must be in contact with the aluminum or zinc, either directly or through other silver. When the tarnish has disappeared, the silver should be removed from the kettle, washed and dried with a clean, soft cloth.

SCHOOL FOR MISFITS AT LONG BEACH

Helen Gaisford

"HOLY MOSES!" THE EJACULATION is made by a boy in school. We peek through a window to see a boy studying, but—his feet are on his desk! We enter a low, square door and find ourselves inside of Long Beach's most unique school, the John Dewey. Here come boys who have failed to hold their own in other schools; "misfits," who are finding that they do fit after all.

It is quite an establishment, the John Dewey school, and one of which any city might be proud. Started only three years ago in a single room, it now occupies a roomy, airy building at the corner of State street and Cedar avenue, and has a staff of four instructors. Although at the time of its organization it was primarily a discipline school, that purpose has been almost lost sight of in the interest displayed in the vocational activities that the new building has made possible.

The boys who make up the personnel of what is scarcely more than an experiment may be divided into three chief groups,—those needing discipline, the "unadjusted," and those looking for vocational training. When pupils in other institutions of learning throughout the city begin to show restlessness and a growing desire to quit school, or when a boy seems suddenly to take upon himself the name of "failure," an investigator talks with him and with his parents, and a report is filed with the superintendent of schools. In many cases a youth who has been designated as troublesome is so only as a result of physical conditions, lack of home training and sympathy, or just because he "didn't get the right start." Contrasting with the little red schoolhouse methods, when boys were just victims of cussedness, which they would get over much as they got over the chicken-pox and the mumps, is this up-to-date system, with its motto: "Don't wait to be a great man; be a great boy."

Character training is the foundation for all the work done, but in no case is the practical overshadowed by the theoretical. No lessons are assigned, each boy being responsible for a certain amount of work and study per week, taking one subject a day. The required studies for each week include English, spelling and arithmetic; one such subject as history, geography or science; and a choice of a drawing or "oral report," which may take the form of memory work.

Textbooks are kept together in a cupboard, and the boys help themselves to such books as they need. On other shelves are old magazines, chiefly ones of travel or written for boys, and books of fiction such as boy scout stories, tales of adventure and biographies. Although the boys hesitate to go to the library to borrow books, they will scramble for any new book added to their collection, which is kept up by donations. One boy, shortly after he entered the school, took home and read three books in one night, although he had not hitherto shown any interest in so improving himself.

Half the day is devoted to study and the other half of business hours are spent in the shop, where boys don old clothes and, under expert instruction, do constructive work that will fit them to leave the school capable of earning their living at something other than unskilled labor. Besides typewriting, a dozen trades are taught, including auto mechanics, blacksmithing, machine work, carpentry, wood turning, sheet metal work, painting, electrical work, mechanical drawing, blue-printing, multigraphing and tool room practice. The boys choose one or two of these and do apprentice work.

Business methods are employed throughout. The boys move about and talk, but they are required to keep busy just as much as though they were employed there. When tools are taken out, a typewritten slip is made out and filed with the office.

The work shop covers half of the lower floor of the building, and is one great room with cement floor and only sparsely furnished. Here the boys repair and repaint their furniture; chairs have been given new legs, and their dining-room was fitted up with some redecorated tables no longer needed at the high-school. In one corner, boys may be taking a car completely apart and putting it together again; in another, wood carvers are busy; just outside the door, a car is being scraped preparatory to being painted.

Other workers are upstairs, where electricity and kindred subjects are studied. Boys, with no teacher in charge, are engaged in pouring molten lead into forms to make bars. They have rigged up a radio, and made an eliminator for a "B" battery. They have made their own batteries and charged them. In the dark room in the corner, they have developed blueprints. One youngster, 13 years old (a "trouble-maker," remember,) is soon to take charge of a battery shop in his father's garage, running it entirely by himself and after school hours. Dare anyone call him a misfit?

Upstairs are also the locker room and gymnasium; downstairs, the work shop, study and assembly room, dining-room and kitchen, where it is hoped classes may be given in cooking and the boys can prepare their own lunches. At present they bring their lunch and have a twenty-minute period at noon to eat it. A recreation hour, which is devoted to community singing, stories and an occasional program, as well as games in the field outside, starts off the afternoon.

Credit is given for each day's showing, both on conduct and accomplishment. Play counts one point each, and two each are the average for work and study. By doing a double lesson a boy may earn extra points, but nothing is subtracted from the score he has already earned if, for one day, he does nothing. A daily average of six pupils is required to pass in the work, and eighteen weeks lessons constitute a semester, as in other schools. A boy takes as long or as short a time to complete the term as he needs, and is in no way held back, or able to hold back others.

In many cases, only a short time at the John Dewey reawakens a desire to learn and a boy may return to his own school district. One youth whose restlessness took the form of indifference and a yearning to quit school, after six weeks was back with his old class and is now studying hard and planning to become a doctor.

Parents are quick to appreciate such development in their sons, as in the case of one father who, before leaving for three years in South America, went before a notary and gave authority to the principal to keep his two boys in that school until his return, thus assuring their attendance regardless of any other influences.

The principal of this remarkable school is, naturally, a remarkable man. Thoroughly in sympathy with the boys, Harry W. Stauffacher impresses as the ideal man to manage such an institution. He is courteous and soft of speech, yet he gives the instinctive impression that he gets his own way. Before coming to Long Beach, Stauffacher had served as instructor in the high-schools of Whiting, Indiana, and Phoenix, Arizona. Prominent in his new locality in both educational and men's club circles, he has been fortunate in being able to make his hobby his vocation.

He, with three other instructors, is in charge of the sixty boys at present enrolled there. Since he organized the movement in Long Beach three years ago, 132 boys have been put in his care. By no means should these pupils be thought of as "bad" boys. Some are, of course; but under sympathetic guidance their attitudes toward life change quickly. A cripple is learning to draw; the son of a wealthy family who had never been allowed to play like other boys and for whom everything had been made easy is having his first chance to get dirty doing real work, and is getting his first lessons in co-operative government.

In a bungalow to themselves is a group of boys who have spent years in school and in many cases cannot do even simple arithmetic. Methods of instruction differ absolutely from other schools. One corner is a miniature grocery store where one of them acts as clerk, and they learn to make change, remember the price of the goods, make out bills of sale and spell the name of everything they "buy."

Opposite the store is an old organ on which some of the boys practice and which helps them in their singing. One boy has made a radio map, showing by means of vari-colored string the strength of the major stations. In its construction he has probably learned more of the geographical outline of the United States and the relative positions of important cities than in years of study from books.

Behind the cottage is a garden, where the boy with a horticultural tendency may indulge his hobby. Beyond this is the playground. Athletic competition is keen, and the boys are divided into two teams, the "evens" and the "odds." On the day of our visit, we find that, for a goal, they have obtained a promise that the winning team may be dismissed ten minutes early. Two games allow both sides to win, and so Principal Stauffacher says that, if no boy makes a break during the afternoon, they may all go at that time. Fortunately, all goes well, and the boys go home at 3:20.

Scraps among the students are settled with boxing gloves, a given time being allotted, after which the group decides which boy is "licked" and the matter is considered finished. Punishment is effected entirely by the students themselves. If one of their number becomes troublesome, the group adjourns to the gymnasium, where there takes place a ceremony eloquently termed a "pants-ing." Details are unnecessary, but all the boys take part, the major role in the tragedy being played by the offender.

School hours are from 8:30 to 3:30, and the boys range in age from about 10 to 18. The building is also used as a night school for Mexicans.

The spirit of the school is expressed in the words of the man after whom it is named, John Dewey. "School is not a preparation for life, but is life," and regardless of the apparent freedom, there is not the slightest hint of insurgency, not the least sign of lethargy, nor any atmosphere save one of happy, organized industry.

NATIVE SONS OPEN MEMBERSHIP DRIVE.

Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. opened a campaign for additional members at an affair August 18 which was largely attended, both by members of the Order and eligibles. Judging from the success of the opening event of the drive the Parlor's ambition, to double its membership, will be realized. William B. Schweizer and Miles O. Hann are the captains of the drive teams, and the losers must banquet the winners. Several attractive prizes are also to be awarded.

A splendid program was presented, as follows: Selection, Del Roi orchestra; duets, W. I. Russell and Roland Williams; dancing, Julia May and Ella Hubbard; vocal solos, Helen Cervantes; whistling solos, Grace Brittain; piano solos, Miss Leopold. Then the crowd adjourned to the banquet-room, where refreshments were served.

President Edgar Crowell, who is directing the drive, was the toastmaster, and addresses were delivered by: Judge Percy Hight, past president Long Beach Parlor; Burrell D. Neighbours, past president Ramona Parlor; Sheriff William I. Traeger, Past Grand President; Grand Trustee John T. Newell and Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer. The committee in charge of the event consisted of H. L. Feiock (chairman), Jos. M. Crowell, H. D. Meier.

The gold watch disposed of by Long Beach Parlor to enrich the Grand Parlor entertainment fund of Sepulveda Parlor (San Pedro) has been presented, by Dr. S. T. Luce, to V. Ruiz of Vaquero Parlor (Los Angeles). Thomas Doyle, father of Clyde Doyle, a member of No. 239, died August 16 at his Long Beach home; he was a native of Ireland, aged nearly 82, and came to California a half-century ago.

STORK SHOWER FOR NATIVE DAUGHTER.

The dance of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. held August 11 for the benefit of the recently-organized drill-team, was largely attended and a great social success. The Parlor's thimble club was recently entertained at the home of President Bertha Hitt. This was also the occasion for a surprise stork shower for Mrs. Winifred Young, a member, who received many beautiful gifts. A stork guessing contest was won by Mrs. Leona Dodd.

Three candidates were initiated July 28. Several of the members accompanied D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt to Santa Ana, August 2, where the officers of Santa Ana Parlor No. 235 were installed.

CUT ALFALFA GOOD SUBSTITUTE.

This is a dry year, and green feed for many poultrymen is a difficult proposition. The hens must have green feed, or a substitute, and there seems to be no difficulty in using cut alfalfa hay as a substitute. Chopped into half-inch lengths, alfalfa hay makes good greens for hens, and if it is steamed, becomes better. Put into a perforated container over a receptacle in which water is boiled, the hay is quite easily steamed. It may not be the equal of fresh greens, but it will pay big returns over no green feed at all.

PRESERVE HISTORIC SHRINES THAT HISTORY MAY BE KEPT GREEN

How to save America's monuments and kindred landmarks from the teeth of time and the hazards of change is engaging the attention of the American Institute of Architects, says the Long Beach (Cal.) "Telegram" editorially. Increased interest in modern progress in building cities are discarding the country of some of its most cherished monuments. Many buildings of historic significance as showing architectural growth are disappearing altogether, or are being so altered and modernized that their value as monuments is rendered nil.

Complaint is made that the public is indifferent to these things and that civic architects share in this apathy toward the preservation of monuments.

Here in California much has been done and much is being done to preserve old landmarks of this state's romantic early history. The old missions, in particular, are being preserved, as nearly as possible in faithfulness to their original architectural design. Native Sons and Native Daughters have sponsored movements to preserve historic old edifices and to mark, with monuments, the scenes of historic events in the history of California. Daughters of the American Revolution, Sons of the Revolution and other patriotic organizations also have given aid to these preservational movements.

Hearty godspeed to these activities! Intensified commercialism and thoughtless greed should not be permitted to rob this land of its historic shrines—its noble architectural monuments of early days; its birthplaces of eminent men and women; and sites of historic events. Preserve and cherish these monuments so that the memory of the glorious in American history may be kept ever green.

INTERESTING FACTS CONCERNING CALIFORNIA'S FIFTY-EIGHT COUNTIES.

When does 13 equal 45, if ever?

Sometimes it does, or almost does, according to State Engineer Bailey, who has just compiled some data relative to the area of the state. This shows that of the total land area in California, 47.8 percent of the 155,652 square miles are in the thirteen southern counties of the state and the remaining 52.2 percent is embraced in the forty-five northern counties.

Not only are the thirteen southern counties approximately equal in area to the forty-five northern counties, but they contain the largest single county in the United States—this in San Bernardino County, which covers mountain and plain for miles and miles.

This situation is accounted for in some measure by the fact that the central and northern parts of the state were the first to become thickly populated through the discovery of gold in California. The population of the southern part of the state arrived later and have not established county divisions in proportion to the north.

There are other interesting facts in connection with the thirteen southern counties and the forty-five northern counties. In addition to being very close to equal in area they are approximately equal in wealth and population. The assessed valuation figures are very close and the population figures for the southern counties have risen steadily in the past decade until they are approximately the same as those of the northern counties.

These facts have ben emphasized through the misunderstanding that arose in some sections over the proposed segregation of the counties into two road districts for highway development purposes. Engineers and other investigators found that the thirteen southern counties and the forty-five northern counties were approximately equal in all factors regarding development of state highways and hence this alignment of road districts was recommended.

It is believed that the state engineer's figures on area will serve to clarify the area situation and to demonstrate the mathematic paradox that, in some ways at least, 13 almost equals 45.

BAND PULLETS.

Watch the pullets as they mature and band those which develop first. Then when the flock has reached maturity, there will be no difficulty in picking out those which will be the best layers and the best breeders, generally speaking. The first to mature generally is the first to lay, and those that lay first are quite likely to lay best. And these are apt to transmit these qualities, if selected as breeders. There is little trouble involved in banding, and it is many times repaid, for production will be better and culling will be simplified and, to a great extent, obviated.

UNIFORM REGULATIONS

FIRST DEFINITE STEPS TO GIVE CALIfornia cities a uniform code of simplified traffic regulations are now being taken as the result of the recent organization in San Francisco of the California Municipal Traffic League.

Following the endorsement by the league of a uniform traffic ordinance, drafted by the legal departments of the State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California in conjunction with Miller McClintock, nationally-known traffic engineer and traffic advisor for San Francisco, Los Angeles and Chicago, the ordinance is being submitted to the legislative authorities of the various cities of the state for adoption.

Definite plans for securing the adoption of the ordinance by the cities are now being worked out and will be presented to the California Municipal Traffic League for approval at its second meeting which will be held in Fresno November 18 to 20. Among the outstanding provisions of the proposed ordinance are these:

Clearly defining the mutual rights and obligations of motorists and pedestrains, to the end that conflicts between the two may be reduced and neither of the parties unreasonably inconvenienced.

Designating a procedure for approaching and making right-hand and left-hand turns in the central traffic or business district.

Providing a uniform method of marking and designating arterial streets at which boulevard stops are required by ordinance.

Providing for uniformity in establishing parking restrictions and in designating such restrictions by uniform signs and markers, using an established color scheme to make it easier for the motorist to recognize the particular restriction.

Providing for the establishment of loading zones where required for the purpose of loading and unloading passengers or merchandise.

Setting forth rules to reduce the friction and conflict between street-cars and motor traffic, in order that both may move with greater safety and expedition and minimizing inconvenience to the riders of both.

Providing for the establishment and maintenance of proper and adequate signs and markers to warn motorists where provisions of the ordinance are of such character that it is necessary to call attention to them in the locality and frees the unsuspecting motorist from prosecution in the absence or mutilation of the required sign.

1927 AUTO PLATES WILL BETTER ADVERTISE CALIFORNIA.

Official styles for California's 1927 automobile license-plates will be the combination of a dark maroon background with buff-colored letters and numerals.

The plates will be fourteen by five inches, the same size as this year, but the arrangement of letters and numerals will be drastically changed. Instead of the abbreviation used this year the word "California" will be spelled out, and the figures will be reduced slightly to permit seven numerals on each plate.

The purpose of these changes is to give the plates a greater advertising value for the state, particularly when California cars go East.

months of 1926 was apportioned July 30 by the State Division of Motor Vehicles, $2,889,970.80 going to the State Highway Commission and $2,366,392.69 to the several counties for road purposes.

The county apportionments are based on the number of motor-vehicles. Los Angeles, having the greatest number, received $1,140,132.26. Then, in order, came San Francisco ($225,106.46), Alameda ($213,734.17), San Diego ($105,118.37), Fresno ($96,918.36), Santa Clara ($82,174.20), Sacramento ($72,745.84), Orange ($70,070.53), San Bernardino ($64,717.99), San Joaquin ($59,821.97), Kern ($59,042.10), Riverside ($43,185.95).

UNUSUAL HEADLIGHT ARRANGEMENT.

In an effort to improve night driving conditions, Dr. H. C. Dickinson, chief of the heat and power section of the Bureau of Standards in Washington, has developed an unusual headlight arrangement.

It consists of four headlights of conventional design equipped with special holders for various lenses designed to throw the light far enough ahead of the car to insure safety at high speed and at the same time throw a wide flood of light directly in front of the car to insure safety in passing another car.

Dr. Dickinson's experiments have shown that it is almost impossible to secure both these effects with only two lamps, and there is a possibility that the motor-car of the future will be equipped with a dual filament arrangement.

MOTOR-VEHICLE OUTPUT INCREASES.

The total output of passenger automobiles in the United States for the first six months of 1926, according to the Federal Department of Commerce, was 2,070,390. A total of 254,387 trucks were also produced in that period.

These figures compare with respective totals of 1,866,131 automobiles and 229,114 trucks in the first six months of 1925. The total production for all of 1925 was 3,696,490 passenger cars and 478,396 trucks.

WATCH YOUR THROW.

Several convictions have recently been had in northern counties of persons—both male and female—caught throwing lighted cigarettes from autos. The cases were prosecuted under the California law which prohibits the throwing of matches and burning tobacco from moving vehicles.

THE PUNCTURE VINE PEST.

Watch the puncture vine. A few years ago it was introduced into the state and warnings of its character were given and, as is usual with a new pest, were not heeded. Aside from the fact that it sticks in automobile tires, it is a serious pest in orchard and field, one that may be a major problem in California agriculture if it is not checked. It is distributed easily, because it does stick in automobile tires, and as it is carried and dropped along the roads grows to develop and be carried to a new point for further spread. It requires little moisture; it is a desert plant. Right now it has a foothold in every county from Imperial to Shasta, and it will bear watching.

period he established a provisional government under American rule. He captured Los Angeles and raised the Flag of the United States August 13, 1846, without opposition. He left Lieutenant Archibald Gillespie with a garrison of fifty men to hold the pueblo until a permanent government could be concluded. But, in September, a revolution under the leadership of General Jose Maria Flores broke out and Gillespie and his small force were compelled to evacuate the fort. To re-establish American rule, Stockton was compelled to re-capture the town, which he did January 10, 1847. Three days later permanent peace was declared, after the signing of the articles of capitulation at Campo de Cauenga by Lieutenant-Colonel John C. Fremont of the California Battalion (organized by Stockton), and General Andres Pico, commanding the remaining forces of the revolutionists. The treaty was signed January 13, 1847.

Stockton was one of the dominant men of the navy in the first half of the nineteenth century. He was born at Princeton, N. J., in 1796; entered the navy as a midshipman at the age of fifteen; was distinguished for gallantry in several naval battles in the war with England in 1812; became a lieutenant in 1814; captured an Algerine corsair with a boat's crew in 1815; and six years later he negotiated the purchase of Liberia from the native African chiefs that a Negro republic might be founded. He was a far-seeing, constructive officer and efficient leader.

In 1830 Stockton became commander, and in 1838 post-commander. He was one of the first to advocate and try steam in place of sails. He superintended the construction of the sloop "Princeton," the first successful steam warship, in 1842. In 1845 he was the bearer to Texas of the resolution of annexation; proceeded to the Pacific Coast in 1846 and succeeded Commodore John Drake Sloat as commander of the Pacific squadron on July 23rd. He completed the conquest of California and established a provisional government. After peace was concluded Commodore Stockton returned to Washington to make a full report of affairs in California. He resigned from the navy and the following year was elected United States senator. As such Robert Field Stockton secured the passage of a law for the suppression of flogging in the navy. In 1856 he was named as presidential candidate for the newly-formed "American Party."

The controversy between General Stephen W. Kearney and Commodore Stockton over the superior commandery of affairs in California brought them the usual favorable and unfavorable prominence that such controversies bring. The affair was much regretted by Stockton, as he was undoubtedly in the right. After a remarkably successful and brilliant career, Commodore Stockton died at Princeton, October 7, 1866, deeply mourned and regretted by his many friends as a lovable companion and worthy patriot.

LIEUTENANT REVERE

It was Lieutenant Joseph Warren Revere, later brigadier-general in the United States Army, who lowered the Bear Flag at Sonoma, California, and hoisted the Flag of the United States, thus officially terminating the existence of the Republic of California. Lieutenant Revere was ordered to raise the American Flag at Sonoma, July 9, 1846, by Commodore John Drake Sloat, U.S.N., and Commander John B. Montgomery, U.S. Sloop of War "Portsmouth."

Joseph Revere was born May 17, 1812, in the City of Boston, Massachusetts. He was the grandson of the famous Colonel Paul Revere, of the American Revolution, 1775-1783. He received his commission as midshipman in the United States Navy, April 1, 1828. In 1845-46 he was serving as lieutenant on the U. S. Sloop of War "Portsmouth" when Commander J. B. Montgomery dispatched him with the fourth cutter, at 4 o'clock a. m., bearing a letter from Commodore Sloat to the commandant at Sonoma and two American Flags to be raised at that place and at Bodega.

LIEUTENANT REVERE.

Arriving at Sonoma at noon, he lowered the Bear Flag of the California Republic and raised the American Flag, delivered his message, read Commodore Sloat's proclamation, received the entire military force with their arms, ammunition, etc., into the service of the Government of the United States, returned to his ship and made a due report on July 11, 1846, thus completing a very important commission in a speedy and satisfactory manner.

While Lieutenant Revere was not present at the battle of La Mesa he was a part of the American forces engagd in the military occupation of California, and was left to garrison Sonoma while others came south. He says in his book "A Tour of Duty in California": "It fell to my lot to exchange the quarter-deck for the saddle, having been ordered to take command of the district on the north side of the bay, garrisoned by Company B, California Battalion, Mounted Riflemen. In taking charge of the military post of Sonoma, I mustered my troops and found the whole force to consist of fifty men, mostly American, — farmers, their sons and laborers who lived in the neighborhood —to whom it was more convenient to serve at this station than to go south with Fremont."

It is pleasant to connect the history of the East with the history of the West through such men, and the stirring events enacted by them, as Paul and Joseph Revere.

GREAT SHOW PROMISED AT POMONA

A. McCall Smith

(PUBLICITY DIRECTOR, LOS ANGELES COUNTY FAIR.)

THE STAGE IS SET! THE GREATEST agricultural show in the West will open to the public when the gates of the Los Angeles County Fair swing outward at 10 a. m. Tuesday, September 28. The big state fairs are not excepted in this statement. Everything is rapidly shaping into readiness for that morning at Pomona and indications are that every department of the big fair will be larger and better than ever before.

The record of the Los Angeles County Fair has been one of achievement and progress. It is a record that is unparalleled in Western fairs. Only the whole-hearted co-operation of the various county departments and officials, the press, cities and community centers, and the fair officials have made this record possible.

Added premium lists, added departments and attractions, the most elaborate settings, together with this co-operation and the splendid management the fair has enjoyed, are contributing factors to the greater 1926 Los Angeles County Fair.

An entrance pavilion of Spanish architecture to cost a considerable sum will replace the old structure. This imposing entrance in itself will create a first impression on visitors that will be a lasting one. All the materials of the kinds needed which were available in San Francisco and Los Angeles have been purchased to effect the most attractive decorative scheme that has yet been attempted by any fair in the West. The big 700-foot tent where the agricultural department, industrial department and automobile show have been held heretofore will be devoted entirely to the agricultural and industrial departments this year. The automobile show will be housed in a separate tent.

The agricultural department will include rack and plate displays this year in addition to the feature displays. Due to the fact that the Los Angeles County Fair is held in the midst of the state's richest citrus belt, the fair board offered a handsome list of awards for citrus classes this year. Large quantities of valencias and navels in storage for the fair indicate that the same success will characterize the new feature which the other divisions of the agricultural departments have enjoyed in the past.

The livestock department is also attracting the bigger and better herds from all parts of the West. The Los Angeles County Fair has become known all over the nation as a market place for the best in herd sires and foundation animals. Last year buyers came from all parts of the United States and Canada.

The night horse show at the fair is recognized by horsemen everywhere as among the outstanding shows of the country. Horsemen from the Northwest and the Middle West are present with their stables every year. Over 200 horses are entered in the show this year. It will be the most spectacular night horse show ever held in Southern California.

To encourage the farmers of the southland to exhibit their horses and mules, the board created a new classification this year designed to give the farmer an opportunity for his draft stock. These classes are open to grade farm teams which previously could not compete with the high-class Percherons and Clydesdales which come down from the north each year.

The goat department has been included in the premium lists again this year. There promises to be a big showing of milk goats. The California Dairy Council will supplement the showing of dairy cattle with a complete exposition of dairy products of all kinds. A complete laboratory will be installed and all tests affecting dairy products will be demonstrated as an educational feature.

The semi-finals of the boys' and girls' school teams' dairy products judging contest will be held in connection with the dairy show. Also the semi-finals of the school livestock judging contest will be held at the fair. The junior department holds as much interest as any department of the fair. The younger farm folks have shown their elders a great many things about progressive farming in this department each year.

Every horse on the Pacific Coast which holds a record of any note is entered on the racing program. The Los Angeles County Fair track is the fastest half-mile track in the state. Many records have been broken upon this oval. The handsome purses offered this year have attracted such horses as "Crawford," 2 03, sensational trotter on the grand circuit of the East last year, winning fifteen first places and over $16,000 in cash; "Bobby O.," record pacer of the coast, and "Dr. Nick," record trotter.

The poultry show and rare fowl exhibit has held the distinction of being the largest show of its kind on the coast for years and will be above par. The pigeon show, rabbit show, women's department, flower show and every department of the fair will show growth and improvement.

BABY BEEF DEMONSTRATION.

It is a long way from the range days of early California which a few of us remember—and that was not so long ago—to the best methods of producing beef in California today. We have all listened to Eastern friends who have come to live among us for many years with their praise of the Eastern beefstake. But now comes the Union Stock Yards of Los Angeles and Chicago with the claim that the best beef in the world is produced in California South through modern feeding methods on citrus groves, if you please.

A large number of California farmers are now

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

ADMISSION DAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1876, owing to the neglect of the governor to declare it a legal holiday, was not observed as such, but there was a liberal display of flags. A military review of the National Guard in San Francisco and a picnic of the Alameda County Pioneers were the principal celebrations.

In the evening, the San Francisco Pioneer Association met in Platt's Hall. H. Hosmer delivered an oration and J. G. Severance read an original poem. The Sacramento Pioneer Association had a collation and talkfest in the evening. The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, then small in numbers and inconspicuous, assembled in a Sausalito, Marin County, hall and heard G. D. Hall orate and F. G. W. Fenn read a poem.

A celebration of Admission Day to be held at Chico, Butte County, was postponed until the 15th, when Governor Irwin and a number of other distinguished citizens attended with delegations from neighboring towns. Among the day's features were a parade and a grand ball.

The presidential political campaign was in full force this month, with torchlight processions and open-air meetings being held in the cities and towns throughout the state. Each political party had marching clubs organized and spellbinders like Tom Fitch and Dr. Shorb were campaigning the state. Great indignation was manifested by state office-holding Democrats over their being assessed by their state central committee $50 apiece for campaign expenses.

A Methodist camp meeting, running eleven days, was held at Kellogg, Sonoma County. There were about twenty ministers present and many converts were made.

A state convention of school teachers was held in San Francisco September 19 with a large attendance of teachers. Prof. J. W. Anderson presided.

A number of women mining-stock speculators in San Francisco, believing they were not receiving fair treatment from the masculines, organized the Woman's Mining Bureau September 25 with Mms. M. D. Kellogg, H. M. Cook, H. S. Kenyon, F. Swift and C. J. Stevens as directors. They intended to buy, sell and lend money on mining stocks. The directors were all successful speculators and had great faith in the future success of their enterprise.

"QUEEN OF THE TURF."

A new style of refrigerator car, intended to carry fruit and vegetables by freight trains to New York and other Eastern markets, made its initial trip from Stockton this month. The result was being anxiously awaited by producers and shippers engaged in this industry, now in its infancy.

The annual California State Fair was held at Sacramento during the week of September 18. The attractions of park, pavilion, saloons, gambling tables and numerous other entertainments to separate visitors from their money were well patronized and many thousands of dollars were put into circulation. That two-thirds of the receipts came from the park admissions showed that horseracing was the big attraction. The racing was excellent and the contests so keen the betting turfites were kept on the qui-vive. The opening race was a 1¼-mile dash, which was won by "Mollie McCarthy" in 2:13. The ease in which she ran and her development of speed and stamina caused admirers to name her the "Queen of the Turf," and they considered her the best thoroughbred in the nation.

The exhibit of Angora goats was surprisingly large, and great expectations arose for the future of this industry. In the pavilion the exhibit of sewing machines, none of which was of California production, took up so much space, to the detriment of California products, it was decided to limit the space devoted to them at future fairs. No serious accidents marred the week's festive time.

The San Joaquin Valley annual fair opened at Stockton September 25 and the sports, turfites and racehorses moved there. The Contra Costa County fair was held at Pacheco commencing September 28.

A match trot for $10,000 between "St. Julian" and "Dan Voorhies," two notable speedy trotters, came off at Oakland September 2 and drew sveral thousand turfites who made it a big betting event. "St. Julian," who was the favorite at $100 to $65, won.

N. V. Smith, claiming to be the champion long-distance rider, rode against time of 2 hours and 12 minutes, for fifty miles, changing horses at the finish of each mile and using ten horses, at Petaluma, Sonoma County. He won in 2 hours and 2 minutes.

Woodland, Yolo County, had a race meet the first week of the month. The principal event was a contest between a man and a horse. Maverick, a speedy runner of local fame, was matched to run three heats against a pacer, he making a half-mile while the horse paced a mile. The horse won the first heat, but Maverick got in first on the next two, making the half-mile in 2:21.

LOS ANGELES-SAN FRANCISCO LINKED.

A heavy rainstorm swept over the state September 4 and a mild storm prevailed the 27th.

The big event of the month was the driving of the golden spike in the last-laid tie connecting, via the Southern Pacific line, Los Angeles with San Francisco. Special trains were run from each terminal city bringing a thousand or more prominent citizens to Lang Station September 5. At 2 p. m. Colonel Crocker drove the spike. Addresses were made by Governor Stanford, General Colton, ex-Governor Downey Mayor Beaudry and Colonel Banning. That evening, the party having gone to Los Angeles, a banquet, attended by about 300 prominent men, was given. The menu was printed in French and was nearly a foot long. Eleven toasts were responded to by the distinguished persons present and Los Angeles people felt they were buoyant on a wave of prosperity. Fare between San Francisco and Los Angeles was $20. J. H. Strowbridge, superintendent of construction, was the master of ceremonies.

General William T. Sherman of Civil War renown with a party visited the state and was given enthusiastic receptions in the different cities.

Edwin Booth, the great tragedian, opened an engagement at the California Theater, San Francisco, September 4, portraying his great character of Hamlet. Special trains were run from interior towns to San Francisco, so great was the desire of the people to see him.

The McCloud fish hatchery September 25 made a shipment of 4,000,000 salmon eggs, by express, to Eastern streams.

A colony of twenty-five Russians settled near Anaheim, Orange County, this month.

A sensation in financial circles was caused by the failure of General John B. Frisbie, a Vallejo, Solano County, capitalist and banker. It caused the closing of the Vallejo Savings Bank and consternation among several thousand investors in his numerous enterprises.

The suit against Juan M. Sanchez and others involving the title to 4,000 acres of Los Angeles County land, including a part of the San Gabriel Mission, was decided September 6 in favor of Sanchez. The decision was expected to settle the title claims to some 40,000 acres of land in dispute in the southern part of the state.

Southern California honey industry was suffering a slump in prices, due to overproduction and having no systematic method of disposing of the product, which this season amounted to 1,150 tons. The California market could not absorb that quantity.

FOURTEEN LEPERS FOUND.

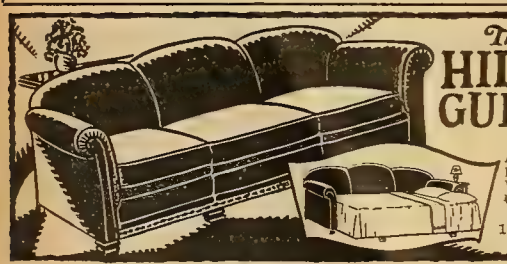
A rival of the big Santa Barbara grapevine was found developing twenty-two miles from San Diego. It was thirty-three inches in circumference near the base of its trunk, covered forty square yards and had produced 1,700 bunches of grapes during the season.

Two watermelons, grown by A. L. Rogers in San Bernardino County, were on exhibition in Los Angeles; they weighed 47½ and 58¼ pounds.

Jeff. White and C. Carson, two Los Angeles nimrods, went hunting September 27 near that place and bagged 126 quail and 26 rabbits.

Miss Emily Banks, in San Jose, commenced a suit for $50,000 damages against General H. M. Naglee, one of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of that city, for breach of promise. She claimed she had been "waiting at the church" for over a year and was now fatigued.



Smallpox continued epidemic in San Francisco. There were 669 cases developed during the month. An impression prevailed that the seat of the infection was in Chinatown, and this locality was ordered disinfected by the board of supervisors. It took a fortnight to fumigate and clean it, the filth of the premises and the inhabitants being indescribable. Fourteen lepers were found hidden in the underground labyrinth.

Cases of smallpox also developed in Los Angeles and Portland, Oregon State, showing that the dread disease was spreading along the Pacific Coast. September 8 Miss Lizzie Newton, whose husband had died in the San Francisco pesthouse of smallpox, became despondent and committed suicide.

Suicides in San Francisco this month averaged one a day. A majority of them were due to financial difficulties, mainly caused by speculation in mining stocks. One of the most sensational was that of a young man named Bittendorffer, who had just been convicted of killing his brother a few months previous and was await-

(MARGERY BOLD.)

"SUICIDE AND OTHER ONE-ACT COMEDIES"

By Conrad Seiler; Thomas Y. Crowell Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

"Suicide," "Time Will Tell," "Poets All," "Crime," "An Eye For An Eye," "Fantasia"—six plays, all told, make up this volume.

These "one-act comedies" were written for amateur as well as for professional performances. Each one is carefully plotted and constructed, so that it is easily adapted to local producing, thereby overcoming any limitations of inadequate stage settings. In connection with each play is given full stage settings and other helpful directions.

The last play, "Fantasia," is a Drama League prize play. All six are very easy reading, so, even if one is not a devotee of the drama, amateurishly speaking, these little plays will entertain. It is interesting to note that Author Seiler is a resident of Hollywood, California.

"THE CLUB OF MASKS."

By Allen Upward; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

In the midst of revel and hilarity, death stalked into the silken quarters of the famous Domino Club. Who, among that dense throng of masked dancers, had administered the fatal dose of poison? Even Sir Frank Tarleton, poison expert, frowned thoughtfully as he examined the gruesome corpse. This was no ordinary case of poisoning.

But the victim had been no ordinary man. As Sir Frank Tarleton probed deeper into the investigation of the dead man's past activities, he met mystery darker and more terrible than that of the murder. The deceased had been a popular physician among a certain social group of London society leaders. In his safe he had kept a black case-book containing a list of his patients and their attendant confidences. Not as a physician, however, but as a despicable blackmailer and monster, he had used this book as a means of extorting enormous fees from his victims. Now, coincident with his murder, the safe was rifled and the case-book disappeared.

For the safety and peace of fashionable London society, the scandal must be hushed and no slander or publicity allowed to creep out from the pages of the dreadful book. It behooved Sir Frank to move quickly and cautiously. The thief and murderer must be found, at once!

The plot moves on from this point, clumsily. Pyscho-analysis, romance and sordid mystery join hands and troop merrily down the remaining chapters. Advice to the struggling reader of detective stories, particularly those of pyscho-analysis nature: Don't go on hoping for the worst, because, "that's all there is, there isn't any more."

An additional claim that is made for the feeding of baby beeves is that they produce $42 worth of fertilizer per head per year.

Another claim we have often heard is that a steer cannot be fitted to the nth degree without the use of field corn. This theory has also been exploded by the feeders and the butchers, who now claim that the baby beeves fed in California lots with barley as the grain feed are a better quality meat than the Eastern corn-fed animal.

To encourage the feeding of better beef and the showing in the fat classes at the fairs, the Los Angeles County Fair bought eighteen head each of the three breeds, Shorthorn, Hereford and Aberdeen Angus. A feeding demonstration has been conducted at the fair grounds which attracted the attention of hundreds of live-stock men from all parts of the West. The animals have made remarkable gains and they are pictures to behold.

They have been fully fitted for show and will be shown at the State Fair at Sacramento and the Los Angeles County Fair. They will not be entered in competition at the home show, however. The Union Stock Yards will supply carcasses for a baby beef demonstration by experts at the Los Angeles County Fair at Pomona, September 28 to October 2. A fat barrow demonstration will also be held, in which the carcasses will be supplied by persons wishing to enter them in competition for awards which the fair is offering.

CALIFORNIA

(SANFORD M. SCHWARZ.)

This acrostic poem, taken from an exchange, is from the pen of a 14-year old Los Angeles lad exiled to New York:

"C" is for your climate fair,
That made you quite the fad,
"A" is for your autoists there,
Seeking the best to be had.
"L" is for your beautiful lakes
Up in your mountains, too,
"I" is for your numerous isles
In your broad ocean of blue.
"F" is for your many flowers
Whose odor is so sweet,
"O" is for your famous oranges
Whose flavor can't be beat.
"R" is for your real-estate,
Quite the subject of discourse,
"N" is for your native sons
Who boost you high, of course.
"I" is for your satisfied inhabitants
Who wouldn't leave that place.
"A" is for all the other things in which,
CALIFORNIA leads the race.

They Come, in Droves—More than 150,000 out-of-state automobiles entered California South during the first seven months of 1926 over the various trans-continental trails, according to quarantine station counts reported to the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

ing sentence of life imprisonment. A cell companion had just finished shaving and laid down the razor for a moment when the young man seized it, slashed his jugular vein and bled to death in a few minutes.

TRAGEDIES A-PLENTY.

The stage from Mokelumne Hill, Calaveras County, to Latrobe was stopped by two masked men near Sutter Creek, Amador County, September 11. They got the express-box, containing $800. Subsequently "Gum Boot" Charley, a man with a jail record, was arrested and confessed, also implicating a man named Thompson.

The stage from Quincy, Plumas County, was stopped a few miles east of Oroville, Butte County, September 12 by four highwaymen who, finding there was no express-box aboard, with an epithet ordered the driver to go on, much to the relief of a passenger who had $4,000 in gold in his possession.

N. E. Whiteside, a pioneer lawyer of Marysville, Yuba County, and once prominent in state politics, being speaker of the Assembly in 1857, died September 9.

Edward Lane and his two sons went for a sail on San Francisco Bay September 15. Near Goat Island the boat capsized. Lane was drowned but the boys, being strong swimmers, kept afloat for nearly an hour and were picked up.

Willie Davis, a Los Angeles lad, September 15 was standing near his brother, who was examining a revolver. It was accidentally discharged and the bullet struck him on the head, causing his death soon afterward.

W. K. Morrow, proprietor of the Metropolitan Theater in Sacramento, September 20 was preparing material in a coffee-mill for producing red fire for the evening's performance. An explosion occurred that sent a piece of iron into his abdomen, causing his death in a few hours.

A. L. Fowler, a pioneer resident of San Diego County, September 8 was jolted off his wagon seat. A wheel ran over his neck, gashing it so that he bled to death. He left a wife and ten children.

Tommy and Mary Conroy, aged 8 and 4 years, playing in their home on California street, San Francisco, September 30, found a pistol in a bureau drawer. Tommy discharged it and the bullet entered little Mary's head, killing her instantly.

Henry Smith and a partner essayed, September 3, to take a pack-train from Yuma across the desert to Los Angeles. Three days later their animals stampeded and the two men wandered over the desert without water, suffering from thirst. Smith opened a vein on his arm and drank his own blood, which clotted in his throat, and he died trying to remove the clot with his fingers. His partner, nearly exhausted, managed to reach a water supply and was saved.

BUNCO ARTISTS MAKE BIG HAUL.

A trestle near Banta, San Joaquin County, collapsed September 19 and wrecked a crossing freight train. Two men were killed and fifteen cars went down.

A tong battle was fought in Stockton September 10 in which fifty or more shots were fired. It resulted in the killing of three Chinamen and the wounding of a score more. The jail was filled for a few days with accused Chinamen but, on account of "no sabbee" being all that could be learned from them, nearly all had to be liberated.

Jennie Bonnet, a comely French woman, was shot and killed September 15 by an unknown assassin in a road-house near San Jose. She was shot through a bedroom window while disrobing to retire. Jennie was a San Francisco character, as she frequently appeared dressed in male attire and followed the occupation of frog-catching for the French restaurants of the metropolis in the San Mateo marshes.

At Fort Jones, Siskiyou County, a young man named Sherwood was displaying his ability to "pat the juba" and dance a jig on the sidewalk when he was ridiculed by a lad named Godfrey. Sherwood, getting angry, pulled the lad's ears, at which B. A. Godfrey, the boy's father, took umbrage and knocked Sherwood down. Shortly afterward Sherwood renewed the quarrel and during the altercation following stabbed Godfrey several times, fatally cutting him.

The old bunco game of having a large sum of money left to charity by a deceased philanthropist and a search being made by the executors to find an honest person to distribute it was worked on a Frenchwoman in Sacramento this month. Two of her countrymen with a satchel that they claimed contained $10,000 in $20-pieces called upon her and after making a full explanation of their mission and duly complimenting her on her reputation for integrity, received from her $4,000 in gold coin to show her good faith. They then left the satchel and its supposed treasure with her. When, some hours later, they did not return as promised she examined the contents of the satchel and found that the rolls of supposed $20-pieces were sections of lead pipe with a $20-piece at each end. The police were unable to locate the artists.

A den of rattlesnakes was found in Tuolumne County and gave the name to Rattlesnake Hill. The rattlers had rolled themselves into balls as large as kegs. They were hissing and rattling loud enough to be heard some distance and could be smelled much further. They were found by two miners who killed on the first day of discovery 300, and ninety more were killed the next day. They later returned with a supply of giant-powder cartridges and, finding the rattlers had congregated under a big boulder, blew it up, filling the air with pieces of rocks and rattlesnakes.

THE PUBLIC-SCHOOLS ARE THE PRIDE of Pasadena. Beginning in 1874 in a private house, with only two pupils, the San Pascual school soon increased to the capacity of a one-room schoolhouse near a grand old oak which sheltered a lovely playground.

In 1878, a large and well-furnished schoolhouse in a central location required three teachers for its crowded rooms; while yet another, in South Pasadena, was conveniently arranged for fifty-six pupils. Ten years later, it was shown by official reports that "Pasadena has the best ventilated, the best lighted, and handsomest school buildings of all towns of its size in the United States," with an enrollment of 1,354 pupils. The instructional force, besides the superintendent, includes four principals, three vice-principals and seventeen teachers. The school property, valued at $200,000, is the choicest in the city as to pleasantness of location; and in every case the lands have been donated for sites and ample playgrounds. From 1874 to 1889 a leading citizen, Hon. Sherman Washburn, has served upon the board of trustees; and while ready to adopt every modification demanded by the spirit of the age, the motto of the faithful guardians of the Pasadena schools has ever been, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

An excellent private seminary for young ladies, St. Margaret's Hall, is well patronized, and furnished with every facility for the pursuit of musical and art study, and of the modern languages. The Pasadena Academy is yet another flourishing private school, for both sexes. Professional teachers of music and the fine arts, of high repute, having made their homes in Pasadena from considerations of health, have created opportunities for culture in those directions. Classes for foreign travel have been formed, the first being now in attendance upon the French Exposition. These are among many evidences of the exceptionally high character of the pioneers of Pasadena.

It was a singular fact that there was not a professional and hardly a practical horticulturist or farmer among them, but the spell of the neighboring orchards and vineyards soon transformed them into enthusiastic culturists of the orange and the vine. The worn-out physician found the fountain of youth in the pure California sunshine, which turned his grapes into delicious raisins. In the first nine years of the history of settlement, not a single criminal prosecution occurred among a population of a thousand souls, and quarrels were unknown. Lawyers issued writs of ejectments to gophers and squirrels, "of which there was no lack."

In March, 1880, Pasadena held her first citrus fair, in the school building, in which the display of oranges, lemons, limes, raisins, deciduous fruits, fresh or dried and preserved in glass, received the highest praises from hundreds of interested visitors. The public prints abounded in descriptions of the orchard products of the little hamlet, so lately a sheep ranch. A year later the Southern Horticultural Society held its great citrus exhibition, and Pasadena, exhibiting a huge pyramid of oranges, lemons and limes, bore off the first premium above all competitors, the blue ribbon, and $100, awarded for the largest and best exhibit of the kind ever made in the state.

Later in the year, at the annual fair of the Southern California Horticultural Society, Pasadena took the first premiums for quality and display of citrus fruits. It is a well-known fact that young trees, growing upon virgin soil, produce the very finest exhibition fruit; but the San Gabriel orange belt was the earliest known in American fruit culture, and trees in the mission garden, sixty years old, are still producing fruit of excellent quality. A single tree in Pasadena, eleven years old, yielded in one year 3,000 fair-sized, well-flavored oranges. There seemed no limit to the horticultural possibilities of Pasadena and the adjacent highlands.

The colony which first incorporated under the name of the San Gabriel Orange Grove Association had included in their purchase a dense growth of chaparral high up in the foothills for which they gladly accepted $5 an acre. Purchasing certain water rights in the adjacent canyons, these far-sighted Iowans proceeded to develop princely estates which, from an altitude 2,000 feet above the sea, command a view of the entire San Gabriel Valley, with a wider stretch of the blue Pacific. Upon a portion of this tract Messrs. Green and McNally have charming homes, enriched within and without with treasures of art, and the application of instructed taste in the management of grounds. The Altadena railroad makes several trips daily to this pleasant suburb, starting from the Raymond hotel depot.

Still farther toward the "Heart of the Highlands" the homes of the Giddings are found at the entrance of the Millard Canyon, famous for its picturesque waterfall. Numerous other "perches" have a local interest, while the Gleeson sanitarium and the eyrie of John Brown's sons attract visitors from all parts of the country.

The selection of Wilson's Peak, which overlooks Pasadena, for the site of an astronomical observatory which promises to become a point of world-wide scientific interest, adds still more to the mysterious charm of the mountains. For this observatory the largest lens yet known is being prepared, through which "the azure sea with golden shores" will be more fully explored. The observatory will soon be accessible by an excellent wagon road, which will no doubt be displaced by one similar to that provided for tourists to the top of Mount Washington. No one has seen the beauty of the San Gabriel Valley who has not stood upon Wilson's Peak; and an almost unbroken burro train is seen employed in the service of tourists who go up to view the glory of the earth, even more than the wonders of the sky. From Wilson's Peak the whole main range of the Sierras, the lofty crests of San Antonio, San Jacinto and San Bernardino, the brightness of snow-clad peaks intensified by dark forests, the emerald hues of countless orange groves, and all the dependent valleys, make a scene of enchantment which no pen can describe.

Southern California is a land of strange contrasts, of inexhaustible delights; and the growth of Pasadena, from its simple conditions as a model colony to an almost ideal young city, with 10,000 inhabitants who love it as the Swiss their mountain chalets, is no marvel, when one remembers how through long ages Nature has been weaving the tapestries of hill and plain, and Providence has been preparing a race to inherit this choicest climate, these varied products of all the zones. Pasadena, with its outlying districts of South Pasadena, Olivewood, Lamanda Park, Sierra Madre, Monk's Hill and Altadena, covers about twenty square miles.

of the government delivers the mail at every door, while street boats, trains over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad convey the population east or west. Then the people depended wholly upon Los Angeles now with a manufacturing output which operates one of the largest planing mills in the state, with brick yards producing 60,000 bricks a day, with twenty miles of horse car lines running in every direction, with three banks and two daily newspapers, with the perfect Raymond hotel in its fifty acre flower garden on the south, and the homelike Painter hotel on the north, while the opening of a third in the heart of Pasadena is near at hand, and numerous boarding houses ready to meet the special requirement of winter guests or birds of passage, with a well furnished free library, with society halls and clubhouses, a fine opera house, at an hour's distance from the ocean beaches, with all their varied delights, within sound of the mission bells of old San Gabriel, where in a typical Mexican village the old life of the land may be studied and enjoyed, it is not unlikely that the native Pasadenans prove to be like those who, "Born in Boston, need no second birth."

The natural advantages of Pasadena which have drawn hither scholars and artists, health seekers, retired capitalists, and soldiers of fortune who ride on the crest of every wave of material progress, creating and dissolving booms, are permanent; and the laws which govern the movement of population and of capital are equally irresistible. Everything points to Los Angeles County as the seat of a dense and choice population culled from all nations, climates and zones.

Here the first gold and silver were discovered, and here was the early home of the orange, the olive and the vine; and here, if anywhere upon the planet, is the prophecy of good Bishop Berkeley to be fulfilled—"Westward the star of empire takes its way."

THOUSANDS OF TRIBUTES TO THE ROSE.

The poem contest in tribute to the rose, conducted by the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Association, closed August 15. Nearly 4,000 poems were submitted. The winning lyric, for which a $500 prize will be awarded, will be selected by these judges: Mrs. Edward McDowell, Mrs. Aurelia Rhinehardt, Mrs. Grace Hyde Trine, John Steven McGroarty, James W. Foley.

Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond, noted composer, will write the music for the selected poem, and it will become the official song of the January 1, 1927, Pasadena Tournament of Roses. Details of the rose poem contest appeared in The Grizzly Bear for July.

TIME TO CULL POULTRY.

Now comes the season to cull the poultry flock, and it should be done thoroughly. Discard the poor layers and old hens, cripples and those with broken-down abdomens, those that droop and spend their time on roosts instead of nests, coarse-headed hens with sunken eyes, short and stubby hens, persistent setters and those with solid fat abdomens, immature and undersized pullets, and all cockerels not needed for breeding purposes. Keep the vigorous, healthy hens with short, near heads and strong beaks, those with long, deep bodies and parallel top and bottom lines; hens with bright eyes and worn toenails, with dusty and worn feathers, particularly tail feathers which are worn off on the nest; those that molt late and rapidly, the noisy, happy hens, that go to roost late and get up early; those with faded shanks and beaks, with pelvic bones spread wide apart; the well-grown pullets and the large, strong, active, quick-maturing cockerels of desired variety type and high producing mothers.

AUTO INCREASE—PROSPERITY PROOF.

For the first six months of 1926, 1,549,093 motor-vehicles were registered in California, exceeding by 166,272 the number registered during the same period in 1925. Of the state's total registered motor-vehicles, nearly 38 percent—587,736 to be exact—are credited to Los Angeles County.

These figures, says Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, are "proof of California's increasing prosperity."

A BREATH FROM THE DAYS OF FORTY-NINE

(MAY S. CORCORAN.)

AN OUTSTANDING FIGURE IN THE RECords of California is that of Samuel Paine Oden Counts who, for fifty-seven years, held the office of deputy and county treasurer of Mariposa County. His peaceful life ended quietly at his home in Mariposa July 29, at the age of 74. In 1849 his parents moved from Arkansas to the town of Coulterville, in Mariposa County, and in 1869 his father, George Counts, better known for his sincere life and Christian piety as "Father Counts," was elected treasurer.

This office he held with his son as deputy until 1895, when he resigned and the board of supervisors appointed the son, S. P. O. Counts, treasurer. Six days in the week, at exactly the same hour, carrying an umbrella for heat or rain, Sam Counts left the court house with a bag of coin on his shoulders and quietly proceeded down to Main street, where he deposited it in a safe. His honor or his courage were never questioned. That is his claim to distinction. His life was regular and placid. He leaves a most devoted wife, Mrs. Clara Counts, and a sister, Mrs. Duncan of Ukiah. Charles Cavagnaro, a prominent Native Son of Hornitos, was by unanimous vote of the supervisors appointed to fill the unexpired term of Treasurer Counts.

GEORGE COUNTS.

Distinct from glaring colors so often splashed upon the scenes of forty-nine stands the quiet figure of Forty-niner George Counts. The following is an outline of his life, as given by his son, Samuel, a few years ago in an interview:

"My father was born October 5, 1805, in Tennessee. Married June 3, 1845, Malinda Tong in Fredericks, Kentucky. They had been married sixty-eight years when mother died. I was born in 1851. Mother was one of twenty-five living children, her father having been twice married. Their record is all there in the old family Bible. Father carried that Bible across the plains with him, reading it every day. (Pointing to a large leather bound volume printed in Cincinnati by Morgan Sauray in 1836, and still kept and used in the Counts' home in Mariposa County.)

"The country was wicked and wild when father came. The youth of the East—the cream, they say,—though good at home, were bad here, but instead of him becoming like them they became like him while in his presence. If men were telling rough jokes on the street, when father appeared they would stop, as they did for women. And I think he was the only man they did this for. They liked him, as well as respected him. He went among them a marked man, in that he never shared any wickedness. When his sight began to fail, his daughter-in-law read the 'Sermon on the Mount' to him daily, so that by the time his hearing was gone, he could say it all to himself. He took interest in daily events to the time of his death, when the Spanish-American war came, and had to know each day what was going on in the world. He was 94 then, and was perfectly sound in mind to the end.

"He was justice of the peace in Coulterville for a number of years and was elected treasurer in 1869, which office he took, according to the old law, in March 1870, when he came to live in this house. He was a man of moderation, and while sympathizing with the South, as he was a Southerner, he did not favor secession, so kept out of the Civil War difficulty. He was treasurer of Mariposa County for twenty-eight years, and was ill for but six days preceding his death in 1898."

ALBERT BONDSHU.

family Bible that dates from pre-revolutionary days bears a recently recorded name of one who, for several years, did good work in the old court house. Albert Bondshu, a former searcher of records, killed recently in an automobile accident in Modesto.

He was a native son of a native son, and his grandmother on his mother's side, Mrs. Amanda Halstead, daughter of a forty-niner, James Halstead, was the second White child born in Coulterville. In that town she was married, as was her daughter, the present Mrs. Frank Bondshu.

Charles Bondshu, father of Frank Bondshu, assessor of Mariposa County and grandfather of Albert, served in the Union Army during the Civil War and died at the Soldiers Home at Sawtelle in 1916. When the United States entered the world war Albert Bondshu was among the first to enlist in San Francisco, the Forty-fourth Infantry. He served as corporal at Fort Lewis where, to his deep regret, on account of his anxiety to continue in service his health gave way. In this his sacrifice for his country was as supreme as though he sleep in Flanders Field.

HISTORIAN TRACES TRAIL MADE BY SPANIARD 150 YEARS AGO.

One hundred and fifty years ago Escalante and a band of ten loyal Spaniards sought a northern route to California. Over the wastes from Santa Fe to the Utah desert they struggled and then turned back because winter snows were falling in the Sierras.

Over this same trail, traveling by machine where those Spaniards struggled with horses, Dr. Herbert E. Bolton, chairman of the Department of History at the University of California this summer traced the route of the valiant little band. With the aid of the diary written by the leader, Escalante, he found the trail and checked the details for 700 miles. His trip, however, covered 3,000 miles, for often he had to go around inaccessible places to approach the old trail.

The tracing of the Escalante trail is a continuation of work started by Dr. Bolton some years ago. His work in the summer session of the University of Utah made it possible for him to carry on the work this year.

In discussing this interesting feature of his summer, Dr. Bolton said: "In 1776, Escalante, at the head of a party of ten Spaniards, set out from Santa Fe to open a northern route to California. When he reached the Utah desert he turned back and returned by way of the Grand Canyon, which he crossed. It made a journey of nearly 2,000 miles. In previous expeditions I have traced about half of Escalante's remarkable itinerary and this summer I continued the work for a distance of 700 miles with his diary in hand, from Montrose, Colorado, to the southwestern corner of Utah.

"I have left a stretch between this point and the Hopi villages of northeastern Arizona and when this work of identification is completed I expect to publish Escalante's diary in English with editorial notes and maps."

A BIT O' FARMING

NEW MARKETS MUST BE FOUND

CALIFORNIA THIS YEAR HAS A BOUNTIful fruit harvest. It is one of those years when every tree seems to yield its maximum, with boughs hanging full and markets supplied beyond their capacity. Pears caught the first real glut, and the height of the season found prices below the cost of production and shipping. But this fruit was not alone. Disaster did not follow. The fruit men have had a fairly good year, but with the thousands of acres of young plantings coming into bearing, the question of markets very naturally becomes one of increasing interest.

What is to be done with the crops from these added acres in years when the yield is normal? There is but one answer, if the horticulture of California is to survive: more markets must be found and those already open must take more fruit. Advertising and better quality may take care of the domestic problem, but it is quite doubtful if that will suffice. New markets, then, must be found. Where?

Prof. B. H. Crocheron, director of agricultural extension at the University of California, recently returned from a trip to the Orient, and says both natives and foreigners there are starved for fresh fruits and vegetables. They don't dare to eat the native produce. He found the Chinese drinking canned milk, but it came from Switzerland. He found the butter coming from Australia, and of a poor quality. The only American product he found was the raisin, which has been put up in packages to appeal to the trade in the Far East. Prof. Crocheron suggests that agricultural attaches be established to open up the markets of the Orient.

And why not? Commercial attaches are firmly established. They are looking for markets and trade opportunities for American industry and why should not agriculture, the basic American industry, have the same assistance? The commercial attaches, from their association with manufacturers, simply won't fill the bill. They have the opposite point of view. One in China, at least, urges the importation into the United States of Chinese eggs. That won't help the farmer, nor will copra imported from the Philippines aid the American dairyman. But an agricultural attache with each important consulate would be able to do a lot toward finding markets. Dried, canned and fresh fruits, canned and fresh vegetables, butter and canned milk—all could be shipped to the Orient. And with all this talk of aid for the American farmer, legislating prices to a higher level, and a lot of other artificial stimulants, why not do the more practical thing of opening new markets?

And speaking of markets for California fruit, there is an increasing resentment in this state against the quality of produce that is furnished on the markets for consumption here. The really good stuff is graded, carefully packed and shipped East. The local markets get what is left. With pears being dumped into the harbors in the East, it was difficult to get an edible pear in California.

Cantaloupes are picked for the Eastern markets, and while they may reach those markets in edible condition, certainly are poor eating in California. One farmer in the San Joaquin Valley found that by selling high-quality fruits and vegetables to local markets, and offering lots worth while, he could make more than by shipping East. Quality is appreciated here as well as elsewhere; and while the cull fruits must be sold, and the East does not want them, neither does this state. Some other use might well be found for them.

SEASON OF FAIRS HERE.

The season of fairs is here. The first indication of livestock conditions in a twelvemonth is found at the fairs. Perhaps that is not altogether true, but certainly the fairs at least are a pretty accurate barometer of the condition of the breeding business, and that, in turn, reflects conditions among the flocks and herds in general. Entries at the fairs, according to the secretaries of all circuits, are larger than a year ago. This may be taken as meaning that breeders are more active in their business, and that stockmen in general are demanding breeding stock. And that means that the livestock industry is improved over a year ago.

REPLANTS PROBLEM.

In nearly every orchard some trees have failed, either when the orchard is young, or when it is older. Perhaps soil conditions were wrong and were not righted in time. Cultivation injuries have accounted for many trees. For one reason or another, every orchardist at times finds himself faced with the problem of replants. And every orchardist knows how difficult it is to make replants thrive. The older trees take the moisture and the plant food, and the little trees will not thrive.

One grower has suggested subsoiling deep all around the replant, cutting the roots of the trees that would rob it. He then gives it more water than the others, using a barrel if necessary, fertilizes freely and gives it a little special attention wherever possible. He claims success, and it sounds reasonable.

LITTLE EXCUSE.

The poultryman who has been in the business the shortest time makes the most profit; and the one who has been raising eggs for market the most years, shows the least results. At least this is the claim of M. W. Buster, assistant farm advisor and poultry specialist in Sonoma County, after a survey that included the Petaluma district. His figures show the men who have been in business five years or less make the most money and that profits decrease with each five-year period, the basis of division of his study.

He does not say why, but the answer is not so very difficult to find. The older poultrymen, nine times out of ten, are using obsolete equipment and methods. The new men adopt the best when they come in, just as their predecessor did. A few keep up with the times and improve their plants and practices, but they are few. With short courses offered by the Poultry Husbandry Division of the University of California, demonstrations and lectures at timely intervals by specialists from the Agricultural Extension Division, and farm advisors available for aid in nearly every county, as well as abundant literature and poultry publications, there is little excuse for the farmer not keeping up to date. As to expense, the figures are based on investment, depreciation, interest and every other item entering into the industry; and the profits were net profits.

SUDAN GRASS.

Sudan grass is being used on increasing acreages for forage and hay in California, and with good results. The few complaints against the crop seem in general to be made by those who have cut the crop too late to get the best results, and the stems are tough and fibrous. There is nothing gained in food value between blossoming and seed time, and there is no use to wait for the new shoots from the stool. These come after cutting just as well as before. Cut the hay just as the grass begins to show bloom.

HOME GARDEN MORE POPULAR.

With nutrition becoming more and more recognized as important in the home, the garden is taking a firmer hold in the rural and suburban districts. It is not difficult to raise most of the [illegible] vegetables [illegible] home demand. A [illegible] garden properly tended will [illegible] in the poorest year. In the country it [illegible] likely mean [illegible] the grocery [illegible] but [illegible] recreation and diversion of [illegible] order [illegible]

In California [illegible] every vegetable may be raised, and [illegible] a month in any [illegible] mountain, coastal [illegible] may [illegible] taken from the garden. It is a [illegible] business for the farmer, and a practical and paying avocation for the city dweller.

USE THE SOIL AUGER.

Orchards need water at the [illegible] for the proper setting of fruit buds. The work in the orchard is not ended with the harvest. [illegible] practice of many farmers in continuing [illegible] irrigation is money wasted in most instances. It is not well, of course, to let the trees be robbed of moisture by the weeds, but there is little value in the mountaining of a dust mulch at this time.

See that the tree has plenty of moisture, but determine the state of moisture by the soil auger, not by guess. Keep the weeds out, for they take moisture and furnish seeds for next year. But don't waste time and effort in useless cultivation. About this time of the year subsoiling may be done to get maximum results. Run a furrow or two between the tree rows and turn the water in the ditch. It will take the water a long time to get through to the end, but there will be a lot of very useful moisture in the soil.

But don't irrigate too much. Again, use the soil auger. Don't bring up the water level with its attendant alkali and ruin the land. In heavy lands, excessive irrigation means cold soil, lack of air and rotted roots. If the trees are not doing well, even in a dry year, don't jump to the conclusion that it is a lack of water. The soil auger will tell you whether it is or not. And if the soil has moisture, find out from some one who knows what the trouble really is before time and money are wasted in haphazard attempts at cure.

ROOT BORER TREATMENT.

Before the fall irrigation that may leave the soil too wet for the use of paradichlorobenzene, apply it to the trees if they are bothered by borers. They are just about ready for the treatment now. Spread the ring around the tree and make a mound of earth, cone-like, from the chemical to the tree trunk. Root borers don't like this treatment; the gas crystals are almost certain death.

TO SECOND PLACE.

For the first time in many years California drops into second place in the leading herd report of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America. Michigan takes the place from California. Washington is third and New York fourth. Sargent Brothers of Tulare lead in this state, and Pottenger Sanitarium of Monrovia is second. Eighteen herds in this state won points. The decline in California follows the foot and mouth disease epidemic, in which some of the finest herds of America were slaughtered.

BLACKHEAD IN TURKEYS.

Watch for the blackhead in the turkey flock. The heads are not necessarily black, but they may be. The disease makes the bird obviously sick, it is off its feed, becomes lame and dies. If in doubt, a post-mortem that discloses yellow spots on the liver is a sure indication of the disease. Prevention is the best cure. Keep the turkeys away from other fowls on the farm and keep them on soil that has not been infected by germs of the disease.

OLD PEST IN NEW PASTURES.

The fact that the corn-ear worm is so named does not mean it attacks only corn. Nor does the fact that other pests are named in conjunction with other crops mean they do more than specialize in them. When their favored feasts have failed with harvest, they may, and very often do, turn to others. So, when a crop is found attacked, it is not always a new pest, but an old one in new pastures.

BOARDER COWS CULLED.

Two hundred and twenty-one boarder cows, that were not returning profits to their owners, were culled from California dairy herds during one month this summer as a result of cow-testing association work. Stanislaus ridded itself of thirty-six and other counties less; but it was a good month in cow culling and resultant increased production.

Dairy Day—September 25 has been designated San Jacinto dairy day at Hemet, Riverside County.

THE PIONEER PASSES

(ALVA VAN RIPER.)

No muffled drum, no bugle note,
Nor martial pomp which men devote
To the dead of war's red strife;
A flower, a tear, from those bereft,
At the end of the trail of life.

Yet Caesar's eagles ne'er were flown
Over empire more than this, unknown
Till carved by the Pioneer!
And now, across on another strand,
A pilgrim in a far-off land,
He passes with never a fear.

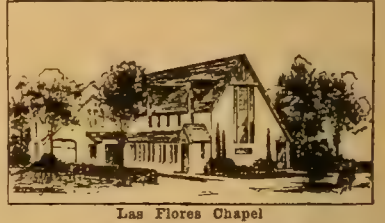
BRILLIANT NATIVE SON JURIST SUDDENLY PASSES TO REWARD.



San Francisco—Thomas J. Lennon, associate justice of the California Supreme Court and one of the state's ablest jurists, died suddenly August 14. He was a native of Marysville, Yuba County, aged 60, and is survived by a wife and a son.

Justice Lennon served eight years as judge of the Marin County Superior Court, eight years as presiding justice of Division Two of the State District Court of Appeals, and nearly eight years as associate justice of the State Supreme Court. Testifying to his judicial ability, is the statement that not one of his decisions as a superior court judge or appellate court justice had ever been reversed by a higher tribunal.

Justice Lennon was a highly thought of and active member of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, being long affiliated with Mount Tamalpais Parlor No. 64 of San Rafael, Marin County. He frequently represented that Parlor in the Grand Parlor, had served the Order as a Grand Trustee, and at the time of his passing was chairman of the Grand Parlor Board of Appeal.

SECRETARY GLEN ELLEN N.S. DIES WHILE ON VACATION.

Santa Maria (Santa Barbara County) -While passing through here on a vacation August 10, death overtook Charles Julius Poppe. He was a native of Sonoma County, aged 74, and for years had conducted a general merchandise store at Glen Ellen, Sonoma County. A wife and three children survive.

HONOR THE CALIFORNIA PIONEER

into deep, settled purposes of the man—the strong man—whose hopes are with the future and whose noble aims are not only to make himself immortal, but the world better and happier.

"But I would address the Pioneers!—the really Pioneer, the Pioneer of the plain,—and in so doing must again be permitted to recur to the past. A little more than seventy years ago we emerged from a state of colonial vassalage—a little more than half a century since the now model republic and one of the first great powers of the world was locked within the rocky embrace of the Alleghanies. Wild, uncultivated, unsubdued, the 'Great West,' now the home of the hardy, the industrious and the enterprising, breathing with the nervous energy of the age and actively engaged in working out the difficult labor of human progression, slept the deep sleep of savage seclusion; a vast storehouse, locked and bolted then, but now open and free, and paying vast tribute to the comprehensive sagacity which acquired it and the fearless enterprise which developed it. Onward and yet onward rushed the resistless current of American emigration westward. The axe of the adventurous woodsman rang through the grand old forests of a hitherto unpenetrated wilderness; the church and the schoolhouse, the plough and the steam engine, the hut, the hamlet, the village and the city followed, springing up in the difficult track of the intrepid Pioneer. The indomitable energy, the untiring industry, the ceaseless activity of our people, buoyed and sustained by the beneficent policy of the General Government, broke the confined barriers of territorial restriction and poured a tide of rushing, but regenerating emigration over the prairies and mountains of the West. Jewel after jewel was thus added to and sparkled in the coronet of the union, until their concentrated flashing attracted the attention of the civilized world, and roused its hereditary powers from their long-indulged dream of vaunted supremacy.

"But the end was not yet. There is a restless, ever-active and adventurous spirit, I will not say peculiar to, but certainly more strongly developed in, our population than in that of any other nation, which cannot remain quiescent when there are fields of discovery, and especially upon their own continent, yet to be won, and untried dangers in the attainment of difficult objects to be encountered. This roving, restless disposition is objected to by some as a national evil. I cannot now stop to discuss the question, except simply to remark that practical results would seem to authorize a different conclusion. But for this wandering spirit, which delights in wild adventure, and abhors, if you will, all social and domestic restrictions; which finds no happiness about the hearthstone, hallowed though it be by a thousand tender associations, by the memory of a mother who nursed and cherished, a father who counseled and directed, and a sister who pressed her warm kiss of love upon his cheek—

'A sister's kiss, so pure and holy
That an angel's lip could feel Nothing earthly in the magic Impress of its heavenly seal.'

I repeat, that but for this wandering spirit, I do believe that the proud national spectacle we today present—a free people numbering not less than 25,000,000 souls, inhabiting a territory stretching well nigh from the inhospitable regions of eternal snows to climes where the breath of never-fading flowers loads the balmy atmosphere with fragrance—would be yet a dream of the enthusiast or visionary, an ardently hoped-for but slowly-developing consummation of national greatness; for in the acquisition and organization of new territories and formation of new states, government has followed in the path of the Pioneer, and law waited upon the settlement of the emigrant.

"But to return: Beyond the barrier of the Rocky Mountains — that fearfully magnificent chain of eternal hills—lay, bathed in sunshine, the dreamland of our boyhood. From old Spanish manuscripts, musty and mysterious; incredible tales of adventurous trappers, and doubtful log-books of daring whalers, stories of glittering sands washed, not lasted, by lake-like oceans, of beautiful islands, luxuriant valleys and golden mountains were derived. The settler upon our then Western frontier heard, and forgetting the dangers and hardships he had already encountered in his progress westward, 'purposed in his heart to take a further flight.' The spirit of adventure grew strong within him, and unshrinking determination, that magic key which unlocks the portals of unfailing success, nerved him for the fearful adventure. The home he had builded—patiently, laboriously, painfully builded—was to be abandonded. Upon his contemplated pathway arid deserts burned, lowering mountains frowned and the savage denizens of the forest lay in wait to destroy. But the intrepid spirit of the American Pioneer is to be turned from the bent of its purpose by neither fancied nor real dangers and difficulties. With the wife of his bosom, then, and the little children of his 'house and heart,' he set out upon his fearful expedition.

"To portray the toils, the sufferings and the privations, resulting too often in disease and death, those hideous attendants upon these expeditions, is not for me. Few of us will ever forget the awful story of the ill-fated Donner party. Children perishing in the arms of their dying mothers, wives falling famished at the feet of their exhausted husbands; hunger, like a gaunt spectre, waking the echoes of the dismal mountains with its wailing cry for bread, and starvation with horrible appetite feasting upon the withered flesh of human beings. There are those within the sound of my voice—the Pioneers of '43, '45, '47—who will bear me witness that it was, at these several periods, no holiday excursion to seek, across the continent, the distant shores of the Pacific. But the American Pioneers: gathering here and there from the narratives of exploring expeditions and the reports of trappers and trading companies just enough to inflame the fancy and whet the appetite for adventure, sought and found amidst dangers and difficulties of which we, the steamship '49ers, know nothing, a foothold and a home upon these distant shores.

"I cannot forbear introducing in this connection the thoughts and reflections of a fair Pioneer, suggested by the occasion of this celebration, nor have I an apology to offer for doing so; except to her, for they are at once appropriate and beautiful:

" 'Today the Pioneer with a proud heart beholds our valleys fenced and teeming with the fruits of cultivation and the rewards of toil; our cities crowded with the commerce of all seas, and noisy with the hum of intellect and energy; our bays and rivers white with the full sails of wealth and the sinewy strength of immigration; the ravines and mountain gulches cheerful with the ring of pick-axe and shovel, and the whole wide land opening up the riches of her golden

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment

(A National Organization)
Headquarters: WASHINGTON, D. C.

HOW YOU CAN HELP!

The fighting force against prohibition and all its resulting evils is The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. The present goal we are driving for is a modification of the Volstead Act. Our battlecry is: "Light Wines and Beer Now, No Saloons Ever." With the steady growth of the Association our political strength has become pronounced and through such organized effort, and only thus, can any hope for modification be entertained. To win in politics, organization—voting strength—is the first requisite. To educate the people to the Association's stand for Temperance, against Prohibition; for Liberty, against Tyranny; for Preservation of Constitutional Rights, against Rule of a "Thou shalt not" Fanatical Minority, requires the maintenance of a magazine broadcasting an educational campaign.

Every subscribing member gained by the Association brings nearer the day when prohibition, with its present drastic, unenforceable laws, will be a thing of the past.

Now is the appointed time to join—not that elusive tomorrow! At no future time will your membership or your subscription mean more as a contribution toward the success of our cause! Let us hear from you! We are fighting YOUR fight—to restore YOUR rights, and to reduce YOUR taxes.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

HUMBOLDT NATIVES HONOR NEW N.D. GRAND SECRETARY.

FERNDALE (HUMBOLDT COUNTY)—One of the most enjoyable local fraternal events in a long while was the reception tendered by Oneonta 71 July 23 to Mrs. Hattie E. Roberts, one of its members, elected Grand Secretary at the Sacramento Grand Parlor in June. Every Parlor of Native Sons and Native Daughters in Humboldt County was well represented. A profusion of lovely flowers decorated the hall.

Past Grand President Anna L. Monroe, also affiliated with Oneonta, extended a welcome to the Grand Secretary and in the Parlor's behalf presented Mrs. Roberts with an exquisite bouquet; in a rose was found the key to a handsome traveling-bag. Congratulations were extended by Miss Rose Wasmuth, on behalf of Occident 28 N.D.G.W. (Eureka), by Thomas K. Carr, on behalf of Humboldt 14 N.S.G.W. (Eureka), by S. J. Damon, on behalf of Ferndale 93 N.S.G.W., and D.D.G.P. Mrs. L. V. Holmes. Among the many out-of-the-county visitors was Past Grand President Margaret Grote-Hill of San Francisco, who addressed the gathering on "Humboldt County's contribution to the Native Daughters of the Golden West." Grand Secretary Roberts, with heart-inspired words, responded to all the nice things said of her and said there would always be a welcome for all Natives at her office in San Francisco.

Vocal solos were rendered by Miss Marie East and R. A. Grinsell and Mrs. Grace Rusk and Mrs. Bernice Mills were heard in a duet. At whist prizes were won by Thomas F. Boyd, Jeppe Jesperson and Mrs. Chas. Grinsell. A fine banquet concluded the long-to-be-remembered occasion.

Grand Secretary Roberts is a native of Humboldt County and a past president and the former recording secretary of Oneonta Parlor. For fifteen years she was vice-principal of the Ferndale elementary-school and a member of the Humboldt County board of education. She has always been active in club work, being a past president of the Humboldt County Federation of Women's Clubs and a member of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Eureka.

MRS. HATTIE E. ROBERTS.
Grand Secretary N.D.G.W.

Wonderful Party.

Nevada City—The entertainment and dance sponsored August 11 by Laurel 6 and Manzanita 29 N.D.G.W. and Hydraulic 56 and Quartz 58 N.S.G.W. was the prettiest and jolliest affair given by the Nevada County Parlors in some time. It was held at a resort three miles west of here on the Downieville highway. The program started at 8 p. m. and included an address by Past Grand President Alison F. Watt; cornet duet, Harold J. George, Caleb Chinn; vocal solo, Miss Bertha Fuller; piano solo, Cecil Coughlin; vocal solo, Ed Burtner; charleston dance, Miss Gertrude Wilde.

Dancing and whist followed the program. Some of the old-time dances, such as the Virginia reel, rye waltz, etc., were danced. At cards, first prizes were won by Mrs. Watt and David S. Rowe, while the consolations went to Miss Maud Keenan and M. Levee. Each Native Daughter brought lunch for herself and a guest and at 11 o'clock close to 400 enjoyed a basket supper. The hall was prettily decorated in American and State (Bear) Flags.

The committee that arranged the affair consisted of: From Grass Valley—Robert Paine, Loyal Freeman, Ray George, Beatrice George, Bulah Coombs, Alyne McGagin. From Nevada City—Lottie Eden, Margaret Fortier, Eleanore Bolton, Ezra Kilroy, Ed Baker, Geo. Nagle. The party was declared a wonderful one, and at departure all expressed the hope that another would be held in the near future.

Menlo Park—August 5 officers of Menlo 211 were installed by D.D.G.P. Dora Wilson, M. Struzenegger becoming president. Members of Menlo 185 N.S.G.W. were guests. Addresses were made by D.D.G.P. Wilson, Judge Angelotti and Grand Trustee Anna Thuesen. A banquet, enjoyed by all, was followed by dancing.

Grace Loverich, retiring president of No. 211, recently entertained her officers at a luncheon at her Southgate home. The tables were beautifully decorated with vari-colored flowers. Cards followed the lunch. The hostess was presented with a lovely picture by her guests.

THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

MELTING POT EXPLODED

NO LEGISLATION ENACTED IN THE Federal Congress has been more generally discussed, in and out of the national lawmaking body, than the Immigration Law, passed by the Congress in 1924. Congressman Albert Johnson of Washington State dealt with the important subject of immigration in an address delivered in the House of Representatives June 25. A portion of his address is here presented, for every Californian is, or should be, interested in the matter of immigration:

"Not long ago it was very fashionable for speakers and writers to dwell upon the idea that America is under an obligation to assist in solving the problems of Europe. I want to present to this House and to the country the view that America has rendered a notable service to the Old World, and to the whole world, by faithfully providing for the welfare of the people of the United States. It seems to me that benefits unnumbered, not only to ourselves, but to Europe and the world at large, have sprung from the efforts of American citizens to support and defend the citadel of American political and financial integrity during the eight years and more since the signing of the armistice. In the preservation of America, in the effort to keep our country strong enough to render the world service marked out for her by destiny, not the least important measures have been the immigration restriction acts passed by Congress and approved by President Harding in 1921 and President Coolidge in 1924." Following consideration of the "flood of foreigners pouring into the country" prior to the enactment of the 1921 immigration legislation, Congressman Johnson continued:

"It should be understood that the Immigration Act of 1924 is not an exclusion statute except insofar as it applies to persons of Oriental race. In its treatment of Occidentals, it rears no absolute barrier. It merely defers the privilege of admission. By determining the number of persons of a particular nationality who may enter in a given period, it delays the entrance of all others of that nationality. It does not say that a certain German or Italian or Scandinavian may not enter the United States. Instead, it says he may enter in his turn after prior applicants shall have been accommodated.

"Every would-be immigrant of Occidental race could be admitted next month under the terms of the act if there were fewer of them. It is the pressure of emigration in Europe even more than the immigration barrier erected by America that detains them.

"The one exclusion phase of the law applies equally to all Orientals as 'persons ineligible to citizenship.' To be sure, only one Oriental country was deemed to be vitally affected when the law was under consideration. But that country, Japan, had long enjoyed a species of favoritism in the matter. It occupied a preferred position, in that it was privileged, under the terms of a so-called 'gentlemen's agreement,' to send certain of its nationals to the United States, while all other Orientals were excluded.

"The Immigration Act of 1924 merely wiped out the privilege accorded by the 'gentlemen's agreement.' It created no discrimination against the Japanese. On the other hand, it did away with the discrimination theretofore existing against Orientals other than Japanese. In brief, it put the Japanese on a plane of equality with their fellows of the Far East. We now exclude with equal fairness all the yellow races, Japanese as well as Koreans, Chinese, Malayans, Hindus, Afghans, Siamese, Javanese. That this is just and equitable and consonant with sound national policy cannot be disputed by any who fully appreciate the problems of the United States.

"Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, two years have passed since the Immigration Act of 1924 became operative. Its effects upon migration the world over have been positive. Its benefits to the United States have been so marked as to confound those who opposed its enactment. Its administration has been accomplished with an ease and smoothness unparalleled and unexpected. It deserves no important critism from any who think in terms of America's welfare.

"It is a noteworthy fact that the Immigration Act of 1924 has reduced the total influx of aliens approximately 50 percent. But more important —aye, of transcendant importance,—is the fact that the successful operation of the new law has put to an end, once and for all time, the idea that America was destined by Providence to be the asylum to which the distressed of all lands might repair. The asylum idea (some have called it the insane asylum idea) has been wiped entirely from the minds of thinking Americans.

"The myth of the 'melting pot' has been exploded. Face to face with the inescapable fact that the United States cannot find room, or houses, or food, for the surplus populations of the rest of the world, Americans have not hesitated to abandon the twin fallacies which seemed to mean so much a generation or two ago. realize now, as we never realized before, that people who are unwanted in the lands of their birth have no 'right' to an asylum here. We have come to appreciate at last the fact that our vaunted 'melting pot' is choked with dross and incapable of pouring forth an undiluted Americanism.

"The intent of the framers of the Immigration Act of 1924 was that it should, in a measure, restore the racial balance of the people of the United States. Having regard for the fact that our country was founded by immigrants from the countries of Europe which for centuries struggled toward the light of liberty, which, indeed, had established the most liberal institutions then known, it was frankly intended that immigration of like kind should be least discouraged. Contrary to the belief of some, this intention was not put forward with the idea of discriminating against other racial stocks. Rather it was forced by recognition of the fact that American institutions are best appreciated by, hence safest in control of, those people who for generations have been practiced in the duties and obligations of free citizenship.

"Freemen are not made in the twinkling of an eye. Striking the shackles from a slave does not at once invest him in the habiliments of the citizen born. A serf released from his serfdom still is a serf in mind, if not in body.

"America was founded and preserved by men whose progenitors for centuries had been freemen. They knew the privileges of their state, but, more important, they appreciated their duties and responsibilities. Generations of struggle for liberty, generations of practice in the management of free institutions had bred in them those qualities of heart and mind which alone conceived and brought forth government of the people, by the people, for the people.

"In the framing of our immigration law it was deemed essential that people of a kind like unto those founding fathers whom we delight to honor should be favored over others whose advantages in the world have been fewer or less. This is not to say that the more backward peoples are undesirable. We have not excluded them, and we shall not. But, frankly and fairly, we decline to be outnumbered or overbalanced by them. We intend that as soon as possible America shall cease to be a polyglot boarding-house; that eventually we shall become an homogeneous people.

"This is the essence of our immigration policy. It is the vital element in the Immigration Act of 1924. We are determined to keep America American by admitting fewer and better of what the Old World has to offer. We are determined to make America stronger; to preserve, insofar as we can, the institutions of liberty and equality that were created and held for us at such great cost of effort, toil and struggle.

"What could be more important to the world at large? How better can we serve the world than by providing thus for our own house? Certainly an America overrun by strange peoples from near and far, speaking many tongues, threatened hourly by diverse conceptions of liberty, tending toward no definite goal, crowded and harrassed by the jangling and clanging of a hundred ethnic, racial and political animosities imported from abroad, would be an object of pity and of scorn throughout the universe. It would not, because it could not, render any substantial service to the people of other lands.

"But an America united and strong, daily growing more closely knit together, guarding its gates well against the malcontents and misfits of other nations, speaking one language and intent on the preservation of liberty and prosperity within its boarders, can and will become the pride of the world. Such an America will not neglect her obligations. Her service to the motherlands and fatherlands, and indeed to all countries of the earth, will be the brightest glory of all recorded time."

ADMISSION DAY CELEBRATION.

The San Francisco Joint Admission Day Committee of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West met August 20 at Native Sons' Building and practically completed all arrangements for this city's participation, as a county unit, in the Admission Day parade at Sacramento, September 9. This unit will be headed by the municipal band of San Francisco, accompanied by details of San Francisco police and fire departments as an escort, and the board of supervisors will provide a float characteristic of the industries of the city.

The various Parlors have secured headquarters at Sacramento and will hold open house during the celebration. The railroad rate of $2.50 round trip is expected to take many nonmembers of the Orders to the celebration, who will take the opportunity to visit the California State Fair, which will be held during the week at Sacramento.

Eugene H. O'Donnell is chairman, Joseph Rose, Mae Himes-Noonan and Helen Mann vice-chairmen, Harry C. Schroeder secretary, Albert Franzen treasurer of the committee.

The Native Daughters are actively participating, and will be escorted in the Admission Day parade by the Native Sons. An added feature this year will be the newly-organized Native Sons' patrol, who will head the parade under the command of W. J. O'Dea, captain, and Frank Sargent, lieutenant.

Enthusiasm is gaining every day, and a very creditable showing will be made by the San Francisco Parlors at the Admission Day celebration in the Capital City, September 9.

TEA LARGELY ATTENDED.

Mae Himes-Noonan, Grand Vice-president N.D.G.W., was the honored guest August 7 at a tea sponsored by Portola Parlor No. 172 N.D.G.W. Approximately 175 members of the Order from San Francisco and the bay region enjoyed the festivities.

Mrs. Agnes Curry presided as toastmistress, and a short talk was given by Mrs. Noonan. Vocal, piano and orchestral selections made up the entertainment program.

NATIVE SONS HONORED.

At the recent meeting of the American Bar Association at Denver, Colorado, Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel of Bay City Parlor No. 104 N.S.G.W. was elected to the association's general council, and Judge Frank M. Angellotti of Mount Tamalpais Parlor No. 64 N.S.G.W. was elected to the association's council for the State of California.

GRAND TRUSTEE HONOR GUEST.

Alta Parlor No. 3 N.D.G.W. entertained August 14 in honor of Grand Trustee Annie Thuesen, a member of the Parlor. She was escorted by the marshal to a seat of honor while Mrs. Mauer impressively sang "I Will Love You Always." From the Parlor she was the recipient of a lovely silver flower bowl.

SOUTH "BOYS" WILL CELEBRATE.

South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. will celebrate Admission Day at Sacramento in the usual enthusiastic manner, with entertainment, dancing, refreshments and participation in the parade. Over two hundred members have signified their intention of taking part in the parade and will be uniformed in a costume in keeping with the weather conditions. The costume will consist of light shirt and trousers, blue necktie and straw hat. The members will be led by the Parlor's thirty-piece drum and piccolo corps, one of the best in the Order, and will make a good showing and prove to all that No. 157 is in sympathy with the movement to keep alive the date of the Admission of California into the union.

Most of the members going to Sacramento will leave San Francisco the evening of September 8 and will be at the Parlor headquarters in the Tuesday Club, opposite Sutter's Fort, where entertainment, dancing and refreshments may be enjoyed. All Native Sons and Native Daughters and their friends are invited to enjoy the hospitality of the Parlor, which will be pleased to have them pay it a visit the evening of September 8. Dancing will start at 8 p. m. and continue until midnight; on September 9, from 2 until 6 p. m.

August 28 South San Francisco Parlor held a forty-niners' night at Masonic Hall, 4705 Third street. Nearly one thousand people enjoyed the evening with entertainment and dancing. Costumes of every description were worn by the men and women who attended, and the scene resembled one of the long-ago days, now only witnessed in pictures. This forty-niners' ball is an annual event with the Parlor, being given just prior to Admission Day, and each year the people who attend leave with the thought that they will be present again the following year.

PUBLIC INSTALLATION.

Officers of Golden State Parlor No. 50 N.D.G.W. were publicly installed August 4 by D.D.G.P. Myrtle Ross, E. Abbott becoming president. The district deputy was assisted by Grand Inside Sentinel Evelyn I. Carlson, E. O'Meara and Sister Both. The Parlor presented gifts to Junior Past President P. Barr and D.D.G.P. Ross. Refreshments were served.

RECEPTION FOR GRAND ORGANIST.

Genevieve Parlor No. 132 N.D.G.W. gave a reception in honor of its very popular member, Lillian B. Troy, recently elected Grand Organist. A most enjoyable musical program was presented by the members of the Genevieve Glee Club and by the two comedy stars, Nora Scheflin and Annie Ayers. A beautiful leather overnite case was presented to Grand Organist Troy by the Parlor and a number of other gifts were given her by individual members. At the close of the program a most tempting banquet was served. The committee in charge of the evening's festivities was Lillian Ryan, Kate Moore, Branice Peguillan, Hanna Twohig.

Genevieve has made great preparations for the Admission Day celebration in Sacramento. It will have seventy-five members in line, escorted by the Parlor's drum and bugle corps, Lillian Troy captain. The members will be in white crepe-de-chine, trimmed in pink, with large pink picture hats; the drum and bugle corps in pink crepe-de-chine, military capes, army hats. It will also have a pink-decorated machine, carrying the banner of the Parlor.

JOINT DANCE BIG SUCCESS.

A joint social dance was given at Redmen's Hall August 25 by Olympus Parlor No. 189 N.S.G.W. and Fremont Parlor No. 59 N.D.G.W. A large crowd was in attendance, and during the evening several vaudeville artists from local theaters gave feature numbers.

gation of fifty members of South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. who, with their wives, attended as a surprise to the chairman of the evening, George W. Schonfeld.

So many compliments were paid the committee —George W. Schonfeld chairman, Lester Castillo, Daniel Sheehan, Elmer Cuadro, Henry Joost, Harvey Carte—that it promises another enjoyable social in the near future.

PRETTY EFFECT.

The lodge-rooms of Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. were crowded August 4 when the officers were publicly installed by D.D.G.P. Eleanor Teeling, assisted by May Moble, Marguerite Sullivan and a full corps of acting grand officers from Las Lomas Parlor No. 72 N.D.G.W. Mae Edwards, the Parlor's own grand officer, took her place as Grand Trustee, completing the team

SAN FRANCISCO

(ELBY WAGNER.)

In the land that borders the sunset,
By the Pacific's golden sands,
Sprung from the toil of hardy men,
A beautiful city stands.

High on the hills it rises,
Majestic, proud and serene,
A symbol of Western progress—
Born of the Argonauts' dream.

There by the grey-green waters,
Where ageless tides have swirled,
It's a jewel in a wondrous setting,
Famous around the world.

'Twas nurtured from Yerba Buena,
By a munificent nature blessed—
San Francisco, the Golden Gate City, of installation officers. All the installed and installing officers were in evening dress, making a very pretty effect as they entered the room.
San Francisco, the Gem of the West!

A gift of hand-painted china was presented D.D.G.P. Teeling, and to Adele Baker, the retiring past president, was presented the regulation emblematic pin of the Parlor for her faithful services during the four years she so loyally served while going through the chairs. The committee in charge prepared a splendid program which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Ice cream and cake were enjoyed while chatting over the evening's pleasures.

SIXTEEN YEARER INITIATED.

Officers of Golden Gate Parlor No. 158 N.D.G.W. were installed July 26 by D.D.G.P. Margaret Sullivan. Eleanor Nelson, the first granddaughter of Mrs. E. McNemey, a charter member of the Parlor, was initiated. She is the first 16-year-old native daughter to affiliate with the Parlor in accordance with the law amended at the Sacramento Grand Parlor. She was marshaled into the room by her aunt, Claire Lindsay, and obligated by the Parlor's first past president, Sophie Siebe.

D.D.G.P. Sullivan entertained with remarks and refreshments were served. Golden Gate will do its share toward making the Admission Day celebration at Sacramento a success.

heart to the great spirit of progression that woes and wins her. Amidst all this, let him pause and musingly remember when, standing first upon the snowy mountain top, his soiled and weary sandal-shoes grey with the dust of weary miles and worn with rough realities -let him remember how the land then broke upon his sight, sleeping and unconscious of her own beauty; the plains echoing no sound but the wild laughter of the mountain stream; the green hills dotted over with cattle never herded; the oaks casting their broad shadows day by day alike; the long moss swaying silent in the balmy wind, and the ravines and gorges dark with the undisturbed and unbroken bloom of the great pine and redwood. Let him go farther back, and recollect when the wild fever of adventure first possessed him; when the dear reverence for his father's hearthstone, the broad old acres of the homestead, the graves of the gray-haired and golden-locked, alike with the living voices of the loved, persuaded him in vain against his romance, and he went forth to make his dream real.

"'Let him remember the weary march, the accident, the disappointment, the hunger, the thirst, the storm; the knowledge of the heart of man in trial; the mistaken mask of goodness dropping off from friends, and the stern, desperate struggle of life with the grim monster in all forms. Let him muse on these things, and in his memory unfurl the scroll, like a flag, stripes first and stars afterwards, until, like our country's flag, it hallows the soil it waves over and swells the humble standard-bearer's heart with gratitude and pride till fondly saying, 'magna pars fui,' he shall rise up equal to his destiny in the future—a great and individual destiny, that of reclaiming from forgetfulness and utter silence a fertile garden in which to transplant systems of government, institutions of human knowledge, ties of society and hopes of advancement and fame; until he shall feel a proud consciousness that he is a coworker in the formation of a great and new state—a land that offers fortune only to the laborer worthy of his hire, that will give permanent position only to talent and the inborn, God-given power of command, wealth to the young and strong while he has life and tastes to enjoy it, and success to the ambitious who has not wearied out before the goal is half attained; where men begin to understand the relations of the past towards the future; where old age looks to youth for the keen sight and strong arm it has lost, and confers upon it in return the wisdom of experience and suggestion of example.' Thus eloquently speak, think and feel the Pioneer Ladies of the country.

"Few in numbers, but strong in the characteristic energy of our people, the early American population of the Californias exerted an influence upon the destiny of the people amongst whom they had taken up their abode which in the brief period of a few years ripened into dominion. I cannot but regret that the limits of this address will not admit of a recurrence to some of the many interesting incidents connected with the early history of California and the part taken by the early settlers during the pendency of the war with Mexico.

"Says one of the oldest and truest friends of California: 'The first emigrants came not to seek the rich treasures which glitter upon the hills. They came to clear the road for civilization.' And they have done it. Their mission has been gloriously performed. The tree which they planted and watched over has taken deep root; the rich fruit it produces is the fruit of civilization, and the world plucks it eagerly from the bending branches, and 'eateth thereof.' Honor, then, to the daring spirits who preceded the Star of Empire on its westward way! Honor to the men and the women of '43, '45 and '46, who cleared the path across trackless deserts and through dangerous mountain passes, for succeeding generations to follow. Honor to the California Pioneer!"

spiel of Suisun, Justus F. Craemer of Orange, George S. Gould of Salinas, A. C. Hardison of Santa Paula. These men, representing all parts of California, are earnest and sincere in their desire to make the State Fair "bigger and better" each year. Three of them, Ramsay, Borden and Perry, have served continuously for fifteen years.

The State Agricultural Society welcomes the Native Sons and Native Daughters and will do everything in its power to make their Admission Day celebration in Sacramento this year a huge and happy event. It is very glad indeed to have an opportunity to share in the celebration, and feels that the visitors will be convinced that one of the best ways to know and fully appreciate the wonders and resources of California is to attend the annual State Fair.

revered, rather than the design, and both flags typify that spirit.

The Bear Flag Revolution was followed by the raising of the Flag of the United States at several California places. It would be well for all Californians, particularly the Natives, to fix the dates firmly in their minds, so that inaccuracies in referring to the dates may be eliminated:

Monterey—July 7, 1846, by Commodore John Drake Sloat.

San Francisco—July 9, 1846, by Commander John B. Montgomery.

Sonoma—July 9, 1846, by Lieutenant Joseph Warren Revere.

Sacramento—July 11, 1846, by Captain John A. Sutter.

San Jose—July 13, 1846, by Captain Thomas Fallon.

San Juan Bautista—July 18, 1846, by General John C. Fremont.

San Diego—July 29, 1846, by Commander Samuel Francis Dupont.

Santa Barbara—August 4, 1846, by Commodore Robert Field Stockton.

San Pedro—August 6, 1846, by Commodore Robert Field Stockton.

Los Angeles—August 13, 1846, by Commodore Robert Field Stockton.

NATIVE SONS TO DEDICATE PUBLIC SCHOOL AT EUREKA.

Eureka (Humboldt County)—September 12 the grand officers of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West will dedicate the new high-school here.

The principal speakers will be Grand President Hilliard E. Welch and Junior Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler. Accompanying them, to assist in the ceremonies, will be Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan.

HEAVY PENALTIES.

For the first six months of this year, California State motor cops made 37,246 arrests for infractions of the motor laws, and in the performance of their duty traveled 1,879,150 miles.

Fines for the period totaled $227,424.25, and delinquent fees amounted to $75,593.80. The number of violators fined was 8,104. Of those arrested, 12,482 were charged with speeding. The record covers forty-five counties in which the state traffic squads operate.

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

HOLLYWOOD, A FAUBOURG OF LOS Angeles, continuous with that city, administratively a part of it, shading off into other fauborgs, but nevertheless possessing a singular character of its own, is a "special place," and as one drives or walks through it the "specialness" of that character is peculiarly evident on all sides.

For the most part, Hollywood is a plain lying under high hills up the sides of which its winding streets climb picturesquely up and down, in and out. That's the physical Hollywood; a place but a brief generation or two back known to its aborigine habitants as "Cahuenga," later named by the padres "La Nopalera," the land of the cactus.

Hollywood in cultural and educational elements maintains the high standard nature provided in its setting. Schools, churches, clubs, and various similar institutions, many in number and varied in character, but all tending to enhance the community in its social, cultural and academic value, are equally as conspicuous as are the hills which guard the place along its north and western boundaries.

Along with its schools, club life in Hollywood is an outstanding feature. There are nine service and luncheon clubs, a Woman's club, Business and Professional Women's club, Velada club, various art and social organizations, all working to the one end—a Hollywood as a cultural center. Its schools, numbering sixteen, including thirteen grades, one junior and two major high-schools, enroll more than 15,000 pupils, while the University of California in Hollywood had nearly 6,000 students this year.

There are, in addition to these institutions of learning, numerous private and parish schools of various sorts, adding to the general school enrollment of Hollywood some 1,700 pupils. Some of these are devoted to the education of young women, some to the smaller children, while others specialize in foreign languages. Military academies number two, while two sectarian institutions maintain three departments of common education.

Churches in Hollywood, representing some of the most beautiful masonry piles in the southland of California, number thirty-eight, with an average communicant list of 1,000 each. Practically every denomination, sect and creed is established in Hollywood, and as a crowning feature of the entire spiritual life in the community is the "Pilgrimage Play," the Life of Christ in drama. Here is an institution of divine uplift not duplicated or attempted in any other part of the United States, and in only one place in Europe.

In drama form the events that marked the life of Christ are presented every year in an outdoor theatre set against the hills which form the southern extremity of the famed Cahuenga Pass. The "Pilgrimage Play" is an impressive spectacle, made more so by the nature of the episodes

FALL PROGRAM U. S. C.

SHOWING A GAIN OF [illegible] STUDENTS over last year's [illegible] the summer session of the University of Southern California, Los Angeles, came to a close last night with 41 [illegible] for [illegible] of the 4,000 students and teachers to return to their schools and occupations in September. According to statistics at Dr. L. B. Rogers, dean of the U.S.C. summer school, a total of 4,005 college students, teachers and executives availed themselves of the summer courses of the University of Southern California on the Trojan campus this season.

The six weeks' session, with classes and lectures held between June 28 and August 6, was the most popular in attendance, 2,267 registrations being recorded for that period. The post-summer session of Southern California, an intensive three weeks' late-summer school especially planned to benefit teachers and college students whose pre-fall training demands additional university courses, was attended by 830 registrants, and the very early eight-weeks' session, which opened June 14, served 432 knowledge seekers on the U.S.C. campus, according to Dean Rogers' report to President R. B. von KleinSmid.

Evening courses given at Metropolitan College under the direction of Dr. T. W. MacQuarrie, dean of the U.S.C. night school, were attended during the July-August months by 300 adult-students. Law students during the summer quarter of the U.S.C. law school numbered 208; the fall quarter of the school of law, according to Dean Frank M. Porter, being scheduled to open September 15.

Dr. F. C. S. Schiller, head of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, one of England's leading philosophers of the humanistic school and a well-known writer on philosophic subjects, will become a member of the faculty of the University of Southern California this fall, according to Dr. Ralph Tyler Flewelling, head of the department of philosophy at U.S.C., who has just returned from an investigation tour of European universities.

Dr. Flewelling, who visited Oxford, Cambridge, Sorbonne, Strasbourg, the University of Rome and Geneva while on the continent and in England, brought back to Los Angeles as additions to Hoose philosophy library at U.S.C. many old and rare books and periodicals, including first editions of the philosophical works of Locke, Condillac and Reid, as well as a first edition of the works of Isaac Newton, written in Latin, which he considers one of the finest acquisitions to Hoose library.

enacted and the stage upon which they are presented. In this sequestered retreat, sheltered from distracting influences and canopied by the spangled heavens alone, an audience is put in a mood to enter into and appreciate the realism of the play which has been the means of giving Hollywood the sobriquet "Oberammergau of America."

But a stone's throw from the "Pilgrimage Play" theatre is another of nature's basins in the Santa Monica Mountains, the Hollywood Bowl, the center and seat of the highest forms of art in Hollywood, the home of the Symphony Under the Stars. Here is the place where the community life of Hollywood finds its expression in many forms of musical art. In this amphitheatre, now capable of seating more than 20,000 persons, for a period of ten weeks every summer thousands gather nightly to quaff the soothing beverage of symphonic art provided by an orchestra of 100 musicians under the leadership of the world's greatest masters.

Hollywood is the focal point of artists in all degrees. Culturally, it occupies a high eminence as its many high-class clubs, schools and churches denote. That it is a growing community is a fact proven in figures of population in 1922 as compared with 1926. In the former year the population was slightly more than 50,000. In 1926, expert surveys show, the population is 145,000.

SAN PEDRO THE GREAT HARBOR of the GRE AT SOUTHWEST

SAN PEDRO MAKING RAPID GROWTH

Lowell E. Jessen

SAN PEDRO, AS AN INDUSTRIAL CENter and as a community, is forging ahead at a pace never before equaled in the southern part of California. This city not only takes its place as the greatest export and importing harbor on the Pacific Coast, but as the choice residential section of the southland.

Figures from the United States customs office, from the marine exchange and the harbor department definitely establish San Pedro as one of the most rapidly growing and largest ports in the country. The remarkable feature of shipping here is the increase of general cargo, both export and import. This healthy condition likewise indicates the excellent status in the oil export and lumber import business, for which San Pedro has long been famous.

But this city has made still greater strides in a civic way. The new Y. M. C. A. building, which will be dedicated in September, marks a definite step forward, for the entertainment and accommodation of the army post and navy units, and for the general welfare of the city.

Opening of the Vanderlip road, over which thousands of motorists are traveling weekly and thus getting a view of San Pedro as a whole instead of as a part as seen from other highways, affords this city a distinct advantage.

Assurance of a federal building costing a half-million dollars has spurred local workers to renewed efforts to also secure a city office building, which has been promised. Both buildings will be big assets to this community.

One of the local banks will start work soon on a new building at Seventh and Mesa streets and another has recently purchased a corner lot at Seventh street and Pacific avenue, while several other big land deals have been consummated within the past few months.

Beautifying of the parks in San Pedro through the expenditure of $32,000 this year, the proposed enlargement of Alma park at a cost of approximately $100,000, the purchase of a strip of land to be added to Point Fermin park, and the cancellation of the oil lease which will permit immediate construction of Cabrillo beach are but a few of the events of the past few weeks that indicate the growth and activity of this port.

The development of San Pedro as a community, and most of the big projects considered recently will aid materially in that accomplishment, is rapidly catching up with its advancement in the world of commerce. Already there is a better community spirit manifested by residents here. This spirit is the exciter, so to speak, for greater civic accomplishments, and it is this spirit which will make San Pedro fulfill its place as the industrial center of the southland and as the home of the most substantial people in the country.

Long Beach Parlor No. 154. July 31 a cooked-food sale was held, with Hazel Boston and Gertrude Buchanan in charge. The thimble club, having no connection with the order, is now operating as a separate organization. August 16 Past President Charlotte Bennett, First Vice-president Gertrude Riepe, Second Vice-president Hazel Raines, Marshal Alma Werner and Mrs. Rudecinda Dodson paid a visit to Santa Ana Parlor No. 235.

Rudecinda personals. Mrs. Florence Schoneman and her daughter, Mrs. Georgia Sinclair, and Mrs. Rudecinda Dodson left for San Francisco August 19. Amy and Abigail Hagenow spent two weeks in Yosemite Valley. Treasurer Carrie Kuhlmann paid an extended visit to relatives in Santa Barbara and while there visited Santa Ynez Mission and Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126. Mrs. Charlotte Bennett and her husband took a trip to Lake Tahoe last month; returning they visited Placerville, San Jose, Santa Cruz and the Big Basin. Mms. Mary Halverson, Agnes Hruza and Josephine Cassidy vacationed at Catalina.

In appreciation for her services to the Parlor, many of the friends of Recording Secretary Carrie Lenhouse met at the home of President Ross July 29 and surprised her with a miscellaneous shower. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

BUSY TIME AHEAD.

So many of the officers and active members of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. were away on vacations last month there was little activity. President E. E. Baldwin and his "gang," however, have a busy program mapped out for the future and plans are being made to entertain the Grand Parlor next May.

Several of the members will participate in the statewide Admission Day celebration at Sacramento, September 9. Grand Trustee John T. Newell was a visitor at the August 24 meeting.

MILLIONS NEEDED FOR HIGHWAYS.

Three state highway bond issues aggregating $73,000,000 along with funds from other sources have brought the total cost of highway construction in California to over $100,000,000—and not one-half of the state highway system has been completed. To complete the system, it is reliably estimated, $123,000,000 additional funds will be required.

DE NEVE SQUARE.

The Los Angeles City Park Commission has decided to name the park in the Holmby Hills area, recently donated to the city, De Neve Square, in recognition of Filipe de Neve, who established the Pueblo of Los Angeles September 4, 1781.

Native Sons of the Golden West

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY NATIVE SONS GATHER AT OAKDALE.

OAKDALE (STANISLAUS COUNTY)—Supplementing the meeting of the representatives of the San Joaquin Valley Parlors at Modesto July 18, Grand Trustee I. H. Reuter called another meeting for this place August 4 and fifty-six responded. The Parlors represented were Stockton 7, Modesto 11, Lodi 18, Yosemite 24, Fresno 25, Oakdale 142, Tracy 186.

August 4 was selected as the date because it was the birthday anniversary of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, who was among those present. Oakdale Parlor arranged for the visitors' entertainment, a chicken dinner was ready and an orchestra dispensed sweet music. In front of the Grand President's plate was a cake lighted with fifty-one candles. After the distribution of the birthday cake adjournment was had to Oakdale's meeting-place, where First Vice-president David Bush of that Parlor delivered a welcome address.

Grand President Welch gave a common-sense talk and injected into it a little sentiment that was appreciated by all. He said that, long ago, he had been inspired by the words of his father who, returning from a trip to San Francisco as a delegate to the I.O.O.F. Grand Lodge, exhibited the card of a brother Odd Fellow which had engraved in one corner a grizzly bear, emblematic of the State of California. His father predicted that, under the banner of the bear, there would arise an organization which would be one of the greatest in the state for advancement and progress. He had always had that prediction in mind, and is working earnestly for its fulfillment.

Other speakers were Past Grand President William F. Toomey of Fresno, Grand Trustee I. H. Reuter of Merced, Arthur Levinsky (Stockton 7), George G. Voight (Modesto 11) and D. W. Tullock (Yosemite 24).

These meetings are being held to create more interest in the Order on the part of Native Sons, and they are evidently accomplishing their purpose when members travel as much as 200 miles to attend them. Parlors in the San Joaquin Valley with a disposition to go backward or stand still will be given an injection of enthusiasm. It is hoped the intermingling of the members will result beneficially to all the Parlors. Any way, it is the first time anything of the like has been attempted, so here's hoping for its success.—W.C.G.

"Baby" Adds to Strength.

Monrovia—The "baby" Parlor, Monrovia 266, added more names to its roster August 10, when officers of Los Angeles 45, headed by President Andrew G. Beazell, exemplified the ritual. Among the initiates was Tom Bynum, born in Yolo County in 1863. Previous to the meeting the visitors were guests of the Parlor at a delightful supper.

Under good of the Order there were several addresses, among the speakers being Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, Andrew Stodel, D.D.G.P. Albert Cron and Andrew Beazell from among the visitors, and President Wallace J. Thomson, Tom Bynum, Richard Cole, George Morse, Robert Dawson and James Murphy of No. 266. The Parlor has several applications on file and the officers of Ramona 109, with President Leon J. Leonard presiding, will initiate the applicants at the September 14 meeting.

Notable Gathering.

Nicasio—This town, the geographical center of Marin County and once a serious rival of San Rafael for county-seat honors, was the gathering-place for a large number of Native Sons, the occasion being the installation of officers of Nicasio 183 by D.D.G.P. Lester D. Knutte and the official visit of Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew. Francis S. Rodgers is the new president.

At the chicken supper which concluded the ceremonies J. R. McIsaac and J. L. Redding, sole surviving charter members, told of the Parlor's trials and tribulations and also of its future hopes. Grand Trustee McKnew, in reviewing the Order's work, claimed that, generally, those Parlors which pay benefits and are conducted in a businesslike manner are more successful than those which do not. Jordan L. Martinelli, past president of Mount Tamalpais 64 and city attorney of San Rafael, paid an eloquent tribute to the moral worth of the Pioneer Mothers and Fathers. Other speakers were Harry Thomas of Seapoint 158 (Sausalito), D.D.G.P. Knutte, President Frank Happersberger of Mount Tamalpais 64 (San Rafael) and several members of Sonoma 111.

Working Together.

Oakland—Brooklyn 151 and Brooklyn 157 N.D.G.W. had joint installation of officers July 21, D.D.G.P. A. Gunderson and D.D.G.P. Isabelle Martin officiating and Francis J. Harding and Esther Harvey becoming the respective presidents. In attendance were the following Native Daughters: Past Grand President Sue J. Irwin, Past Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Trustee Sallie Thaler, Supervising Deputy Maud Wagner. Presentations were made and there were many inspiring addresses. Entertainment and dancing brought the pleasant evening to a close.

The Parlors gave a whist party August 3, and the following night an indoor picnic was featured. They are planning to appear in the Admission Day parade at Sacramento, September 9.

Membership Drive Under Way.

San Bernardino—With Ed Poppett captain of the "Grizzlies" and William Jasper guiding the "Bears," the membership campaign of Arrowhead 110 is in full swing, and before its close the Parlor plans to be in the 1,000-membership class. Arrowhead generally gets what it goes after, too.

The first initiation of the drive will be held September 6 at the Parlor's Crestline clubhouse which, J. S. Mee, chairman of the building committee, reports, is now completed. The time limit of the drive will be announced later, says President Ben Harrison. The losing team will have to treat the winning team, as well as all those initiated during the drive, to a steak "feast."

Joint Installation.

Saint Helena—Officers of Saint Helena 53 and La Junta 203 N.D.G.W. were installed August 17 by D.D.G.P. Frank Pocai and D.D.G.P. Lulu Burge, Frank Harrison and Miss Theresa Kennelly becoming the respective presidents. Large delegations from Calistoga 86 and Calistoga 145 N.D.G.W. accompanied the district deputies, both of whom came from the neighboring city, Calistoga, for the occasion.

Refreshments were served at the ceremonies conclusion. Walter Metzner was the toastmaster and on behalf of No. 53 presented a past president's emblem to Arthur Rossi. For La Junta President Kennelly presented a pretty gift to D.D.G.P. Burge.

Membership Standing Largest Parlors.

Working in Good Cause.

Petaluma — Petaluma 27 has a committee composed of R. McMullin (chairman), C. L. Wetmore, R. Monbon, Jr., M. F. Gar and F. [illegible] at work endeavoring to raise $1,000 with which to make needed repairs to the historic Vallejo adobe, the Parlor property.

When this sum has been raised another $500, to be expended upon the [illegible]rk, will be appropriated from Grand Parlor funds set aside for such purposes. The $1,000 will put the adobe in good condition, it is said.

Anniversary To Be Celebrated.

Ferndale — Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew paid an official visit to Ferndale 93 March 16, and delivered a fine address on the Order. Supper was served at the meeting's conclusion.

September 20 Ferndale will observe its fortieth institution anniversary and E. P. Calanchini (chairman), Henry Cotoni, John Trigg, John Lund and F. C. Peterson have been appointed a committee to arrange a celebration. The Parlor was instituted September 18, 1886, and there are four charter members remaining: D. A. Francis, F. G. Williams, H. C. Blum, J. A. Shaw. Oneonta 71 N.D.G.W. will be invited to the anniversary party.

Joint Installation.

Oakland — A large crowd witnessed the joint installation of officers of Athens 195 and Aloha 106 N.D.G.W. by D.D.G.P. George Bacigalupi and D.D.G.P. Gertrude Morrison. William Penn Gordon and Irene Printzlow became the respective presidents.

District Deputy Morrison was extended a hearty welcome, after a year's absence as supervising deputy of Alameda County. Among the visiting Native Daughters were: Past Grand Presidents Ariana W. Stirling, Addie L. Mosher, Dr. Victory A. Derrick and Sue J. Irwin, Grand Trustees Mae Edwards and Sallie Thaler, Grand Organist Lillian Troy.

After installation gifts were presented the newly-installed officers. For Aloha, Past Grand President Derrick presented the past president's emblem to Lurine Goldsworthy, retiring junior past president, and J. W. Collier, retiring junior past president of Athens, was presented a jeweled emblem by Recording Secretary C. J. Hearn. Following several addresses dancing was in order.

Clubhouse in Prospect.

Santa Ana — Santa Ana 265 has under consideration the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of a clubhouse. It is hoped to interest Santa Ana 235 N.D.G.W. in the project. County Clerk J. M. Backs, acting as president at the August 11 meeting, named a committee composed of President Z. B. West Jr., Horace Fine and Basil Smith to represent No. 265 in the negotiations.

One site suggested is that of the late James McFadden's home, which has local historical interest. It has also been suggested that the clubhouse be constructed of adobe.

UPPER SACRAMENTO INDIANS CONTROLLED STOREHOUSE REGIONS.

The life of early California Indians in a particular habitat is being studied by F. B. Kniffen of the geography department of the University of California. Evidence gathered indicates that each of the Indian groups of the Upper Sacramento had well-limited subsistence areas and lived by gathering and hunting. Each group was characterized by the control of one or several storehouse regions. The Indians observed border lines very strictly, and the violation of boundaries was punishable with death.

Kniffen has uncovered evidence that indicates that there were three types of area: A dwelling area in which they lived because of convenient location to dependable sources of food, a secondary area through which they strayed according to the seasons, and a subordinate area claimed by the tribe and defended against others, but infrequently visited.

He is obtaining verbal reports from the oldest Indians of that area and is reconstructing in the field the appearance of the country as it was before White settlement. The study is part of a project in Indian geography of the Upper Sacramento which is attempting to tie up the Indian life of the region with subsistence areas, and the culture pattern developed there.

SPECIFY CORK-SEALED

When you order Rings for your car or truck, specify Cork sealed, otherwise you are liable to get just the ordinary kind. Cork sealed stops soap and delivers more power. De Luxe Oil Rings stop oil pumping. Order from your garage man. If he cannot supply you, we will. Insist on Cork sealed and De Luxe. There is no Ring just as good.

FALL PROGRAM

With Dr H Wildon Carr who came to U S C as professor of philosphy last fall from the University of London, Dr Flewelling will meet Dr Schiller, from whom President von KleinSmid of Southern California has just received a cabled acceptance of his appointment as lecturer, at Harvard, where the trio will attend the International Congress of Philosophers to be held at Harvard University September 13-17, all of them returning to Los Angeles immediately at the close of the sessions, in order to conduct classes and lecture on the Trojan campus during the 1926 fall semester. The International Congress of Philosophers is usually held every ten years, but the September gathering of world-representing philosophers will be the first in twenty years, due to the interruption of the war.

Dr. Schiller is author of the "Tantalus" series, "Riddles of the Sphinx," "Humanism" and "Formal Logic." He will conduct a seminar in "humanism" at the University of Southern California this fall, as well as a popular evening lecture course in "modern realism," scheduled to be given between 7:15 and 8:05 and open to the general public as well as to college students, according to Dr. Flewelling's announcement.

While in Europe Dr. Flewelling had interview-visits with Burtrand Russell in London; Professor Giovanni Gentile in Italy; Professor W. R. Sorley at Cambridge; Professor J. A. Smith of Oxford and Professor Levy-Bruhl, editor of the "Revue Philosophique," who it is also announced will visit the Trojan campus this fall. Dr. and Mrs. Flewelling were also entertained by the Protestant faculty of the University of Strasbourg, including Dr. Eugene Ehrhardt and Professor A. Causse.

Dr. H. Wilbur Long, another faculty member of the department of philosophy at U. S. C., will conduct evening college courses in "logic," "theory and application of ethics," and "problems of philosophy" at Metropolitan College, University of Southern California, this fall, making it convenient for teachers, adults and those occupied during the day to attend lectures of university grade during evening hours.

BANKING EXPLAINED.

Among the recent publications of the Security Trust & Savings Bank is a booklet which is expected to do much to dispel the atmosphere of mystery surrounding banking transactions. Written by Allard A. Calkins, assistant vice-president, under the title "Banking Explained," the booklet will answer many of the questions which the layman will naturally ask when confronted with some banking tangle. The banking fraternity has long felt the need of such a booklet.

The short chapter on departmental banks and branch banks is supplemented by another booklet recently written by Calkins on "The Progress of Departmental Banking in California." These booklets are obtainable at the head office or at any branch of the Security

ADMISSION DAY IN LOS ANGELES

ADMISSION DAY, SEPTEMBER 9, IN Los Angeles will be observed by the dedication of a monument to mark the site of the battle of La Mesa on the grounds of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards Company. A description of the monument appears on page 28 of this issue of The Grizzly Bear. The general public, and particularly the Native Sons and Native Daughters, are invited to be the guests of the stock yards company, which will serve a barbecue.

The ceremonies will commence at 12 o'clock (noon) with the arrival of a stagecoach accompanied by vaqueros. R. R. Mason will introduce A. G. Rivera as chairman of the day. Burrel D. Neighbours, on behalf of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., will present the Flag of the United States and the California State (Bear) Flag. During the rendition of the "Spanish Serenade" the flags will be raised by Master Carleton B. Swift Jr. and the Misses Gene Culbert Harwood and Josephine Swift. J. A. McNaughton, manager of the stock yards company, will accept the flags.

The monument-site will be presented by Arthur G. Leonard, president Los Angeles Union Stock Yards Company, and Carl R. Gray, president Union Pacific Railroad, will present the monument. The gifts will be accepted by Dr. Rockwell D. Hunt, president Historical Society Southern California, on behalf of the State of California, and Grand Trustee John T. Newell, on behalf of the Native Sons and Native Daughters. With William L. Coffey as master of ceremonies, the monument will be unveiled by Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes and J. A. McNaughton. Preceding the unveiling Mrs. Lucy Ruiz de Hernandez will render Spanish songs.

The monument will be dedicated by the Grand Parlor N.S.G.W., with the following members of Ramona Parlor as acting grand officers: Joseph A. Adair, Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, Ernest R. Orfila, Irving Baxter, Adolfo G. Rivera, Glen J. Packer. A band will be on hand to furnish music.

Ten thousand pounds of meat will be barbecued. Invitations, which have been issued, must be presented to gain entrance to the barbecue section. This restriction, however, does not apply to members of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West; all they need do is to make themselves known to the committee in charge. Following the barbecue dancing will be in order.

HOMELESS CHILDREN BENEFIT.

Shrine Auditorium has been engaged by the Native Sons and Native Daughters for their annual homeless children's benefit ball, October 23. Tickets are now on sale and a generous response is anticipated.

The benefit is being arranged for by a joint committee of which Irving Baxter (Ramona 109 N.S.G.W.) is chairman and Annie L. Adair (Los Angeles 124 N.D.G.W.) secretary. Ronald M. Ross (Los Angeles 45 N.S.G.W.) is chairman of the ball sub-committee, C. L. Lewis (Vaquero 262 N.S.G.W.) of the publicity sub-committee and W. H. Trollinger (Vaquero 262 N.S.G.W.) of the hall and prizes sub-committee. All of the Los Angeles County Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters are sponsoring the benefit, being represented on the joint committee.

FEATURE PROGRAM.

"A California Night of Music" program is to be featured at the Hollywood bowl. It will be presented by an ensemble of twenty-four pianos, each carrying the part of an instrument in a regular orchestra. Adolf Tandler is the director. September 3 is the date.

MANY SEE "VOLGA BOATMAN."

D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt of Long Beach officially visited Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. August 4 and spoke of the work being accomplished in this district for the Order. Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer urged cooperation in all undertakings for the development of the state and the community. On the Parlor's behalf Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas presented Mrs. Hitt with a dainty comport. Many members, in costumes of the pioneer days, will participate in the local Admission Day celebration.

August 11 Jennie Musso and her seven-piece orchestra gave a complimentary concert to the Parlor, and it was greatly enjoyed. August 18

Hollywood is arranging a smoker and boxing exhibition for September 19. Allan Bruce and Frank Kramer have the arrangements in charge. There will be an initiation September 26. There will be no meeting September 6, Labor Day.

EAST SIDE GETS N.S. PARLOR.

Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. had a family reunion at the Rowland rancho July 25. Everything was as in the days before the "gringo" came. Music was furnished by a Spanish orchestra, and there were dancing and singing. A barbecue was served. Among the old families represented were those of Rowland, Ricco, Hudson, Alvarez, Dorsey, Lewis, Ruiz, Trollinger, Jones and Botillier. Entertainment galore was provided. All departed expressing the hope that there might be another reunion next year.

Commencing September 7, Vaquero will meet on the East Side, having arranged for accommodations in the I.O.O.F. Temple, 2705 North Broadway, every Tuesday evening. An active campaign for members in that district will be put under way.

The first grandchild of Carl Bronson (Ramona N.S.)—Miss Sylvalyn Brown—arrived August 17 at the Long Beach home of his daughter, Mrs. W. Carl Brown.

Florence Broker and Joseph Adair Jr. (Ramona N.S.) were wedded at Bakersfield July 29. Joe is the son of Joseph Adair Sr. (Ramona N.S.) and Annie E. Adair (Los Angeles N.D.).

J. Paul Kiefer (Ramona N.S.) was in Placerville, El Dorado County, last month looking over the scenes of the early-day activities of his grandfather, James Barr, who arrived there across the plains in 1849, when Placerville was known as "Hangtown."

AUTO-PAS SAFETY LIGHT

AUTO-PAS light on your machine will make the "other fellow" think of you and see you at night.

It is a safety light for automobiles, attached to the left running board opposite the driver's seat to eliminate front, rear and side collisions and side-swiping. Just as important protection as headlights and tail lights. Meets a want never cared for heretofore in successful manner 3 lights in one.

It reflects a white light upward, a green light forward and a red light toward the rear. The white light shows the hand signal plainly for a great distance; heretofore it has been difficult to see the hand at night—it is generally conceded the hand signal is the most practical and safe signal to use. The passing driver realizes that by clearing the green or red lights he takes little chance of running off the highway and passes in safety.

At intersections, the driver approaching from the left sees both green and red lights, indicating your right of way.

Because of its location the AUTO-PAS is the only light on your car that you can always be sure is burning, and if your tail light goes out the AUTO-PAS red light furnishes a satisfactory substitute and may save you a fine.

THE AUTO-PAS ASSOCIATION

927 So. Main St., LOS ANGELES, Calif.

¶ The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is founded upon the same broad patriotic principles that have been the inspiration of similar organizations in older States of the Union. Each State has its history. Into that history is interwoven a narrative of deeds performed by a mighty race of men who frontiered and pioneered the pathway for the countless thousands to follow. They transplanted the spirit, the life, the institutions of the Colonists, and wherever a State was erected there were established the ideals of the Fathers of the Republic.

¶ Therefore, the membership of our Order is limited to those born within the State, because we believe that pride of nativity is inherent in the breast of every person and moves that person to a consecrated loyalty to his native land. We do not maintain that birthplace alone confers any special privilege; rather do we teach that this casts upon the citizen an increased obligation to become interested in all material matters affecting its development and progress. National strength and national greatness have been commensurate with State strength and State greatness.

¶ California was the thirty-first State to be admitted into the Union. She contributed a citizenship and a golden treasure at an opportune time in the affairs of the nation. The many events connected with its settlement and organization as a State played a prominent part in shaping the destiny of the American people, and geographically she occupies a strategic position in the world-wide problems of the present and the future.

¶ We have taken an active interest in the conservation of our natural resources; the preservation of our scenic wonders and making them accessible to all; the retention of the State and its soil for the White race; all legislation, Federal and State, affecting the State and its interests.

¶ In our Fellowship endowment at the University of California we have expended over fifty thousand dollars in the preparation and preservation of the history of California and the Pacific Coast, and it has become the incentive for the Student Body of that institution and of the high-schools throughout the State to learn and teach that history. In this work we have laid the foundation for a text-book to be used in the public schools.

¶ We visit places where important events transpired and we have identified and marked the same with tablet and monument. Responding to the patriotic objects of our Order, we observe each recurring anniversary day of the Admission of California into the Union by public ceremonies in the various cities of the State. We actively participate in public dedicatory ceremonies of grammar-school and high-school buildings, on which occasions the students and citizens are addressed by officials of our Order on patriotic subjects.

¶ We maintain a "Homeless Children" Bureau and have placed in the childless homes over twenty-six hundred homeless boys and girls, insuring their development into a splendid citizenship amid elevating environments. In this activity we have expended over two hundred thousand dollars, contributed generously and voluntarily by the membership of the Order.

¶ It thus appears that the work of our organization appeals to every citizen of the State, irrespective of place of birth. It matters not where we were born in this land of ours; we are all citizens of a common country, we pledge our allegiance to one flag, and we are best evidencing our love of country and our loyalty to that flag by deservedly wearing the badge of public service wherever we exist and have our home.

¶ We welcome to our Membership the sons of California, and we promise nothing in return, save that compensation which comes to the citizen who conscientiously endeavors to perform his part in the cause of a greater and better civilization.

HILLIARD E. WELCH,

Grand President, Native Sons of the Golden West.

JEDEDIAH STRONG SMITH
THE PATHFINDER OF THE SIERRAS

Velda Barnes, A. B., and Lewis B. Lesley, M. A.

THIS YEAR CELEBRATES THE CENtennial of the arrival of Captain Jedediah Strong Smith in California. It was November 27, 1826, that he, with his company of trappers, arrived at the San Gabriel Mission, the first American to reach California by the overland route. Of all the explorers of the vast West, there was not a braver, more noble soul than Smith. Ostensibly he was a fur trader, but in reality he was more than this; he was a blazer of trails into a country previously unexplored by Americans. Christianity and heroism were combined in proper proportions in this man, making of him a truly great character. The soothing teachings of his Bible were adhered to always, until necessity demanded the vigorous use of his other constant companion—the rifle.

Jedediah Smith came from a family of pioneer Scotch stock. He was born in Bainbridge, Chenango County, New York, June 24, 1798, the eldest of a family of fourteen children. His early boyhood was spent in Ohio, under genuine pioneer conditions. His instructor, a certain Dr. Simons, gave him the rudiments of an education which included some Latin. Dr. Simons has been given the credit of suggesting to Smith the desirability of exploring the West and of making careful geographical studies. It was this physician who also gave him his early religious training and who taught him to love the Scriptures. At the age of thirteen Jedediah accepted a position as clerk on a freight boat on the Great Lakes. He was then at the impressionable age when the tales of the traders and trappers of the British fur companies were shaping his life, bringing him to the decision that he also should brave the dangers of the wilderness.

Smith had a natural roving disposition plus a determination to better himself. In his desire for improvement he went, in 1822, to Saint Louis, which was then the center of Far Western fur trade activities. Arriving too late to join the Henry-Ashley party which had just left for the source of the Missouri, he remained at Saint Louis, gathering all of the geographical information possible about the great Northwest and Southwest. All this information he noted down on a map, which showed a triangular space with an apex on the Upper Platte, one leg extending to the mouth of the Columbia, and the other reaching out toward the Gulf of California. This vast region remained blank on his map and inspired him to exploration in order to ascertain the nature of the land.

The actual travels of Smith began in 1823, when he joined the "Rocky Mountain Fur Company," which was under the direction of General Ashley. The first we hear definitely of Smith is of the brave part he took in an Indian war with the Arikaras in 1823. The next year he was trapping on the Yellowstone and Snake Rivers. The spring of 1826 marks the date when Smith, with Ashley, again left Saint Louis. This proved to be the time when Smith was entering on a journey which was to carry him, the first American, from the Mississippi to the Pacific by a central route. On arriving at the Great Salt Lake, the journey terminated for General Ashley. As had been agreed before leaving Saint Louis, Ashley transferred his rights in the company to Smith who, with David E. Jackson and William L. Sublette, was to carry on the work of the company in virgin soil, as well as in the old field. Although there was plenty of trapping in the old region, Smith was not content. He was ambitious to push on farther. The lure of the unknown was ever present with him. The company desired to know what possibilities there were for fur trade in the region to the southwest of the Great Salt Lake, and perhaps their leader had a vision of setting up a trading post on the Pacific Coast.

It would have been a poor business move to send the entire company into a virgin field; hence it was decided to leave the major portion to work over the old ground, and to send on a small group to explore and to report whether conditions were favorable for trapping. Jedediah Smith was chosen to lead the pioneer group, since he had already a slight knowledge of the country. Smith was also the best educated of the three partners, a man of wide experience, with courage enough to carry through his plans, hence better able to deal with the Mexicans who were in control of California. The impelling motive of the move into California was primarly economic, but the leader was urged on not only for economic reasons, but because the lure of adventure had possession of him.

Thus it was that on August 22, 1826, fifteen men under the command of Smith left the Great Salt Lake to explore the unknown country of the Southwest. The route taken was south to Utah Lake, down the Sevier Valley, to a river which Smith called the Adams, in honor of the president. This river was renamed the Virgin, on Smith's second trip, in honor of Thomas Virgin, one of Smith's men. In this region of the Virgin, there were no buffalo; only a few antelope and mountain sheep, but an abundance of blacktailed hares. On the hike down the bank of the muddy Virgin River, great salt caves were discovered. Smith describes the large cave as having an entrance "which is about 10 or 14 feet high, and 5 or 6 feet in width; after descending about 15 feet a room opens out from 25 to 30 feet in length and 15 to 20 feet in width; the roof, sides and floor are solid rock salt."

From the Virgin River the party followed the Colorado River, crossing the east bank to the Mojave Indians. Smith himself describes these Indians graphically in the following words: "I found here a nation of Indians who call themselves the Ammuchabas; they cultivate the soil, and raise corn, beans, pumpkins, watermelons and muskmelons in abundance and also a little wheat and cotton. I was nearly destitute of horses, and had learned what it was to do without food. I therefore remained there fifteen days and recruited my men, and was enabled also to exchange my horses and purchase a few more of a few runaway Indians who stole some horses of the Spaniards."

Leaving the Mojaves, Smith recrossed the Colorado at the Needles. This was the moment when he first stepped on California soil. Estimations from data given in a letter written by Smith to General William Clark, superintendent of Indian affairs, would fix this date of entrance as November 12, 1826. From Needles the route taken was westward across the Mojave on approximately the present route of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad. The desert was crossed with much suffering and hardship. A great salt plain twenty miles long and eight miles wide was the last barrier to be overcome.

November 27, 1826, Smith and his men arrived at the San Gabriel Mission, by way of Cajon Pass. The priests were very courteous and kind to Smith and his party in spite of the fact that the Americans were Protestants. Father Jose Bernardo Sanchez, who was in charge of the mission, became a real friend to the group. A cow was killed to celebrate the arrival of the party, and a great deal of food was cooked in their honor. Their clothing was torn and ragged as a result of the hardships of the trail, but the days spent at the mission were pleasant and restful. An early morning wedding was attended by Smith and Harrison G. Rogers, both of whom enjoyed the affair although they felt out of place in their old clothes which gave them, to quote from Roger's journal, "a very grotesque appearance when seated at the tables among the dandys with their ruffles, silks and broadcloths." Rogers was next to Smith in command of the travelers. He faithfully kept a diary of the two California trips, entering all events of note as well as interesting details. It is due to his work that we are able to learn the facts of Jedediah's travels.

The mission at San Gabriel, the fourth of the Upper California missions, was established in 1771. The mission, at the height of its prosperity when Smith arrived, made a lasting impression on the Americans. Rogers describes it as follows: "The Mansion, or Mission, consists of four rows of houses forming a complete square, where there is all kinds of macanicks at work; the church faces the east and the guard house the west; the N. and S. line comprises the work shops. They have large vineyards, apple and peach orchards, and some orange and fig trees. They manufacture blankets, and sundry other articles; they distill whiskey and grind their own grain, having a water mill, of a tolerable quality; they have upwards of 1,000 persons employed, men, women and children, Inds. of different nations. The situation is very handsome, pretty streams of water running through from all quarters, some thousands of acres of rich and fertile land as level as a die in view, and a part under cultivation, surrounded on the N. with a high and lofty mou. (tain) handsomely timbered with pine, and cedar, and on the S. with low mou. (tains) covered with grass. Cattle—this Mission has upwards of 30,000 head of cattle, and horses, sheep, hogs, etc., in proportion. They slaughter at this place from 2 to 3,000 head of cattle at a time; the mission lives on the profits."

Life at the mission was enjoyable to the Americans. The only difficulty encountered was the attempt to understand the language. Rogers says: "I could see a great deal of satisfaction here, if I could talk there language, but as it is, I feel great diffidence in being among them, knot knowing the topic of there conversation, still every attention is paid to me by all that is present, especially the old priest. I must say he is a very fine man and very much of a gentleman." The friendliness of Father Sanchez was again shown by the fact that he gave Smith sixty-four yards of shirting to furnish each of the men with goods enough for a new garment.

The Indians also led a pleasant life, although they were kept apparently in fear of punishment. Of their recreation, Rogers tells of one Sunday: "The Inds. play bandy (hockey) with sticks it being the only game I have seen as yet among them. They play before the priests door. I am told they dance, both Spanyards and Inds. in the course of the evening." The following week a band of two violins, trumpet and triagle, played by the Indians, is described as playing "tolerable good music" before the priest's door.

While the men were working and enjoying their life at San Gabriel, Jedediah Smith was tending to his manifold duties. He was aware of the fact that he was trespassing on Mexican soil; hence he wrote to Governor Echeandia at San Diego, giving reasons for his entrance into California. Echeandia answered, ordering Smith to appear before him. Accordingly Smith left the mission for San Diego, December 8, 1826. Appearing before the governor, Smith explained that he had been compelled to enter the region because of the loss of his horses and the scarcity of his provisions. Since it was five hundred miles back to the Great Salt Lake from the Mojave Desert, Smith said to the governor, and less than three hundred miles on to San Gabriel, he had proceeded by the shorter course. The governor was reluctant to release Smith, but was finally convinced of his honesty when the captains of several American ships—notably Captain W. H. Cunningham of the "Courier" from Boston—signed a certificate of character for Smith testifying that they believed him innocent, and that he had been compelled to enter California for want of provisions. The captains also stated that they believed him truthful in saying that "his sole object was the hunting and trapping of beaver and other furs." This document was presented by Smith to the governor, December 20, 1826.

Echeandia gave Smith permission to leave the country by the same route by which he had entered, but refused to let him go north along the settled coast to the Russian post of Bodega. Jedediah returned by boat to San Pedro as the guest of Captain Cunningham, on the "Courier." They arrived in San Gabriel, Wednesday, January 10, 1827. A week later things were in readiness to move on, horses had been purchased in Los Angeles, saddles repaired, and equipment packed. From the mission Smith's party followed a northeasterly direction for four miles, camping the first night at the same Indian farm house at which they had arrived in November of the preceding year on their way to San Gabriel. The next day, January 19, 1827, they started on again, traveling until they reached another farm house, probably in Live Oak Canyon, north of the present City of Pomona. The wild horses which had recently been added to their string were continually breaking loose and wandering away, causing considerable trouble. It was necessary to remain on the creek a day to recover five of these horses which were missing and to break others. From the canyon the party journeyed not far above our much-traveled foothill boulevard of today. From a camp near the old San Bernardino, which was west of the present City of Redlands, Smith went to the town to get supplies for which the San Gabriel father had given him an order. The party then went north through the Cajon Pass, thence following the Sierra Madres, entering the San Joaquin Valley, either by Tejon Pass or the Tehachapi, late in January, or early in February, of 1827.

Smith's orders were to leave by the same route he had taken when he first came into California, but, as we have seen, he was not eager to recross the desert; neither was he prepared to quit the California region. Traveling up the valley the party kept a northerly course, which has been estimated as about one hundred miles inland. During the winter months a great deal of trapping was done. Indians met were not hostile. Continuing north, Smith and his men came finally to a river, probably the Stanislaus, although authorities differ on this point. Since Smith named the river the Wim-mul-che it could not well have been any farther north than the Stanislaus, for the tribe of that name did not extend beyond. Smith attempted to take his

SANTA BARBARA—IF REINA DEL MAR Parlor No. 126 N.D.G.W. should suddenly lapse into perpetual inactivity — never again to come forward with its clear thinking and effective doing—its accomplishments of the past two months must crown it with a chaplet of laurel.

At the outset, it must be stated that the Parlor—after proper consideration of a project—thinks and acts as an individual. There's no lost motion. After the die is cast, there's no "crabbing"—no doubling on their tracks by a grumbling minority. Therein lies the power that enables the Parlor to "put over" original projects, the result of which—social and spiritual—must leave its impress permanently upon the entire community, and beyond, for its humanness and beauty.

Santa Barbara, more than any other city in California, holds among its people descendants of the Spanish Pioneers of California—the first Pioneers who blazed the Western trail. And dwelling beside them are the descendants of the Pioneers of the American period—even the Pioneers themselves, who builded well on the older civilization. But the two groups, each with characteristic traditions and racial points of view, remained spiritually apart, if not socially or politically.

Came then the Fiesta, those three unforgettable August days when Santa Barbara invited the world to come and play—to take on the spirit of old California, when it was in truth a "land of milk and honey," and all the world—their world—was glad.

"Why not assemble the descendants of the Spanish Pioneers for participation in 'Old Spanish Days'—descendants of the soldiers who came with Fray Junipero Serra to found the Presidio of Santa Barbara"—suggested someone to Miss Anna E. McCaughey. With a swift vision of the suitableness of the idea, the leader of Reina del Mar activities brought the matter to a head by inviting to a luncheon at El Paseo a committee of Daughters of the American Revolution—Mrs. Winfield B. Metcalf, Mrs. William G. Griffith and Mrs. Jackson—and the history and landmarks committee of the Parlor, including Miss Mary Wood, chairman, and Miss Tuleta de la Cuesta, and the writer, who belonged to neither group, but sat in as a student of California history.

COMMITTEE FORMED.

Thus the Santa Barbara history and landmarks committee, a loose organization, came into existence, to carry out the interesting idea, and to set about awakening public sentiment through a campaign of history education through the newspapers—Santa Barbara's own story from its birth. It was the privilege of the writer to turn out most of the "copy," the editorial staffs of the "News" and the "Morning Press" turning over their columns to the committee, and standing by through the entire period.

The result of the publicity brought together, for the first time in many years, if ever before, a representative gathering of the old Spanish families who have adhered to the soil of the forebears for nigh to a century and a half, preserving with an art that is exclusively Latin the spirit and gayety of the days that were. Those preliminary nights and afternoons in Recreation Center, when the "descendants of the soldiers who came with Serra" (1782) gathered to rehearse their old songs, will live forever in the memories of those of us fortunate enough to have been present. The voice of Senora Maria Antonia Arata y Jimeno, 89 years young, leading in the "Alabado," sung by Fray Junipero and his soldiers in that far-away day, playing her own accompaniment on the piano—who can forget it? Or the leadership of Miss Maria de los Angeles Ruiz in "Adios, Adios, Amores," and other dulcet old melodies that fell on the ear as "myhrr and honey on the tongue"; the spontaneous dancing of the old, old steps — the "Lamb" and "La Jota"—when Dona Arata hit upon a familiar, though long-forgotten tune; Dona Pena, 79, and Senor Castro, 78 (a great beau in his day and still a cavalier in looks and manners), and a dozen more high-spirited youngsters of 70 and 80, singing, playing their guitars or flutes, and dancing gallantly. What their world must have been, when they were young in years as well as spirit!

And the reason back of their assembling—the idea that held it together—was the part they were to take in the "Sunset" celebration of Junipero Serra's day, August 29, incorporated in the Fiesta program.

"SUNSET" CEREMONY.

The "Sunset" ceremony came as a fitting climax on Saturday, the last day—a happy coincidence—of the Fiesta. A perfect August day, the shadows purpling the peaks of Le Cumbre, as Father Augustine, young guardian of the old mission, welcomed the throng from a platform built over the famous Indian bath in the plaza of the mission. The address, "Junipero Serra," was made by the Rev. Oliver Hart Bronson of the Presbyterian church, a brilliant man, with a heart of love for all people and all creeds. Miss McCaughey and Mrs. Metcalf represented their organizations on the program, and Miss Wood, acting for Reina del Mar history and landmarks committee, placed a wreath upon the Serra cross.

And the climax of the transporting hour came when, at the close of the reading of Bret Harte's poem, "The Angelus," by the Rev. Father Sherman (son of General William Tecumseh Sherman), the old mission bells in the temporary tower under the pepper tree rang out the angelus. In an instant every man and woman in the throng was on his or her feet, with lowered eyes and uplifted spirit. Such moments are rare. Then the Santa Barbara band of soloists struck up "The Star Spangled Banner," and the "Strolling Troubadours" took up the strumming of their guitars and their intriguing songs that had made the hour a true Spanish observance of a church feast day—gay and grave by turns.

SAINT BARBARA'S TOWER, FIESTA PARADE, OLD SPANISH DAYS. ENTERED BY REINA DEL MAR PARLOR N.D.G.W.

Obviously the church knows human nature.

"Now that the Serra Day is over, and the descendants of the Spanish Pioneers are happy," add Miss McCaughey and Miss Wood, "we'll make the Pioneers of the American period the honor guests of Reina del Mar on Admission Day, September 9, for Santa Barbara is what she is today from the amalgamation of both civilizations."

ADMISSION DAY.

And so Admission Day saw Recreation Center a bower of flowers, in which the Parlor bore testimony of its reverence for the later-day builders and doers—men and women—many of whom had come to Santa Barbara when State street was a cow-path. And not the least of the interesting numbers from the stage were recitals of experiences of those whose memories play them tricks. Among those who spoke were Mrs. Alice Brickerhoff Lawton, Mrs. J. A. Kimberly, Judge R. B. Canfield, C. A. Storke, Judge R. D. Smith, Mrs. E. S. Sheffield and Mrs. James R. Heath—all of them making valuable contributions to the unrecorded history of Santa Barbara.

Thus Reina del Mar projected on the screen of the social life of the city the part both Spanish and American Pioneers played in the creation of the new and ever-more-beautiful Santa Barbara.

And the narrative would be incomplete were we not to relate that the Santa Barbara history and landmarks committee, brought into being by Miss McCaughey's initiative, sponsored the movement to furnish the Fiesta committee with historical data—source material—for its projects, whereby the pageant of Thursday, of which Harry Sweetser (an active member of Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 N.S.G.W.) was director and marshal, was founded in truth, likewise in beauty. By common agreement, nothing so nearly perfect, artistically and historically, has been seen outside of the Bohemian Grove plays, or in some of the Parthenaia productions at the University of California.

And for the opportunity thus to serve, Dwight Murphy, an adopted son of California, was largely responsible. He it was who led the movement for the Fiesta, that the town, a bit weary from a troublous year, might play—play hard—and then buckle down to work again. Murphy was "El Gobernador" of the Fiesta, a gallant host and, incidentally, a gallant caballero. All the beautiful horses of the Murphy stables were brought down from the San Marcos ranch to take

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

SACRAMENTO'S CELEBRATION OF Admission Day, September 9, was a grand success and drew an immense crowd to the Capital City. Ample accommodations were provided for the throng, and everybody had a delightful time. To add to the city's natural attractiveness, the main business streets were gayly decorated.

The big feature of the celebration was the Admission Day parade, participated in by approximately 8,000 members of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, attractively costumed, and accompanied by their drill teams, bands and drum corps. It required two hours' time for the parade to pass a given point. Many attractive historical and floral floats drew plaudits from the thousands of onlookers who viewed the parade along the line of march.

San Francisco's Natives made a wonderful showing, and all the bay counties were well represented. Something new was the Native Sons' patrol, made up of representatives from several San Francisco Parlors. Every city in the state should organize similar patrols. As a matter of fact, the San Francisco Bay district Natives were largely responsible for the success of the Admission Day parade, constituting at least seventy-five percent of the spectacle.

It was cheering to see the old mining counties of Amador, El Dorado and Nevada represented in the long line. Amador featured the recently-organized band of Ursula Parlor No. 1 N.D.G.W., Nevada had a float representative of the Donner monument, pictured in The Grizzly Bear for September, and El Dorado was represented by a good-sized delegation from old Placerville Parlor No. 9 N.S.G.W. Every section of the state had a part in the parade, the Natives of the southernmost city, San Diego, having a prettily-decorated auto in line.

An Admission Day parade must be seen to be fully appreciated. It cannot be adequately described in words, nor is it done full justice in pictures. Every Parlor of Native Sons and Daughters in the whole state makes the best showing possible under existing conditions, and the [illegible] always pleasing. The Sacramento showing was no exception.

Following the parade, a literary program was presented in Capitol park. Superior Judge J. F. Dalton presided and introduced Hubbard E. Welch, Grand President N.S.G.W., who, in the course of his remarks, said: "We have a wonderful [illegible]

STOCKTON, SAN JOAQUIN COUNTY

Industrial and Agricultural Capital of Interior California

CITY OF ROMANCE AND PORTAL TO THE HISTORIC MOTHER LODE

S. J. Richards

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, STOCKTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

CAPTAIN WEBER! GENERAL SUTTER! Commodore Stockton! James Marshall! These are names to conjure with. They ventured where none had dared to venture before. With prophetic vision they founded cities, created industries, brought law and order and played their part in the greatest drama the world has ever known—"California's Gold Discovery."

The pioneer period—the great march of adventurers and miners to California goldfields, and subsequent development is wrapped up in the history of Stockton, Sacramento and San Francisco. But our story has to do with the founding of the City of Stockton—its rise and its fall in the early forties, but to rise again and to steadily progress until, today, it is the dominant industrial and agricultural center of Interior California.

For sixty-five years ships had been trading at the port of what is now San Francisco, when in 1841 Captain C. M. Weber first looked the territory over, which is now the Stockton section. On the San Joaquin River and at the head of the fertile San Joaquin Valley, Captain Weber recognized the possibility of building a community to serve as a shipping point for a great inland empire. As a cattle raiser in the region around San Jose, he was owner of vast herds, and the lush grasses of the river lands of the Stockton section would provide good grazing for his cattle.

Weber was both a dreamer and a doer, and was possessed of both vision and determination. He continued on to Sutter's Fort, and General Sutter confirmed his judgement that a settlement should be built on the San Joaquin River, that products of the valley and livestock might find their way into commerce. In 1844 Weber received a grant of 48,747 acres and commenced to build his settlement. Native oak trees were felled and cabins built. Weber's Settlement attracted other courageous spirits from San Jose and San Francisco who would share his success or failure. But the settlement was hardly started when an epidemic of smallpox broke out and the settlers left, leaving a cartaker to look after the stock. A band of Indians raided the settlement, driving off the stock and killing the caretaker.

Weber was not discouraged. He dreamed a great city, and in 1847 we find him establishing a new settlement which he called "Tuleberg," because of the tules that grew along the bank of the river.

Weber took part in the war that was raging in the southern part of the state with the Mexicans and there became acquainted with that valiant character, Commodore Stockton. Weber re-named his settlement of "Tuleberg," "Stockton," and dedicated his life to the work of developing agriculture, industry and commerce, that his vision of a great city might prove a reality.

And then on January 24, 1848, occured an event that startled the civilized world. A nugget of gold was picked up in the millrace of Sutter's sawmill at Coloma, El Dorado County. The gold rush was on, and Stockton became a great tent city over night. New supplies were shipped in, buildings sprung up like mushrooms and Stockton became an outfitting and distribution point.

On June 25, 1850, the city of Stockton paused for breath. Plans for incorporation were adopted. On August 1st a mayor was elected, and a form of city government set up.

Weber organized the Stockton Gold Mining Company and his prospectors located gold in the sands of the streams in the nearby Mother Lode. Stockton was the gateway to the southern mines of the Mother Lode. Thousands poured into this frontier town, bringing prosperity and rapid growth.

Coincident with the growth of Stockton in the fifties, as a supply and distribution point, new "diggings" were being developed in the Mother Lode section with astonishing rapidity. Jamestown, Sonora, Columbia, Tuttletown, Angels Camp and San Andreas were all roaring mining camps. Prospectors were everywhere with their gold pans, rockers and sluice boxes. A gold nugget was found in 1851 at Sonora, Tuolumne County, weighing twenty-eight pounds, valued at $6,120. In 1855 another nugget was picked up at Sonora weighing thirty pounds and valued at $6,400. The bars and flats above Sonora gave up their treasure and eventually yielded some $55,000,000 in gold. The town of Columbia, in Tuolumne County, boasted a population of 15,000 and came within three votes of being the Capital of California. Columbia was rich in gold. Today it is rich in romance and sentiment, a "ghost city" with a population of 250.

Construction on the first overland railroad, the Central Pacific, was inaugurated in 1863. The granite of the Sierras was blasted through and a roadway laid. Hundreds of men were killed in the construction of this pioneer line and the difficulties seemed unsurmountable. But Stanford, Huntington, Crocker, Hopkins and Judah had faith in California and faith in themselves, and on May 10, 1869, the golden spike was driven at Promontory Point, Utah, and the West was linked with the East. In that same eventful year an extension was built from the overland route to Stockton, and the city reached a greater importance as a distribution point and marketing center.

Mining, cattle raising and agriculture became important industries. The section prospered during the mining and pastoral stages of development, and its position was further strengthened with the construction of the San Joaquin Valley railroad in 1896, which is now part of the Santa Fe system, and the construction of a railroad by the Western Pacific railway in 1909. Stockton's place as the only city at that time in the interior of the state served by three transcontinental railways was immediately capitalized upon, and the population of the city jumped from 23,253 in 1910 to 40,296 in 1920.

With waterway transportation, supplemented by additional facilities provided by three transcontinental railroads, Stockton entered upon an era of intensive agricultural and industrial development. The city is still young, industrially, but has more than 200 manufacturing plants, capitalized at twenty-two million dollars, with an output of manufactured products exceeding in value thirty-five million dollars. labor have been applied to natural resources, and raw materials from farms, mines, forests and water beds in the San Joaquin Valley and adjacent mountain counties are immediately available. The favorable factors of cheap [illegible] electric power, varied raw materials, abundance of labor and adequate transportation facilities have dictated the location of manufacturing plants in Stockton.

Stabilizing the wealth which comes to the city from industry and commerce, is the influence of agriculture. In the early periods of the state's history the significance of the agricultural industry in a land where some crop can be harvested every month of the year was not realized. The occurrence of the first tilling of the soils in the Stockton section was the precursor of untold wealth to come.

San Joaquin County, of which Stockton is the county seat, now enjoys an annual agricultural production of $50,000,000 more than half of the total agricultural output of the State of Florida. This highly productive and diversified agricultural area that comprises the "Top County" of California stands at the head of the list of the 3,065 counties of the United States of America in agricultural production per acre and per farm. The county has now taken fourth place among all of the counties of the nation in the value of crops produced. All of the commercial fruits produced in California are grown in this favored area, and the soils are adapted to the culture of grapes, berries, nuts, field crops and vegetables, in addition to the wide range of deciduous fruits produced.

The San Joaquin River, which carried the first skiffs from San Francisco to the original settlement of Stockton, now carries vessels which annually transport cargoes valued at $40,000,000. As the skiffs gave way to river steamers, so will the river steamers give way to the ocean-going liners that will dock at Port Stockton.

A twenty-six-foot channel will be provided in the San Joaquin River that will make possible ninety-five percent of the vessels which pass through the Golden Gate docking in Interior California. The sea is to be brought to the great interior valley of the state, and Stockton and the San Joaquin Valley will witness phenomenal growth agriculturally, industrially, commercially and numerically. The marketing center of Stockton will enjoy the same waterway rates to offshore points as the bay cities. Ships will come and go with raw materials, manufactured output, agricultural products and the merchandise of commerce, and Stockton will serve world commerce.

"The days of old, the days of gold"—the Pioneer period and the frontier trading posts—are no more. But sentiment still lingers in the Stockton section, and the trails that lead from the city to the "ghost" towns of the southern mines penetrate a land that is rich in romance. The tentacles of sentiment entwine every human heart. It is sentiment that gives life a roseate glow and gives us faith in the future—the incentive to accomplish great things.

It is in the heart of everyone to see those romantic places in the Mother Lode which have been made famous by Bret Harte, Mark Twain and Joaquin Miller. Come and travel the old gold trails that lead from Stockton to the quaint towns that were the mecca for the adventurers during the fifties. Know the romance of the Mother Lode. Go to Melones, Calaveras County, from which point you may contemplate this section tinged with the glamor of romance. Within a dozen miles of Melones are Sonora, Roaring Camp, Table Mountain, Jimtown, Columbia, Tuttletown and Angels Camp. And then continue on to the recreational regions of the Sierras, a land of mountain, forest and stream.

Stockton is the gateway to this land of romance and scenic loveliness. A visit to this section will inspire you and make more hearty your affection for California and for America.

TAKES LEAD IN AIRPORT CAMPAIGN.

A concrete result following the statewide campaign initiated by the California Development Association urging municipalities to establish landing fields and air ports, is shown by the City of Stockton in authorizing the purchase of a landing field within less than two miles of the local postoffice.

Otto Sandman, chairman of the Stockton air port committee, was actively engaged urging the establishment of a municipal field in accordance with the plans of the association. A letter from Arthur S. Dudley, secretary and manager of the Stockton Chamber of Commerce, to the California Development Association announced the Stockton action as follows:

"We had a special meeting of the Stockton

GEOLOGIST STUDIES MOUNTAIN SECTION CALIFORNIA NORTH.

California North, which has been neglected by geologists for a number of years because of the all-absorbing search for oil taking place in the southern part of the state, can count on the support of at least one man to give it a share of attention.

Providing that no accidents happen to his automobile, Professor N. E. A. Hinds of the University of California Department of Geology expects to spend his spare time making a geological study of the mountain section north and west of Redding, Shasta County, and perhaps making a few maps to add to the small number now available.

The section concerned is 260 miles from Berkeley and requires a minimum of eight hours' driving to reach. But Professor Hinds has mapped out a program of week-end trips between his last class on Friday and his first class on Monday by which he hopes to complete his work this year. At present very little geological work has been done outside of Redding quadrangle and the Lassen district. Professor Hinds hopes to extend this westward and eventually to the north also.

One formation in particular, extending from a point near Weaverville, Trinity County, toward the northern part of the state, has interested Professor Hinds greatly. This is an obtrusion of granitic rock into a formation of limestone or sedimentary rock, which has been accompanied or followed by the formation of deposits of magnetite (iron ore) and copper sulphide between the surfaces of the two different rocks. This phenomenon is especially noticeable near the town of Heroult, Shasta County.

Geological studies of the kind now being made by Professor Hinds are of value not only to science in tracing the history of the earth's crust but also to the practical miner interested in knowing the mineral possibilities of the state. The district under investigation is one of the state's oldest gold-mining centers and is also the scene of some iron mining.

MORE HUMBOLDT REDWOODS ADDED TO STATE'S HOLDINGS.

One hundred acres of magnificient redwood trees adjoining the State Redwood Park in Humboldt County have been deeded to the State of California by Mrs. Kate Felton-Neilson of San Francisco.

This grove of redwoods, described as one of the finest in the state, is to be known as the Charles N. Felton Memorial Grove. Felton, the father of Mrs. Neilson, was a United States Senator from California from March 19, 1891, to March 4, 1893, succeeding Senator George Hearst, who died February 28, 1891. Felton was a Pioneer of the state, arriving in September 1849.

STATE FAIR GREAT SUCCESS.

Sacramento—A record number of people, 250,000, visited California's seventy-second annual State Fair, which closed September 11. Admission Day, September 9, drew the biggest crowd, 52,000, of any day of the week.

This year's fair was generally conceded the best in the history of the state exposition. Many counties which heretofore had not been represented were among the exhibitors. People from all parts of the state flocked to the Capital City to view the attractive displays of California's numerous resources and to enjoy the amusement features.

JEDEDIAH SMITH

men across the Sierras early in May to the company rendezvous at Bear Lake, but finding the snow too deep and soft, he was forced to return to the valley and make camp. Smith at this time made up his mind that he would leave all of his men except two at the camp on the Stanislaus. With these two men, seven horses and two mules, he again undertook to cross Mount Joseph (identified by Dale as Mount Stanislaus), and succeeded in his purpose after eight days of hardship. This was the first known crossing of the Sierra Nevadas by an American.

While in the San Joaquin Valley, Father Duran of the San Jose Mission accused Smith and his party of enticing the neophytes from the mission. The charge was proved false, but the party was still regarded with suspicion. In his characteristic straight-forward manner, Smith wrote to the father, explaining the reason for his presence. This letter is dated May 19, 1827, and a portion of it reads as follows: "I am a long ways from home and am anxious to get there as soon as the nature of the case will admit. Our situation is quite unpleasant, being destitute of clothing and most of the necessaries of life, wild meat being our principal subsistence. I am, Reverend Father, your strange but real friend and Christian brother." This letter did not satisfy the authorities, only serving to rouse them to greater exertions. The governor heard of the complaints made against Smith, and wrote ordering the intrepid American either to leave the territory immediately, or avail himself of one of the following alternatives: to come to San Jose, there to be kept under guard, or to sail on the first vessel which would carry him north of 42 degrees latitude. This letter was not sent until May 23, and was too late, for Smith had left on the 20th.

From the east side of Mount Joseph a twenty-day journey was necessary in order to cross the barren plains before the Great Sale Lake was reached. Hardships from the lack of water, food and clothing were again undergone. The men were compelled to eat the horses as the animals succumbed; only one horse remained on their arrival. This horse and one mule were so worn and weak that they could hardly carry the small packs. It was about June 17, 1827, that Smith arrived at the Great Salt Lake. He did not tarry in that region but hurried on to the company rendezvous at Bear Lake. There he met his two partners, Jackson and Sublette, for whom he had a few furs and much news. A month's rest was taken before starting again for California, to join his men there. Just before leaving on his second trip, Smith wrote a letter to William Clark, superintendent of Indian affairs, giving a report of his first trip, and this report remains as a valuable source of information.

July 13, 1827, Jedediah Smith left the rendezvous by way of the Great Salt Lake on his second trip to California, with eighteen men and two Indian women. To avoid crossing the Sierras, Smith took his previous route down to the Mojave Indians on the east bank of the Colorado. He was expecting to again replenish his supplies and to enjoy the hospitality of the Indians. Since the first appearance of the Americans among them, however, the Indians had been warned against the Americans by the Mexicans. The Indians were seemingly peaceful. Smith was ferrying his men across the river. He and a few companions were on the west shore, others were on the river, while the remainder of the party waited on the east bank. The Indians, who were aiding the party to cross, suddenly fell on the entire group and began massacring them. The company were surprised and horrified at this strange turn of events. Ten men were killed, and the two women, and all the horses were taken; papers and property were also stolen. This massacre was in August, 1827. Smith and eight men were left afoot with no alternative but to go on. They tramped across the desert with much hardship, reaching San Bernardino in nine and a half days. Here they secured a few supplies and left two of their men, Thomas Virgin, who had been wounded by the Mojaves, and Isaac Galbraith, who requested to remain. From San Bernardino Smith went again through

COME AND DISCOVER SAN FRANCISCO FOR YOURSELF

George L. North

(MANAGER PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

A CITY'S BUSINESS TEMPERATURE IS recorded by the thermometer which registers bank clearings, building permits, postal receipts, real estate sales and other indications of business health. San Francisco reached a new high mark in every one of these lines during 1925, and gives every indication of continuing in this healthy state during the present year.

BANK CLEARINGS.

First in the category we place bank clearings, as an indication of the total amount of business done during the year. For the last five years the figures have been:

1921, $6,629,000,000.
1922, $7,274,000,000.
1923, $8,049,061,000.
1924, $8,365,700,000.
1925, $9,479,311,406.
1926 (first six months), $4,883,332,101.

San Francisco has ranked fifth among all the cities of the country during the last two years, which shows the amount of business cleared through this city is extremely high, in proportion to its size. The ten leading cities in 1925 were:

New York, $283,619,245,000; Chicago, $35,391,600,000; Philadelphia, $29,079,000,000; Boston, $22,482,000,000; San Francisco, $9,479,464,000; Pittsburgh, $8,856,572,000; Detroit, $8,430,797,000; Los Angeles, $7,945,493,000; Saint Louis, $7,626,577,000; Kansas City, Missouri, $7,036,500,000.

BANK DEPOSITS AND RESOURCES.

Savings and commercial deposits, both in total and percapita, are uniformly high in San Francisco. The eighth largest bank in the United States is here, and nine of San Francisco's banks rank among the first hundred banks of the country. Figures for the thirty-two local banks follow:

1922—Savings deposits, $457,037,477; commercial deposits, $425,129,738; resources, $1,060,617,309.

1924—Savings deposits, $588,228,951; commercial deposits, $588,755,308; resources, $1,366,501,041.

1925—Savings deposits, $758,273,421; commercial deposits, $555,653,043; resources, $1,537,773,956.

BUILDING PERMITS.

San Francisco's conservative building policy to meet actual demand and to discourage overspeculative ventures, as well as its limited area (42 square miles) indicate the reasons for its ranking as the eleventh city in the United States in building in 1925.

Inasmuch as San Francisco is eleventh in population also, it is obviously not over built as yet. Although there was not quite as much expended on new construction during 1925 as in 1924, the number of permits was greater, and there was a notable increase in the number of small homes, of which there is still a shortage. Here is the yearly building-permit record, showing the number of permits issued and their value:

1923—9,856, $46,676,079.
1924—10,267, $57,852,973.
1925—11,087, $50,392,793.
1926 (first six months), 5,189, $32,223,117.

REAL ESTATE SALES.

Great activity in real estate transfers was recorded during the past year, more property at higher values changing hands than ever before. Both business and residential properties have been involved, so that it is safe to predict that building activity will result during the present year. Sales for the past five years, and their values, have been:

1921—9,736, $80,863,796.
1923—14,940, $156,188,438.
1924—15,600, $140,000,000.
1925—18,250, $182,500,000.
1926 (first six months), 9,309, $92,989,898.

POSTAL RECEIPTS.

Another standard of city measurement is receipts of the local postoffice, and in this, also, San Francisco shows activity and growth. San Francisco ranks tenth among the large cities, showing as follows in 1925:

PUBLIC UTILITY CONNECTIONS.

Growth is indicated very clearly by the increase in public utility connections, each of which usually represents a new family or a new business. San Francisco figures show the following:

Gas—1921, 134,039; 1922, 139,090; 1923, 146,343; 1924, 154,001; 1925, 161,111; 1926 (to May 31), 162,861.

Water—1921, 74,113; 1922, 77,516; 1923, 81,716; 1924, 86,603; 1925, 92,404; 1926 (to July 1), 94,501.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

San Francisco ranks sixth in exports and sixth in imports, but fifth among the forty-nine customs districts of the United States, having advanced from sixth place during the last year. Los Angeles ranks twelfth in exports and twelfth in imports. Seattle surpassed San Francisco this year in imports, due to the large importations of raw silk through that port. The following figures show San Francisco's relative position in value of foreign trade in 1925:

Exports—First, New York, $1,775,070,113; second, Galveston, $639,418,349; third, New Orleans, $467,275,387; fourth, Detroit, $252,274,519; fifth, Virginia, $190,010,353; sixth, San Francisco, $183,009,446; seventh, Buffalo, $177,763,791; eighth, Washington State, $120,557,480; ninth, Philadelphia, $119,063,545; tenth, Baltimore, $108,612,865; eleventh, Georgia, $98,533,745; twelfth, Los Angeles, $78,147,457.

TWO-PIECE FROCK WILL BE POPULAR

HIGH, CRUSHED, SHIRRED, DRAPED or square crowns are new in felt as soft and supple as a fabric and in combinations of felt and velvet. All the reds, from light wine to deep burgandy, the greens, medium and dark, and the whole range of wool browns are worn with flat, severe trimmings used in geometric appliques, shellacked feathers, carved metal and painted leather. These comprise the fall millinery mode in point of material, color and trimming.

Some turbans, instead of standing up, have baggy drapes which extend backward, and in many cases are individually adjusted to the head each time the hat is worn. These crowns are often made of contrasting shades of shirred or stitched velvet. The tall, crushed type and the tam-like of stitched velvet have been designed for dressier wear. Few blocked hats are being shown by any of the designers.

Channel red and the deep wine tones are expected to be the leading millinery shades this season. Many designers combine two or three shades of the same color, or often such daring combinations of colors as orange and lipstick-red, while brown, beige, rust and black are frequently combined in a most effective manner. Royal blue is being used a great deal, and so is the entire range of greens. In fact, this season shows every indication of being no less colorful than the past summer.

Trimming is creeping back into favor and instead of being sewed on to the hat, as in former days, it is now incorporated in the hat in the making and takes such forms as shirring, cording and stitching in elaborate designs with contrasting thread.

A smart use of colors appears in a deep design in which cutouts are fitted together like a puzzle. Different materials, such as grosgrain ribbon and hatter's plush, are worked up together with a contrasting color and surface that is very decorative. When trimming is applied, it is very flat. Style emphasis this fall will be on color.

The most popular silks for all occasions are the satin crepes, failles and moires. The distinction between street dresses and afternoon frocks is a matter of design, rather than of material.

Chiffon velvets, sheer crepes, both plain and printed velvets and taffetas are being used for the loveliest dinner dresses and evening gowns. Double faced materials, such as satin crepe and satin moire, have solved the trimming problem that the new vogue for greater elaboration has created. Dresses can no longer be plain if they are to be smart.

Tailored lines require a trimming that seems to be of the dress itself rather than an unrelated fabric. This effect may be obtained by using bands and inserts of contrasting materials in matching colors. Many ways of using the two surfaces of satin crepe in panels, folds and borders are introduced as means of offering contrast. Original sleeve treatments, yokes, collars, cuffs, ties and sashes offer unlimited opportunity for employing both sides of the fabric.

The two-piece frock, which will be as popular this fall as it was last summer, is made up in satin crepe when the dull side of the material is used for the jumper and the lustrous side for the skirt. The printed velvets also make smart jumpers to be worn with black satin or velvet skirts.

Moires are quite different from the "watered silks" of years ago. The moire pattern is smaller and more delicate this year than heretofore. The uses of this material follow the hour hand around the clock.

Tailored dresses of moire faille are usually in black, navy and dark reds. Beige will be worn on all occasions. A lighter weight, very supple and easily draped, has a satin back and comes in all the light shades for evening. A heavy quality, which is a mixture of silk and wool, is used for the loveliest evening wraps.

The rough silks, so popular in the summer, have had a decided effect on the fall fabrics. Canton failles, satin, canton crepe and sheer crepes show no indication of waning in popularity as the weather grows cooler. In fact, crepe roma, crepe elizabeth, crepe margery and the lighter weight georgette crepe will be extensively used for afternoon frocks as well as for evening dresses.

Plaid taffeta, in washable weaves, is another colorful fabric that is being sponsored for school and college dresses, which are made entirely of the taffeta or sometimes are combined with jumpers of matching velvet.

The most popular furs this winter will be black or golden coltskin, beige, black and white lamb or shaved goatskin. Mole is used with alternating bands of light and dark skin and dark squirrel.

This season we see ensembles and three-quarter coats heavily fur trimmed and accompanied by dresses which end in a band of the same fur. For this purpose, use the flat, supple furs, such as marten or curly caracul. In fact, any fur will trim these garments smartly, but fur must be used.

The last few days have given us the opportunity of observing all the novelty embroideries. There is no doubt that a great effort is being made in this branch of trimming, and it becomes important on sports frocks. The embroidery is often cubist in design and made of silk thread in all colors.

Color will be an important consideration in the autumn bags, for often a severely dark costume depends on its accessories and on the bag for its color note. The high tones, however, green and red and brown will be seen more frequently than the pastel shades that were popular during the past season.

For formal wear, designers are favoring handbags of velvet in costume shades, elaborately embroidered in gold or silver tinsel. While for more dressy occasions, and sometimes for evening, bead bags, harmonizing with the costume, are very lovely. Evening bags are very important.

Flat little bags, entirely of brilliants, are too pretty to be discarded, but the newest are of the oldest materials, persian in effect with chinese embroideries on rich golden fabrics. Gold, silver, kid and beaded crepe-de-chine are chic complements to evening ensembles.

The most unusual of the novelties is made up in the "zipper" closing. This bag is really quite smart for sport or travel. Other bags are novelties rather than fashions, and are interesting enough while they last.

CALIFORNIA COMING TO FORE AS MODEL IN SERICULTURE.

The West bids fair to become the largest plantation in the world for the production of raw materials in the silk industry, according to Miss Mary G. Ingersoll, instructor in the department of home economics of the University of Southern California.

"Surveys of foreign methods, climatic conditions and physiological and industrial aspects are being made, which will govern every move in the establishment of what is expected to be the largest plantation in the world for the production of raw material," says the U.S.C. instructress in an articles entitled "The Pacific Coast Silk Industry."

"What does the 'well-dressed woman' wear? Silk dresses, silk underwear, silk hosiery, silk hats and even silk (satin) shoes. Here are the reasons for the unprecedented demands for silk," continues Miss Ingersoll. "Silk has become a necessity not only to the society woman, but to the businesswoman, the housewife and the artist. Silk in the average wardrobe has become an established fact—it is the one staple which is sold for summer and winter wardrobes alike."

Miss Ingersoll, who has established at the University of Southern California a "textile library" with the idea of helping businesswomen and housewives to distinguish and determine value in such fabrics as silk, wool, cotton and linen, heads an evening course in costume design at Metropolitan College, U.S.C., meeting on Thursday nights on the thirteenth floor of the Transportation building, Seventh and Los Angeles streets, Los Angeles City.

"Until recently," continues the authoress, "the United States has done very little in sericulture. However, every assurance seems at hand that California is coming to the fore as a model in sericulture. Escondido has recently launched an enterprise which will serve as a model for other countries. Mills are already operating at Hermosa Beach, at Glendale and at Los Angeles.

"All textiles are 'hygroscopic.' That is, they possess an affinity for moisture," says Miss Ingersoll. "When the air in a factory is properly moist, the silk has comparatively high elasticity, and the static electricity is dissipated."

The "cottage" system of the Orient, it is said, will not be used in connection with the American silk raising methods, since it operates for a few weeks only during the season, but the plants will be kept in operation throughout the year. There will be no effort, according to the Trojan faculty member, to secure cheap labor, but rather to secure efficient labor.

MY TRAGEDY

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

Tragedies are liable to fall to our lot,
For accidents happen each day
It's the unloaded gun by which people get shot,
Or perhaps in some other strange way
But come they do, so please do not scoff,
For you see that nobody knows.
Should my fate be to have my head knocked off,
I demand it be done with a rose.

E. A. Murphy

(WILMINGTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

THERE IS AN AGE-OLD PROVERB which says that "men build cities." In this age of wonder, however, cities are looked upon as milestones in the march of modern civilization, commonplace, in that they can be and are built in some of the most remote sections of the universe, perhaps to meet a certain requirement or perhaps to satisfy the whim of some eccentric promoter or philanthropist. Whatever the reason, commonplace or ordinary, cities can also be moved overnight, and what is today a bustling, thriving metropolis, may tomorrow be a landmark, left in ruins to be discovered generations hence and heralded as the city of a lost people or some similar title.

But to build a harbor, man-made and fashioned to fit the needs of modern commerce, in a space of seventeen years, has paraphrased that proverb to read, "men build harbors."

In 1909 Wilmington, a small community bordering on the edge of a mud flat, knowing full well the potential possibilities of this vast submerged area but lacking the financial power necessary to develop it for commerce, deeded itself to Los Angeles and received in return the bonded expenditure of thirty-five million dollars, which has been increased by a huge amount expended by the Federal Government for the development of a harbor which has taken its place among harbors which are centuries old,—and all within the brief span of seventeen years.

Ports are gauged by the volume of exports, rather than imports, and it is with this phase of commerce that I am dealing in this article. The more significant will be the facts and figures when it is realized that the large majority of the articles exported are produced or manufactured within a radius of a few miles of the harbor.

One hundred fifty-seven steamship lines make Los Angeles Port a port of call, and 80 percent of the number dock in the Wilmington area. Practically every port in the world is reached by these lines, unloading valuable cargoes of the southland's products and bringing in return raw materials and commodities for domestic use.

Oil is one of the principal exports, and suffice to say that approximately nine and one-half million barrels of oil are shipped from this port every month, and this standard is maintained from month to month, the huge tankers sailing the seven seas distributing the black gold throughout the universe.

Oranges, grapefruit and lemons from California South find a ready market throughout the civilized world. During the month of July 5,400 boxes of oranges and 4,600 boxes of grapefruit were unloaded in Liverpool, 5,000 boxes of oranges and 1,600 of grapefruit in London, with as many more in Stockholm, Gottenburg, Copen-

THE POWER OF IDEALS

APPROXIMATELY TWO THOUSAND people attended the dedication of a monument Admission Day, September 9, marking the site, in front of the administration building of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, of the battle of La Mesa. After due search and investigation of records by Professor Percival C Cooney of the El Monte high-school, Charles J. Prudhomme, Don Chano Ramirez, Don Manuel Cota and Don Ysidro Reyes, the location of the battlefield was definitely fixed.

Adolph G Rivera presided, and among the speakers were Mrs A. S C. Forbes and Vice-president J. A McNaughton of the stock yards Burrel D Neighbours, on behalf of Ramona Parlor N S G W, presented the Flag of the United States and the State (Bear) Flag Grand Trustee John T Newell extended the thanks of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West to the builders of the monument, the presidents of the Union Pacific Railway and the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, for their co-operation in marking California's historic spots.

The Grizzly Bear for September gave a complete description of the monument, an account of the battle, and the dedication program in detail. The gathering was a picturesque one, in that many of the participants at the dedication ceremonies were in costumes of the Spanish days in California.

The main address of the occasion was by Dr. Rockwell D. Hunt, president of the Historical Society of Southern California, who said:

"One of our most distinguished teachers of history in California has recently published in book form a series of lectures on 'The Power of Ideal in American History.' In this excellent book the author, Professor E. D. Adams, discusses the faith of nationality, the crusade against slavery, the emotion of manifest destiny, the service of religion and the vision of democracy.

"These wonderfully fascinating and instructive exercises on California's Admission Day 1926 are themselves an exemplification of the power of ideals in the life of our loved commonwealth. This event constitutes a challenge to idealism issued to our great community. Happy are we today in having renewed assurance that California's true ideals are not founded in geography, wondrous as is our particular portion of the earth's surface, nor yet in climate, with all its boasted charms. 'They are found . . . in the spirit.' It is the spirit that giveth life. The true spirit of California is abroad in the land today.

"The Historical Society of Southern California, a non-commercial body that has quietly ministered in high things to the community for a generation, is deeply gratified to be able to join these loyal Pioneers and these Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West in sponsoring this substantial and enduring memorial of one of the significant historic events of California. The monument itself comes through the thoughtful generosity of the Union Pacific Railroad and the Union Stock Yards Company, whose officers have had the spirit of the best in our historical heritage and a vision of the noblest yet to be. I am honored in being the spokesman

FARMING DEVELOPED INTO INDUSTRY

"THE TROUBLE WITH THE FARMER of today in California is that he has become too specialized. He grows but one crop and he doesn't grow anything else. Where is the old-time farm, with its garden, live-stock and family orchard?"

There's something to this complaint, made the other day by a man who was born on the farm, raised there and who has given his life to the development of agriculture. The success of the California farmer lies in his specialization. He becomes expert in the production of his one crop, and he is able to profit from this specialization. His weakness, however, is in the fact that if he is a raisin grower, raisins grow at his doorstep; if he is a walnut orchardist, walnuts cover every acre.

Specialization is all right, that must be granted. But there are places for other things around the farm. A few sheep would keep down the weeds. The poultry industry of the Middle West is founded on the farm flock, which takes little time but adds sure profits. Garbage and other waste could be turned to pork. The dairy cow or cows fill in gaps and make income steady throughout the year. Even a few beef cattle may not be out of place. Certainly the home garden is essential: there is no need for the farmer to patronize a vegetable wagon. All his fruit can be raised in a small family orchard.

The farmer has developed his vocation into an industry. And he has specialized until he has taken from the farm of today that which made him most nearly independent; he no longer produces most of his living. Perhaps the new way is better. May be the telephone, the gas engine, electric power, the automobile and the radio have so changed conditions that the old-day farm is gone forever. But there are far-sighted men in agriculture today who believe the ultimate prosperity of the small farmer, at least, depends upon the restoration of former conditions.

But in farming, as in other lines of industry, it is the man who knows his business who succeeds. Colonization of lands to increase production is a fine thing, to a degree. There is this reservation, however, that must be made: the colonists either must know their business and be able to go ahead without direction, or that direction must be furnished and it must be efficient. Settlement of land by ex-service men has been bitterly criticised. But if these men failed it was not because they had been in the army, but because they knew nothing of the business they were undertaking. A survey of one colonization scheme showed that 51 percent of the men who went on the land had no previous experience in farming and 30 percent of them had no capital. Picture their chances of success, not alone in farming, but in any other business. The soil does not automatically yield fortunes.

OCTOBER FOR LAYERING.

Ends of dewberry canes, blackberries, loganberries and blackcap raspberries, if covered with soil and kept moist, will develop roots and new plants will result. This layering, as it is called, can be produced at almost any joint, but the plants from the tips will be found strongest. October is a good month for this operation, although the growing season may be used to advantage. When the roots form, they will send up shoots that will develop into plants, and the old cane can be cut when separating the plants, without damage either to the offspring or the parent plant.

As soon as the cane or trailer berry vines have finished bearing and the wood hardens, it is time to clean out the old canes or runners and train the new ones for next summer. If the vines are properly trellised, this is a small task; but whether or not it is easy, if production is desired, it must be done. Cut out the old wood, clean up the debris, dig in some fertilizer, and see that the new canes or trailers are in proper place for next year's crop.

STARTLING FACTS.

A survey of poultry flocks in one producing county in California has led to some startling facts, whether or not they warrant the conclusion that seems to follow. Poultrymen in California have installed electric lights at no small expense to lengthen the short winter day, encourage the hens to eat and exercise more and to lay more eggs. This practice came as a result of experiments under Atlantic Coast conditions, and it was believed the same results would obtain here.

But in the county referred to, it was found the hens in flocks that were not under artificial light ate more and produced more eggs, and laid those eggs at times when prices were the highest. This is but one county, but in every flock this same condition was found. Should it prove the same in other localities, it would seem to indicate clearly that in California lights not only do no good, but are an actual detriment to production and a useless expense. Hatcherymen have so contended for some years and many have refused to take eggs from flocks where lights were used.

WATCH THE LEAKS.

Half the water in California used for irrigation, is wasted. So declared H. C. Carr of Porterville, former president of the State Bankers' Association, in an address to farmers and bankers at a meeting at the California State Fair. Perhaps Carr put it too strongly, but there is no question about the waste. Water constantly is seen in ditches along the road, running away over checks, impregnating soils that already are at the optimum of moisture condition. The losses are not alone in the water wasted, although in years like the present that was serious enough. But crops are reduced and, worst of all, there is the constant danger of raising the water table and with it the alkali that destroys fertility. The careful farmer will watch the leaks.

SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENT.

Deferred grazing and understocking of grazing lands to restore the pasture lands of the ranges in California, have proved beyond all doubt the success of the experiment. In Shasta and Mendocino Counties as well as in other localities, the grazing values of land have been increased many times over; and as a result the ranges worn out from overstocking now are supporting double the number of cattle they did under conditions that prevailed for many years and that were believed incurable. Grass-fat cattle from such ranges are really fat, and command better prices than the poor stock turned off from poor ranges.

CLEAN UP THE ORCHARD.

It isn't too early to begin the cleanup in the orchard. Refuse offers a place of hibernating for insects and pests of various kinds, and if trash is cleaned up, or plowed under, much of this danger is removed. Fall spraying should be done under conditions suited to various localities, and preparations for pruning should be under way. Between harvest and the winter activities in the garden and in the orchard there is much that should be done, and none of this should be slighted, even though the temptation for a bit of relaxation is great.

IMPORTANT WARNING.

A warning that seems to gain no popular favor, yet which is important, is that of whitewashing the tree trunks in the fall to protect against sunburn and winter injury. Most orchardists believe in early summer whitewashing to prevent sunburn, but in reality the damage is more likely to occur in the winter. Bright warm days, bringing the bark temperature to around 100, followed by frosty or freezing nights, do the damage. If the trunks are white, the sun's rays are reflected and less of the heat is absorbed, and the temperature range in the tree is not as wide. There are several formulas for whitewash that will stick, but none of them is better than ordinary cold-water paint.

seedbed prepared. Then keep the soil moist until the seed has had a good start, so that it can be killed over if possible, give them a second chance to come up. This will eliminate a lot of weed digging and hard work later. Spade in plenty of well rotted manure and see that the seedbed is finely pulverized when planted. See also that it has been thoroughly soaked in water beforehand, so that heavy rains will not cause hills to sink.

Plant bluegrass and clover for the best results. Half and half by weight gives the best results, although the present price of clover makes this expensive for large lawns. Two of bluegrass to one of clover makes a still good proportion, and some use even three to one. The clover is merely a nurse crop for the bluegrass, which later will run out the clover. The rye grasses come quickly and are hardy, but have a tendency to mature in bunches at the end of the second year. Don't clip the grass too closely, but cut it often.

TO OBSTRUCT PEST.

The sugar-beet leaf hopper is not to continue its unobstructed way to the heart of one of the promising industries of the state's agriculture. Ordinary control measures seem futile, and there are but two means of getting at the pest, as far as can be seen.

One of these is by breeding resistant stock that the hoppers will not attack. The College of Agriculture of the University of California has set aside twelve acres for this work, which will be pushed as rapidly as possible. The other plan is to find a parasite that will eat the pest, and an entomologist has been sent to South America in this quest. There are difficulties ahead, however, for the pest is native, and a foreign parasite that will adapt itself to the home-grown insect is more or less of an uncertain quantity.

UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.

The annual convention of farmers and fruitgrowers will be held this year at Fullerton, in California South, the dates being December 9 and 10. Director G. H. Hecke and Lee A. Strong of the State Department of Agriculture announce a program that will appeal strongly to the growers of the state, and those in the southern section of California will have an unusual opportunity to attend the convention, which for the past two years has met in Sacramento.

CALIFORNIA SUPREME.

Thirty counties, more than half of California's subdivisions, were represented by exhibits at the California State Fair this year in Sacramento. No other state in the union grows as many crops commercially as does California. In fact, California grows all the crops grown in every other state, with the single exception of sugar-cane, and has many of her own not grown elsewhere. Consequently there is no similar fair in the United States, or in the world for that matter, where such a diversification of produce is shown, and it is with but proper pride that it is said that nowhere else may such quality be seen.

COMING INTO THEIR OWN.

Stockmen who for the past several years have stuck to their cattle and the ranges, may at last be coming into their own. Better days are ahead, says the United States Department of Agriculture, which points out that the number of breeding stock, of cattle on feed and of young stock is lower than for several years, and a correspondingly good market price seems assured.

No foreign competition looms unpleasantly on the horizon, and consumption is holding its own. With normal rainfall and snows in the mountains this winter to assure good range feed next summer, California stockmen will be assured of the best year in at least seven that have passed.

MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING.

The first state-wide meeting of bankers and farmers was held at the California State Fair this year, and out of that meeting came a vote on the part of both to return annually for a similar meeting. One result of the conference, that was quite apparent, was the discovery by the farmer that the banker is human, and on the part of the banker that the farmer is a businessman. A mutual understanding resulted, and a long step was taken as regards the problem of financing California agriculture.

AGRICULTURE IN CALIFORNIA SOUTH TRIBUTARY TO LONG BEACH

G. P. Hitchcock

(PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

HUSBANDRY IS AS OLD AS THE HILLS. Agriculture is the largest industry in the world and gives occupation to more people than any other industry. How few think of the great importance of agriculture, and that every human being is dependent upon it to sustain life. This is equally true of every great development; whether it be a pioneer undertaking or otherwise, food supply must be the first thing to be considered and provided for. Agriculture is a basic industry, and no other industry could go on without it. Agriculture is broad in its scope and has many allied divisions and branches and includes every food product of the soil.

The largest division here in California is horticulture, which embraces all citrus and deciduous fruits. Important branches are sugar-beet growing, vegetable growing, forestry, poultry farming, dairying, cotton growing, stock raising, etc. Almost every California crop is grown on a large commercial scale. The market for all this produce is nation-wide, and for the more finished products it is world-wide.

California, and especially Southern California, is noted for its intensive agriculture, hence profits per acre are many times greater than in any other section of the country. For this reason the small farm has become very popular and ranges from one to five or ten acres. These small farms are in great numbers in Southern California. There is another large group running from forty to one hundred acres and farms in less numbers ranging from a few hundred acres to a thousand or more. In the earlier days of California, land holdings were very large. The rapid growth of citrus and deciduous fruit culture has broken up many large tracts into smaller ones.

Evidence is on every hand showing that farmers here live better and accumulate more wealth on one to five acres than those in the East, South or Middle West do on eighty to one hundred acres. During a recent tour of the Southern states it was observed that many farmers lived poorly on the proceeds of their labor on farms above one hundred acres. It seemed a pity for men to work hard with antiquated equipment in an effort to grow less than a quarter-bale of cotton to the acre.

We usually think of the farmer of yesterday as the man who raised corn, wheat, oats and yellow pumpkins, but the farmer of today is a different individual. The "Standard Dictionary" defines the agriculturist as one versed in the science and art of cultivating the soil. So it follows that the farmer of the present is a scientist and an artist if you please. He must be such to keep up with the rapid and wonderful development of agriculture.

The high order of Southern California farm homes, many of them fit for a king, with their beautiful surroundings, together with the fine citrus groves and the deciduous orchards, reflect the artistic in agriculture. The intensive culture, handling of soils skillfully and the accuracy in the production of crops generally, reflect the scientific.

The College of Agriculture, University of California, Berkeley, and the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, have numerous experiment stations throughout this state. The best available information on every subject pertinent to agriculture is published in pamphlet form for free distribution by both of these great departments. In addition, much personal work is done by experts and the service is available to those needing it. Experience is a good teacher, but it is a slow process, and many farmers might fail before acquiring sufficient information, single handed, to succeed. There is no excuse for the man who goes wrong and fails to get the results he should have.

Those unacquainted with California may wonder why we produce so much more per acre than can be done elsewhere. Important factors not prevailing in other parts of the country have to do with our high quantity and quality acre production. Some of these factors are climatic conditions, such as moderate temperature all the year, abundance of sunshine, never-ending season, rains from November to April,—giving everything a fine start, after which irrigation takes care of the moisture proposition at the exact time when moisture is needed,—adaptability of soils, intensive cultivation, etc. Sharp demand and good prices are also important. California has the most efficient co-operative organizations existing anywhere, looking after the harvesting, grading, packing, shipping and marketing of the soil products.

No other state in the union produces such a large number of agricultural products as California, and we have climatic and soil conditions to suit the needs of them all.

In the study of cities that have prospered and attained considerable size, there is always discovered one or more things that have contributed to their growth, such as having a fine productive country around them, important railroad and shipping centers, industrial development, etc.

Long Beach has at least four or five things that have contributed to its rapid growth. These are as follows: It has a fine, well-developed, productive, populous back country, lying between the mountains and the sea. It is a sea coast resort of renown. It has the largest oil field in the state. It is a port with the harbor in the far-most part of the city, where it does not detract in any way from the resort features, business or residential sections of the city. It also has an industrial development in the making. A large number of tourists are here every month of the year.

In the country tributary to Long Beach a long list of agricultural products are grown. Space will not permit full discussion of all of them. A few will be mentioned briefly.

CITRUS AND DECIDUOUS FRUITS.

The growing of these fruits is Southern California's greatest industry. Oranges, lemons, grape fruit and limes are grown commercially. Citrus districts are classified into three zones—coastal near the coast, intermediate and interior. Each differs from the other. In the coastal zone there is a coastal influence, while in the interior there is the influence of an arid interior. These differing influences may have a bearing on yield, quality, etc. Long Beach embraces in its back country the coastal and intermediate zones.

Orange production over a term of years will average from 200 to 300 packed boxes per acre and brings an average price over the same years of two dollars per box. These figures are considered conservative. There is quite a large percentage of culls at the packing-house. These are sold in bulk and can be bought at every crossroad in pail lots.

In the growing of citrus fruits there is a great deal of scientific practice and procedure, including fumigation, spraying, pruning, fertilization, irrigation, adaptability of soil and climatic conditions and environment. These features also apply to deciduous fruits. Deciduous fruits include apples, peaches, pears, plums, apricots, cherries, grapes, etc. These fruits are, of course, handled and packed differently.

Southern California has a large number of beautiful and prosperous cities in the midst of its citrus groves and deciduous orchards. Fruit growing made these cities possible, so the business must be profitable.

Young groves and orchards may be bought from the large development companies for from $500 to $700 per acre, including full care until three years old. Older full-bearing fruit farms with, building improvements range from $2,000 to $3,000 or more per acre. Generally speaking, the fruit farmer has nothing to do with the harvesting of the crop. The growers' organizations do that, as well as the packing, shipping and marketing. Citrus and deciduous fruit trees bear some, from the third year on. Paying crops, citrus from five to eight years, deciduous from four to seven years. The best buy seems to be the developed three-year-old grove or orchard. While the fruit trees are growing one may grow vegetables, berries, beans or grain. Dairy and poultry farming and hog raising are good side lines. All the above yield quick returns to tide over while you wait. There is still to be had a quantity of unimproved fruit land ranging in price from one hundred dollars per acre up, the price depending on location, soil, water, etc.

SUGAR-BEET GROWING.

The beet-sugar industry in the United States is a development of the last twenty-five or thirty years and has spread to fifteen or more states. The states having the largest production are Michigan, Colorado, Utah and California. About one hundred sugar mills have been built in the various states. The number of mills operating, tonnage of beets, acreage of beets and beet-sugar production have all fluctuated from year to year, though there has been a progressive increase in the industry to the present time. Beet-sugar manufacture from its inception has been hampered on account of the constant tariff agitation in its relation to the import duty on raw-sugar. There is at present an import duty on raw-sugar. The manufacturers of beet-sugar believe they could not continue in the business with imported raw-sugar on the free list. They could not compete with the sugar prices of the big refiners. Sugar-beet growing and the manufacture of beet-sugar is a rather new industry and needs protection.

The United States is the largest sugar consuming country in the world. Our beet-sugar and cane-sugar production is about one-fourth of what we consume. The other three-fourths must be imported.

We have in the United States upward of two hundred and seventy million acres of well-defined land with suitable soil and climatic conditions for sugar-beet growing. If all of this vast area could be used for sugar-beets we would be in a position to export sugar instead of importing it. Many countries of the world produce beet-sugar. Germany is the largest producer and is a large exporter of beet-sugar. Quantity productions of beet-sugar and cane-sugar in the world are approximately the same.

In the Long Beach area there is a large acreage in sugar-beets. There are five sugar mills within twenty miles. One of them is only eight miles from the city. Net profits from beets are from fifteen dollars up per acre. There are some indirect profits, such as feeding or selling the beet tops. Feeding of the beet pulp from the sugar mill is valuable for dairy herds. The waste water from the mill contains lime and is valuable to neutralize soil that is over-acid. Tops are also a good fertilizer.

Rotation of sugar-beets with other crops, with a beet crop once in three or four years, is advisable, though beets are grown a number of years in succession in some cases. However, it is not a good farm practice. A notable thing has been discovered, namely, that other crops following beets have an increased yield over former crops of the same kind, on the same land, of from twenty-five to fifty percent, indicating that the effect of beet growing is valuable as a fertilizer. This has been well established in Germany.

Sugar-beets will tolerate alkali salts in the soil up to twelve thousand pounds to the acre to a depth of three feet. Beyond this alkali content, germination of seed is retarded and plants are stunted. However, sugar-beets of high grade as to sugar content and purity have been grown in alkali soil. The caustic effect of sodium carbonate is the most damaging of the alkali salts.

Important points are deep plowing, preferably in the fall and ten to twelve inches in depth, thorough preparation of the soil, early planting, about March, weeding and thinning, thorough cultivation, good drainage of the soil, freedom from hardpan, generous watering by irrigation. Sunshine favors sugar formation in beets. The long

NATIVE SONS' DOINGS.

The membership campaign of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. is well under way. Two candidates were initiated September 1. Speakers of the evening included, among others, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer and Edgar McFadyen. October 5 a large class of candidates will be initiated.

At the September 15 meeting President Edgar C. Crowell gave an interesting account of the Admission Day parade in Sacramento, in which he participated. He was accompanied to the Capital City by John Codagan, affiliated with Sacramento Parlor No. 3 N.S.G.W., but a resident of Long Beach.

September 19 several Native Sons and Native Daughters, at the invitation of Mrs. Julia Arborn, went on a picnic excursion to Riverside, to see the Tibbett collection of Indian and early-day California relics.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' DOINGS.

There was a large attendance at the September 8 meeting of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. when several candidates were initiated. Refreshments were served by the September committee, Fannie McPherson chairman.

The California Thimble Club of the Parlor had an all-day session September 16 at the home of Mrs. Lena Hansen. Luncheon was served at noon. The main feature of the afternoon program was a talk by Miss Helen Bobrein on "Newer Aspects of Nutrition," which was greatly enjoyed. Julia Arborn, president of the club, presided at the business session at which it was voted to turn the funds in the club's treasury into the Parlor, to comply with a Grand Parlor ruling. Lilia West entertained the club at her home September 30.

Several members of Long Beach accompanied D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt on a fraternal visit to Santa Ana Parlor No. 235 September 20. An enjoyable time was had. October 6 the Parlor will give a dance for the benefit of its drill team. October 27 a class of candidates will be initiated; a delegation from San Diego Parlor No. 208 will be guests on this occasion.

PASADENA'S SCHOOL BUILDINGS PUT EUROPE'S PALACES TO SHAME

Harry L. Roberts
(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, PASADENA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND CIVIC ASSOCIATION.)

"IN PASADENA," WROTE ARTHUR BRISbane a few months ago, "there is a high-school that for architectural beauty, and for the beauty of the park around it, would put to shame a majority of Europe's great palaces."

High praise from a high source. Brisbane is reputed to be the highest paid and most widely read editorial writer in the world. At any rate, his column of editorial comment, entitled "Today," apperars in hundreds of newspapers every day.

Pasadena is very proud of her public schools. She has approximately $7,500,000 invested in buildings alone. During the last two years she has spent $2,990,000 on new buildings, erecting three new junior high-schools, three school gymnasiums and eight new elementary-school units or additions.

ONE OF FIFTEEN BUILDINGS ON PASADENA HIGH SCHOOL CAMPUS

It cost $2,036,693.32 to operate and maintain the public schools of Pasadena last year, exclusive of what was spent on permanent improvements and new buildings. The budget for 1926-1927 calls for an expenditure of $2,983,544 for operation and maintenance, and $1,200,689 for new buildings and improvements.

Enrollment in the public schools of Pasadena on the opening day of the 1926 fall term reached a total of 14,281, an increase of 929 over the opening day of the 1925 school year, or a gain of more than seven percent. Of the total, 978 pupils were in kindergarten, 8,172 in elementary, 3,104 in junior high-schools, 2,620 in senior high-schools, 35 in part-time school and 297 in junior college. Two new schools were opened this fall, the John Muir technical high-school, Pasadena's second senior high-school, and the Benjamin Franklin school, an "opportunity school" for pupils deserving of special attention. Pasadena's schools employ a staff of more than 700 teachers.

The Pasadena high-school plant—which, according to Brisbane, "would put to shame a majority of Europe's great palaces,"—comprises fifteen buildings situated on a campus of forty acres. The group of buildings was augmented recently by the construction of a new $50,000 girls' gymnasium.

Student activities are governed by a board of seven commissioners elected by the student body. Each commissioner is assigned to a specific department, or phase of activities, the seven departments being finance, boys' welfare, girls' welfare, debating, publications, athletics and entertainment. Regular meetings of the board are attended by the seven commissioners, a faculty advisor and a student body clerk.

All student infractions of discipline are passed upon and punishment meted out by the student council, a judicial board comprising five students, three appointed by the board of student commissioners and two elected at large.

That student self-government is an actuality, not a myth, is evidenced by the fact that the powerful initiative and referendum weapons are provided. When a petition signed by not less than fifteen percent of the student body is presented to the board of student commissioners, the provisions of the petition must either be enacted into law by the commission or submitted to a vote of the student body within ten days. If submitted to a vote and approved by a majority of the students, it can only be repealed by a similar vote.

Similarly, all rules and legislation enacted by the commission must be submitted to a vote when a petition asking for such an election is signed by one-third of the students. Pasadena high-school is said to have more student self-government than any other high-school in the West.

The school bank takes care of all student body funds and also numbers scores of students and teachers among its depositors. The school book store, owned and managed by the student body, carries a large stock of stationery, pencils, athletic equipment, candy, school and class jewelry, pennants and other supplies.

The school cafeteria serves an average of 2,500 lunches each noon. The cafeteria annex sells from forty to fifty dozen sandwiches, thirty cases of soft drinks and a large quantity of candy and ice-cream daily. Eighteen men and women and thirty students are employed in the cafeteria and annex.

Four publications are issued regularly by the students. The "Chronicle" is a weekly newspaper of four pages. The "Annual," containing about 300 pages, profusely illustrated, is issued once a year. The "Item" is a literary magazine and the "Forester" is issued by the Forestry Club.

In the schol library are 1,500 reference books, 2,400 literary volumes, 2,500 handbooks on useful arts, 1,700 scientific volumes, 630 books on fine arts, 500 on travel, 400 of biography and 25 on journalism.

In the museum are 200 mounted birds, 30 mammals (including a rare Australian duckbill, a baboon and a female pouched kangaroo) and a fine collection of reptiles, fossils, fish and other sea life.

The school auditorium seats 1,800. It has regulation orchestra pit and motion-picture projection room, and the stage is equipped with five complete sets of scenery, a motion-picture screen, an abestos fire curtain and four dressing rooms.

Heat is piped from the school heating plant to every building on the campus and the swimming pool. The buildings comprise a main building, science building, domestic science building, manual arts building, agricultural building, boys' gymnasium, girls' gymnasium, swimming pool, music hall, boys' athletic clubhouse, armory, heating plant and grandstands. A new library and auditorium, each in a building by itself, are contemplated.

In all there are more than forty school clubs, classified as class, literary, welfare, athletic, general, music and science.

In the home economics department of the school is a model apartment comprising four rooms and a bath. It is completely furnished.

The school printing department is equipped with $30,000 worth of presses and other equipment. Most of the printing for all the city schools, the board of education and various student activities is produced in this department.

Pasadena high-school has become nationally known for its annual commencement program, which is held in the form of a colorful outdoor pageant before 50,000 spectators in the Pasadena Rose Bowl. The school rifle team holds the championship of the National Rifle Association in the high-school class.

In addition to the fine public schools, there are many collegiate and private schools in Pasadena, including Dr. Robert A. Millikan's internationally-known California Institute of Technology, Pasadena College, Broadoaks, Orton School for Girls, Mount Vernon Select School and Westridge School for Girls.

growing season is favorable. In Southern California the harvest is not hurried on account of danger of freezing weather.

VEGETABLE GROWING.

Vegetable growing in California is a very largely developed branch of agriculture and about one hundred thousand railroad cars are needed to move these crops to Eastern markets every year. All of the common and popular kinds of vegetables are grown commercially. In this branch, planting, harvesting and shipping continue all the year. Large quantities of vegetables are canned.

NUTS, MISCELLANEOUS FRUITS.

About all of the English walnuts and almonds grown in this country are from California. There is a large acreage of walnuts in this part of the state. It is a profitable crop and the acreage is increasing.

Figs are extensively grown. Dates are limited to the Imperial Valley, and the acreage is increasing. In small commercial quantities we grow the pomegranate, guava, avacado and persimmon.

We hear much about prune orchards. They are here in theory, but in practice a prune orchard is a plum orchard. All prunes are plums, but all plums are not prunes. Only two or three varieties of plums are suitable for prunes. So, a prune is a dried plum. A suitable plum for making prunes is one that dries sweet without removing the pit. A plum that ferments at the pit during the drying process will not do at all. The best plum for prune making is the California blue Damson. It is delicious and can be bought fresh at every crossroad east of the Rockies, and this side of them too. California's prune production is enormous and prunes have a wider sale than the fresh plums because they are exported in large quantities.

California is the largest producer of grapes of any state. Varieties are grown suitable for the table, for wine and for raisins. Raisin making is a large industry. Grapes are adapted to almost every part of the state. There are two districts where grape culture is very extensive — one in the San Joaquin Valley and the other in Southern California. Grapes thrive in soil that is almost pure sand—soil that would be considered about worthless for anything else. Of course, fertilization is necessary.

POULTRY FARMING.

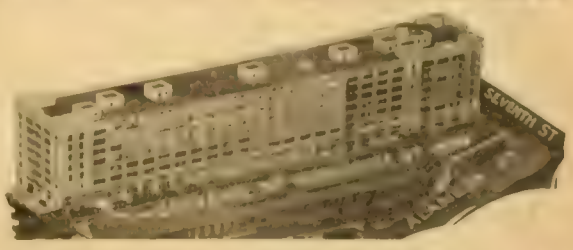
Poultry farming in California's equable climate is a very large and prosperous industry. It must be, to supply our nearly five millions of population and the one million or more tourists coming every year. One- or two-acre poultry farms are in the majority, though some are larger and worth from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars. In addition to supplying home demand, Southern California ships around two thousand carloads of eggs and dressed poultry to Eastern markets every year. Demand and prices are good. Poultry farmers who have the advantages of co-operative features make the largest profits. Co-operative organizations buy feed in carload lots and sell it to the farmers at actual cost. They transport the eggs and dressed poultry from the farm to the packing-house, where the products are graded, packed, shipped and marketed. Once a week the farmer gets a check for what he has delivered. The organization rendering this service is his organization, or at least he is a part of it. It is a notable fact that practically all of California's marketing is done by these co-operative organizations, representing the growers and producers in every branch of agriculture.



One or two acres of ground appear to be a small affair to be called a poultry farm. But, here is what has been seen on one acre in the Long Beach area: A bungalow home with ample ground around it; garage; poultry house, three hundred and fifty feet in length, divided into twenty-five sections; twenty-five hundred laying hens, a hundred to each section; a family garden spot, and a larger garden where green feed is raised for the laying hens, such as beets, alfalfa, kale, cabbage, lettuce, etc. Nothing seems to be crowded. No yard space is provided for laying hens, because the owner does not believe in that system for layers. On the roof of the poultry house, which is nearly flat, one thousand pullets and chicks are kept and provision is made for protection, shade and open spaces. This is an example of two-story poultry farming in California. In addition to all of this equipment on the acre, the line fences are built with eight wires eight inches apart. Various kinds of fruit trees are planted alongside the fences. The limbs as they grow are trained along the wires — eight limbs in each direction, right and left. All other limbs are kept pruned off. This plan takes up no space and the trees bear fruit abundantly. This typifies intensive farming in California.

Profits of $1.50 to $2 net, per hen per year, are considered very conservative; even higher profits are recorded. Profits are contingent on many things, such as co-operative features, proper housing and feeding, cleanliness, hens with good laying record that have been bred for laying. Then there is the personal element to contend with—the man in the case. He should be ambitious, industrious, know the poultry business and have good business judgment and a desire to do things in a correct and scientific way. Success in the poultry business depends largely on whether one likes the business or not. If not, better keep out of it. Success in any branch of agriculture implies that the farmer like his work and that he apply the best methods known.

STOCK RAISING.

Stock raising in California is quite extensive, though not much stock is supplied to markets outside the state, unless it be feeders from the big ranges in the foothills and mountains. Stock seen in this area is mostly dairy herds and feeders from the ranges being fed for the market. Much of California's beef supply, however, comes from grass-fat cattle.

Hogs are raised usually in conjunction with dairy farming, fruit growing, alfalfa growing and grain farming. These branches have more or less waste for feeding hogs. In this back country there is a large hog ranch carrying thirty thousand head of hogs of differing ages all the time. Large numbers of fat hogs are delivered to the markets daily. The fattening process is finished with corn. Sheep are plentiful. The state probably raises enough cattle, hogs and sheep for home consumption, though some of our supply comes from the big packing establishments in the Middle West.

DAIRY FARMING.

Dairy farming is largely developed in the Long Beach territory. About two million people reside in the cities, towns and rural districts, making a fine market for all dairy products. Good demand and good prices for these products make dairy farming a profitable business.

COTTON GROWING.

Cotton has not yet come to the Long Beach area. It may, later, as the acreage is increasing rapidly in different sections of the state. It is said the acreage of cotton is increasing in the San Joaquin Valley as fast as water can be furnished for irrigation. In 1915 California had thirty-nine thousand acres of growing cotton. In 1924, nine years later, the acreage had increased to two hundred and seventy thousand acres, making a gain of about twenty-six thousand acres each year for the nine years. Cotton grown here is superior to that grown in the Southern states. Quality is better and the yield higher. In some cases yields as high as one and a half to two bales per acre have been noted.

To the present time the boll weevil, which is so destructive to cotton in the Southern states, has not appeared in California. This state is doing all that is possible to keep the pest out. Among other preventive measures, bringing in of seed from the Southern states for planting purposes is prohibited. Continued cloudy and rainy weather conditions prevailing in the Southern states favor boll weevil activity. Our weather conditions are the reverse. Sunshine, rainless growing season and dry heat are the most potent factors in holding the pest in check, and these conditions increase the death rate of immature weevils enormously. It is questionable whether the boll weevil could live and thrive under California's climatic conditions. The chances are decidedly against it. California cotton is grown under irrigation.

CORN AND WHEAT.

California is not a corn state, in the sense that Illinois and Iowa are. Very little corn is grown in Southern California.

Back about thirty years this state produced more wheat than it does now. It never compared with such wheat states as Kansas and North Dakota. Wheat production in California now is probably sufficient for home consumption. Large areas of former wheat land have been brought under irrigation and are now used for citrus and deciduous fruits, grapes, cotton, etc.

BARLEY, OATS AND ALFALFA.

Large acreages of these grains and alfalfa are grown in the near back country. The greater portion of barley and oats are cut before maturity—or in the dough stage—for hay and yield enormous tonnages. The remainder of these crops are harvested at maturity for grain. If sown during the early winter barley and oats receive the full benefit of the season rains and mature without irrigation.

In alfalfa and grain hays California leads the list in production. The value of the total hay crop, including all varieties, is the largest of any state.

LAND PRICES.

This is a difficult question to discuss, because the many varying conditions in Southern California cause a very wide range of prices. I have traveled in every state, lived in ten of them for periods of time ranging from one to twenty years or more and have motored in forty-three states. With all of this experience, at least two questions can be definitely decided: First, California is good enough for me. Second, all states are alike in one feature, each has a large amount of good land and plenty of poor land.

California has a vast area of wonderfully fertile and productive land. There are many things about California, having an influence on land prices, that are different from those existing in any other part of the country. A few of them are as follows: Nearness to prosperous cities, large and small; frontage on paved highways; mild, equable, all-year climate; developed or potential water supply for irrigation; earning power; quality and adaptability of soils; environment; land suitable for irrigation, level or nearly so. All these things have a bearing on prices. Get away from them, and prices are relatively low; with them, prices are much higher.

Much unimproved land is available, from one hundred to two thousand dollars or more per acre. Improved land may be bought at from five hundred to three thousand dollars or more per acre. Citrus and deciduous fruit and walnut farms in full bearing are the highest in price. Often the finest kind of land is valued and priced too high.

Agricultural lands are valued or capitalized in proportion to their earning power. This was well illustrated during the world war, when wheat and corn belt farms had a rapid rise, sustained by the high prices of wheat and corn fixed by the government. When the war prices of these commodities ended, farm prices went into a rapid slump. Men who bought farms at inflated prices found they could not pay out, when wheat and corn prices dropped. Many farms reverted to the original owners.

CLIMATE.

Three factors have most to do with California's great success in agriculture—climate, soil and water. When the opportunity presents itself to talk climate, the Californian loses all sense of reluctance. The characteristic is excusable, because we can deliver the climate—the finest in the world. Our soils are adapted to a long list of agricultural products. Water is abundant and sufficient for the needs of irrigation, if conservation is practiced. During the rainy season, from November to April, the earth becomes filled with water to the saturation point. Rivers, streams, lakes and reservoirs are filled, and later melting snows in the mountains replenish the supply.

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE POLITICAL PRESIDENTIAL CAMpaign was red hot in California during October 1876. Marching clubs paraded nightly and political meetings followed in halls, instead of in the open air, in the principal cities and towns. The Democratic slogan was, "Turn the rascals out," while that of the Republicans was, "Keep the Copperheads out."

The rift in the Republican party caused by the defection of the "Dolly Vardens" during the state campaign of 1875, was closed and Senator Newton Booth, their leader, with George C. Gorham, a leading "stalwart," were on the stump supporting the same ticket and platform. Congressman H. F. Page, in the second district, enlivened the campaign by a joint debate with Congressman Lamar from Mississippi.

Senator Booth prognosticated the result of the presidential election as likely to be so close he feared complications would ensue, and he was the only political prophet nearly correct in his forecast. There was a great hubbub in San Francisco over a charge made of illegal registration of foreign voters, and 4,000 of them were put upon a blacklist and cited to appear and clear their names of suspicion. This kept San Francisco in a political ferment for the fortnight previous to election day.

Professor S. S. Baldwin and wife were exposing fake spiritualists and giving puzzling tests to large audiences. They heartened the Republicans of credulous nature by receiving communications from the other world predicting Hayes, their candidate for president, would be elected.

A congressional committee, with Senator Morton of Indiana as chairman, arrived in San Francisco October 7 to investigate and report on the Chinese question. Frank M. Pixley was the leading anti-Chinese advocate.

The centennial anniversary of the establishment of Mission Dolores in San Francisco was celebrated October 5. Archbishop Alemany officiated in a pontificial mass and delivered a sermon in Spanish, after which a large procession formed and paraded through the principal streets. The military companies, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Pioneer Association and several thousand citizens were in line. The procession was over three hours passing a given point. They marched to the capacious Mechanics Institute pavilion where, on account of the jam, thousands who desired to do so could not enter. Governor William Irwin was president of the day. Hon. J. W. Dwinelle delivered an oration in English and General M. G. Vallejo followed with one in Spanish. B. T. Oliver read an original poem and the mayors of San Francisco and San Jose delivered addresses The cornerstone of a new church was laid at the Mission Dolores in the afternoon.

NOTED PIONEER DIES.

The anniversary of the framing of the constitution of California—October 13, 1849—was celebrated in Monterey. B. V. Sargent was president of the day.

The State Grange held its annual meeting in San Francisco October 4, 400 delegates being in attendance. Many resolutions to aid the California farmers and to regulate affairs generally were passed. The session ended with a feast of California farm products.

James W. Lick, the philanthropist and one of California's wealthiest Pioneers, died October 1, aged 80 years. He was a native of Pennsylvania and came to California from Chili in 1849 with about $20,000. He loaned his money to Burgoyne & Co., bankers, at a high rate of interest and took as security a mortgage on some of their real estate in San Francisco. They failed, and the real estate he acquired through it made him a millionaire, as it enhanced in value with the growth of the city. He was a cabinetmaker and superintended the erection of his buildings, among which were the Lick House and a flourmill in Santa Clara Valley, both of which were money-producing investments. Lick Observatory, at the summit of Mount Hamilton; a $60,000 monument in Golden Gate Park to Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner;" city hall statuary; bequests to the Pioneer Association, Academy of Sciences and other institutions were provided for in his will. He left an estate of $5,000,000.

Lick was president of the Pioneer Association, which took charge of the funeral arrangements, taking the remains to its hall to lie in state. The 4th the funeral cortege moved from there to the Mechanics Institute pavilion, with the Pioneer Association, N.S.G.W. Parlors and several other lodges in line. Rev. Horatio Stebbins delivered the eulogy. The general public did not take part in the obsequies, as Lick was not a popular man. His son, John, was in the East and his return a fortnight later was viewed with apprehension by the associations to receive bequests, as he would not communicate his intentions. He filed, through his attorneys October 31, a petition to be appointed administrator of his father's estate.

The Northern District Fair opened at Marysville, Yuba County, under auspicious conditions October 23 and continued for a week. The Sonoma County Fair opened at Petaluma October 10.

There was a week of racing at San Jose, San Francisco, Oakland and Los Angeles during the month. All the events were well attended by betting turfites, who witnessed many well-contested races.

NOVEL ADVERTISING STUNT.

At Los Angeles October 8 there was a fifty-mile riding race, for $1,000 a side, between J. P. Smith and Jose Perez. One was championed by the Americans and the other by the Mexican population. Each rider was to use ten horses and change horses at the end of each mile without touching the ground. An immense crowd gathered. Every available vehicle was in use, the streetcars were crowded beyond capacity and the road leading to the track was lined with pedestrians. Pools sold with Smith a 2-to-1 favorite of the Americans. Perez led for thirty-six miles, when Smith came to the front. On the last mile they entered the homestretch neck and neck, but Perez crossed the score half a length ahead. "Vivas" were of loud and long duration and the Mexicans quit working for awhile. October 22 Smith rode 100 miles against a time bet of four hours and forty-five minutes. He rode the distance in four hours and twenty-four minutes.

Robert Allen, on a wager in San Francisco that he could walk 100 miles in twenty-four hours, won by eight minutes, in an exhausted condition.

A farmer in Visalia, Tulare County, exhibited a pumpkin that weighed 282 pounds.

At Marysville, Yuba County, two hunters brought to market from the Coast Range twenty-five deer they shot during one week.

J. Mittis, near Downey, Los Angeles County, made a shipment of five tons of walnuts to San Francisco. The product was from his English walnut tree grove and attracted wide attention.

A farmer named Truman, in Los Angeles County, produced a pumpkin that measured seven feet two inches in circumference and weighed 234 pounds.

Juan Valenzula, in Los Angeles, was the father of his twentieth child. The children ranged in ages from 30 years down.

The United States Mint in San Francisco had, up to October 1, coined this year $104,000,000.

The Con. Virginia and California mines each declared a monthly dividend of $2 a share and thus distributed a couple of million dollars among their stockholders.

Cooper & Bailey's circus, the most stupendous aggregation that had yet shown in California, came to the state by rail from Saint Louis, Missouri, in a train of twenty-eight cars. It had a menagerie of large proportions and great variety, a herd of eight elephants and a galaxy of unequaled performers. It only showed in railroad towns, but people came from miles around to crowd its tents. An advertising feature was to let a trained elephant occasionally escape, rush through the town and bring out nearly the entire populace to aid in its capture.

A company was formed in Los Angeles to plant eucalyptus trees. It had bought 400 acres of land and planted 40,000 trees and was preparing to plant 40,000 more. It expected to harvest a big supply of cordwood for fuel purposes in the distant future.

MESSENGER "GETS" HIGHWAYMAN.

Muncey & Belleay, prospectors in Trinity County, found a quartz ledge that milled $400 a ton.

Mureke, Victor & Co., a San Francisco shipping and commission house and an old and well-established firm whose paper was considered gilt edge, failed for $360,000 October 16. The firm had invested heavily in grain bags, importing them from India. Being unable to sell them in an overstocked market, it consequently went under.

A young man named Alfred Ver Mehr, the son of a San Francisco minister, collected $24,000 on steamer day, October 1, for his firm and then absconded with his mistress on a steamer for a Mexican port. It developed he had been going the pace for some months.

In 1868 the stage from Boise City, Idaho, to Corrinne, Utah, was robbed of $64,000. There were silver bullion bars amounting to $50,000 in the treasure taken. These were buried near the scene of the robbery but were subsequently removed and secreted elsewhere by one of the gang, who was afterwards apprehended and served a term in the state prison, where he died. Before dying he informed two other convicts where the stolen bars were buried. When they were let out they came to San Francisco and induced a young man named Bailey to finance a treasure hunt. He put up $3,000 and the trio went to the locality. There it was found somebody had preceded them and had taken away the treasure.

The ex-convicts, pretending to be in search for it, spent a week in doing so, during which time they secured a bar of lead and palmed it off on Bailey as one of the bars of silver which they were in search of. Claiming this was all that could be found, they returned to California. Crossing the bay on the ferryboat one of the conspirators snatched the satchel containing the bar out of Bailey's grasp and cast it into the bay. Bailey had them arrested for grand larceny, and on the facts being developed in their examination the court and the prosecuting attorney were in a quandary as to what to do.

The stage from Scotts Bar, Siskiyou County, was stopped October 1 and the express-box taken by four masked men. A large shipment of gold dust was in it. Alex. Condrey, two brothers named Kelly and an Indian were arrested, and the latter confessed.

The stage from Weaverville, Trinity County, was held up by a lone highwayman near Shasta October 2. With a shotgun he got the drop on the messenger and driver and they were compelled to obey his orders and throw out the express-box. After going a short distance the express company's messenger, McNemur, got off the stage and went back to the place of robbery. From there he tracked the robber through the brush until he came upon him intently engaged in rifling the box. McNemur fired both barrels of his shotgun, loaded with buckshot, and killed the highwayman instantly. He was identified as Tom Hunt, a man who had been in trouble for unlawful acts before. On his person was found $1,300 in currency that did not come out of the express-box.

"LIFE A GAME OF POKER."

Wm. Brown, a prominent farmer living a few miles from Petaluma, Sonoma County, was stopped when returning home by highwaymen October 21, robbed of a large sum of money, stabbed five times and then killed by a crushing blow on the head. Three Mexicans were subsequently arrested and found to have part of the loot.

H. C. Bennett, the United States pension agent in San Francisco, disappeared and was found to be $27,000 short in his accounts. He was later arrested in Denver and brought back for trial.

At Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, October 4 fire destroyed the cottage of a widow named Mary Ledwidge and she was found cremated in the embers. She was alone at the time, and a lamp explosion was believed to have caused the blaze.

The cigar factory of the Consolidated Tobacco Company at Gilroy, Santa Clara County, was burned by an incendiary October 23, causing a $200,000 loss. The tobacco-raising industry of that section received a solar-plexus blow.

Charles E. DeLong, for many years prominent in public affairs, at one time being United States minister to Japan and accompanying the first Japanese envoy to this country, died in Virginia City October 20 and his funeral in Marysville, Yuba County, a week later, was one of the largest ever seen there.

Dr. W. T. Lucky, prominent in educational circles, having been principal of the Lincoln school in San Francisco and the state normal school in San Jose, as well as superintendent of city schools in Los Angeles, died October 21, aged 55 years. He was a native of Kentucky, and his passing away in the prime of life was deeply deplored.

Suicides continued to be astonishingly excessive. They were mostly due to financial distress and over-indulgence in liquor. One of the most sensational and unexpected was that of Pat Hogan, long prominent in San Francisco and Virginia City as a sporting man. After a fortnight of poker and faro sessions, so disastrous to his finances as to place him hopelessly in debt and unable to meet his obligations, he fired a bullet into his heart October 2. In a coat pocket was found an ace of hearts upon which was penciled the following: "Life is only a game of poker, played well or ill; some hold four aces, some draw and fill; some bluff it out, and oft get there, while others ante and never hold a pair."

FALSE ALARM CAUSES PANIC.

Smallpox was on the decrease in San Francisco, averaging only three cases a day, but there was a large fatality. John Mallagher, a prominent sporting man, after recovering from the disease and finding himself badly pitted, went on a protracted spree, which ended by his falling down the stairs of a hotel and being instantly killed.

Walter Haskell, aged 16 years, shot a duck at San Jose October 1 in a pond near Alum Rock. Disrobing, he swam out to get it. On returning, when a short distance from shore he was taken with a cramp and drowned. He was an only child.

PROPOSED NEW LICENSE CARD RECEIVING GENERAL APPROVAL.

Every operator of a motor vehicle will be master of his own driving destinies if the plan of E. S. Thayer of Los Angeles becomes effective in California. Thayer has submitted to Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, a design of tri-colored operator's license card made in three sections which contemplates the surrender of one section of the card to the peace officer upon each violation by the operator.

If convicted, the court forwards the card to the division of motor vehicles. Two sections remain with the operator until such time as he is again apprehended, when the second section is taken up and the process is followed as in the case of the first violation leaving but one card with the operator. Upon a third conviction the operator finds himself without a card and without authority to drive upon the highways.

The plan is one which is receiving approval of automobile club officials and the division of motor vehicles. Its adoption, however, cannot be accomplished except by approval of the Legislature.

MOTORISTS ASKED TO AID WAR ON PUNCTURE VINE.

Relentless warfare against the destructive puncture weed is being pushed to the limit by state and county authorities, according to recent reports. Many organizations and other agencies are assisting in the elimination of this destructive vine in California, and in order to make the extermination swift and sure all motorists are asked to co-operate in the warfare.

Enlisted in this campaign is the Automobile Club of Southern California, which has called upon its membership of 122,000, and all other motorists in California South to report promptly to the club any locality where the puncture vine is found growing. Notification may be sent either to the headquarters of the club in Los Angeles or to any of the thirty-one branches in the population centers of the southern part of the state.

The authorities believe that if all motorists will interest themselves in this campaign, the puncture weeds can be exterminated promptly, with the resultant saving of tens of thousands of dollars in tires.

THROW OUT CLUTCH.

Few drivers of automobiles consider it important to put out the clutch when starting the engine in their car. Most motorists figure that so long as the shift lever is in neutral there is no load on the engine.

"This is an erroneous idea," says a bulletin issued by the California State Automobile Association, "and the sooner one knows the facts and puts them into practice the better it will be for the battery in his car.

"There are gears that must be turned over when the clutch is not thrown out and when the grease is cold and heavy this places an unnecessary strain on the starting motor, causing the brushes to arc and burn the commutator."

WOMEN MORE CAUTIOUS.

Women auto drivers are more cautious and courteous than men, it is shown in a nation-wide survey. The outstanding features of the findings were:

Women are not generally speeders. Married women appear more careful than single girls. Few women are "one-arm" drivers.

Look Behind—When about to overtake another car, it is important to glance into the rear-view mirror to see whether anyone behind is trying to pass. If several cars have passed from the opposite direction, however, it is not necessary to glance behind.

HISTORIC BACKGROUND MAKES CALIFORNIA MOTORING INTERESTING.

The human interest of the old landmarks of California have a great appeal, particularly when the tourist is acquainted with their story. Excursions of an historical nature are most popular, according to the National Automobile Club. Helen Hunt Jackson's "Ramona" outlines an attractive trip for Southern California and Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast" is an excellent guide book for a few days' journey along the coast highway.

John Muir's "Yosemite" is very good preparation for an expedition into the famous valley over the new Merced River highway, and Mrs. Colburn's "Mount Lassen" is a splendid introduction to that natural museum of wonders.

Every county of the state has its background of story and legend, and familiarity with that background makes a motor trip the more interesting and the more instructive.

DRUNKEN DRIVERS LOSE LICENSES.

Intoxicated drivers reaped the larger share of revocations of driver's licenses this summer, according to a State Motor Vehicle Department report.

Out of a total of thirty-five licenses revoked during the months of July and August by the division of motor vehicles, twenty were on the charge of driving while intoxicated. This has been the cause of 115 revocations out of a total of 219 for the year to date. Loss of the operator's license is considered by many a small penalty for the dangerous act of driving while drunk.

MANY STOLEN CARS RECOVERED.

More than 10,000 stolen cars have been recovered by the United States Department of Justice since the passage of the Dyer act of 1919. A drive to break up interstate automobile thievery has recently been instituted by Attorney-general Sargent.

Cars recovered in the six years were valued at $8,845,530. Seattle, Washington, topped the list of recoveries with 922. Long prison sentences have been imposed upon many of the thieves.

TREAD MARKS TELL.

Make it a habit to look at the pavement back of your car when you stop rather quickly. Many drivers stop far more suddenly than is necessary in ordinary driving, causing one or both rear tires to skid. If you find you are making that mistake you can at least compensate for it by seeing whether your brakes are in equal adjustment. The tread marks will tell.

SAFETY HINT.

An open car, with the top up and the back curtains out, or with the celluloid broken is very dangerous to passengers. Carbon monoxide gas from the exhaust will come into the car from suction. The faster you travel the more dangerous the condition becomes.

SCHOOLS FOR CITRUS GROWERS.

Four extension schools for citrus growers will be conducted in Central and Southern California during the coming fall, according to announcement made by Dean E. D. Merrill of the College of Agriculture, University of California. The dates are as fallows:

Porterville, Tulare County, October 18 to 23; Riverside, Riverside County, November 1 to 6, Orange County, place to be selected, November 15 to 20, and Chaffey junior college, Ontario, San Bernardino County, October 27 to 29.

Old Spark Plugs Cause Troubles — An old spark plug may be the cause of a lot of serious engine trouble. If the porcelain cracks it may fall into the cylinder and eventually get under a valve seat. If a bit of wire falls off the plug the cylinder wall may be badly damaged.

Go Slow on Turns—Motorists should slow up at all turns in the road, advises the national safety council, which says blind corners are dangerous. When it is impossible to see what is coming around the corner, be prepared to stop. Sound your horn as you approach a corner.

Brakes Should Not Drag—Brakes do not have to drag for the most efficient adjustment. Where drivers have found this seemingly necessary it is probable that all other adjustments had been taken up to their limit.

Wobbly Wheels—Wobbly wheels are often caused by uneven tightening of rim lugs. Jack up the car and spin the wheel. Then loosen all lugs and tighten them even.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Joseph Birkow, aged 74, was a somnambulist. In Oakland, near midnight of October 2 he arose and walked out upon the railroad track. He was struck by a switch engine and had his head and both legs cut off.

Chas. McDonald, herding sheep in Fresno County October 27, was bitten by a rattlesnake and died in a few hours.

N. Sambolich, in Oroville, Butte County, to clean a large barrel put into it a quantity of lime and filled it with water. His little son, 7 years old, strolled up and was leaning against the barrel when the contents exploded and he was fatally injured.

October 30 a panic occurred in the Royal Chinese theater on Jackson street, San Francisco, caused by some one yelling "fire" during the performance. It was a false alarm, but caused a stampede for the exit that resulted in the crushing and smothering to death of twenty-six Chinamen and the injuring of about fifty more. The actors continued to play until stopped by the police when removing the dead and injured.

At the Oneida mine near Jackson, Amador County, October 23 the cage was being lowered with four miners in it. About 100 feet from the bottom of the shaft the cable broke, precipitating them. John Gardner and John Leiderman were killed, while John Turcovich and Frank Forsythe received broken limbs.

Mrs. Mary Young, aged 78, went into a store at Truckee, Nevada County, October 2 to pay a bill and, stepping backward from the cashier's desk, fell through an open cellar door down the steps and broke her neck.

The ship "Rydal Hall," from Liverpool with a cargo for San Francisco, struck on a rock near Spanishtown October 18 and was wrecked. Nine of the crew were drowned by the swamping of a lifeboat.

PIONEER'S NEGLECTED GRAVE NOW HAS GRANITE MARKER.

San Diego City—J. Harvey McCarthy of Los Angeles, affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., recently visited the Mount Hope cemetary here and succeeded in locating the grave of Samuel Brannan, a California Pioneer who arrived in the state July 31, 1846.

The grave was unmarked and uncared for, and so McCarthy, at his own expense, arranged for a granite marker to indicate the last resting-place of a man whose name is closely linked with the early history of California.

The inscription on the marker reads: "'Sam' Brannan. 1819, 1889. California Pioneer of '46. Dreamer, Leader and Empire Builder."

HISTORIC RIVERSIDE SITE MARKED BY MONUMENT.

Riverside—A monument to the memory of Louis Rubidoux and General John C. Fremont, the first colonizers of this section of California, was unveiled Admission Day, September 9, at the site of the old American fort here.

Surmounting the marker is the grinding-stone from what is claimed to be the first grist mill ever installed in California South. The mill was erected close to the site of the fort by Rubidoux about 1840 and during the Mexican war was used in preparing food for the American soldiers.

TUOLUMNE NATIVE PASSES.

Glendale (Los Angeles County)—Mrs. Johanna Bruschi, born at Groveland, Tuolumne County, in 1865, passed away September 5. Since 1887 she had made her home in San Diego City.

Surviving deceased are the husband, Councilman Virgilio Bruschi, and two sons—Virgilio Bruschi Jr. and Dr. D. J. Bruschi—of San Diego, all affiliated with San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W., and a daughter, Mrs. Hazel Hansen of Glendale.

WONDERFUL REPRESENTATION WINS PRIZE

"Virile to risk and find; kindly withal and a ready help. Facing the brunt of fate; indomitable,—unafraid."

DID YOU EVER STAND IN THE SHADOW of that impressive memorial, the Donner monument, and feel, as you gazed upon those strong, fearless figures topping it, the same inspirational pull, the same powerful urge that brought those undaunted people over the danger-beset trails crossing an entire continent to wondrous California? And they, poor mortals, after months of trials and privation, almost to the doorstep of their goal suffered horrible deaths in the snow-locked passes of the Sierra Nevadas.

All California is proud of that monument and its significant and honorable import. To those who crossed the continent in after years, traveling in a day and age when comfort and speed are boon companions, the inspiring figures carry a real message.

There is more courage and dauntless faith imparted in the simple story told by that forty-foot bronze statue, whipped by winter storm and fanned by summer breeze, than any school or college or, in fact, the entire academy of life, may ever hope to teach.

It was the lesson imparted by the excellent craftsmanship that inspired Hydraulic 56 (Nevada City) and Quartz 58 (Grass Valley), both located in Nevada County, where the Donners made their last great fight, to enter a replica monument in the big Admission Day parade in Sacramento, September 9.

Every detail of the bronze edifice was carried out in exactness. Careful proportioning was used, so that the whole might be mounted on a truck bed. At a distance of a dozen feet it was impossible to tell that the rocks forming the base were adamant—as canvas only. In the warm Sacramento Valley sun the plaque, exact in duplicate, cast a ruddy bronze reflection.

Probably greater still in the achievement of the two Parlors in presenting the float were the figures atop it. So set in pose were the pioneer imitators, that half of the thousands of spectators who thronged the Sacramento streets readily accepted it for fact that the figures were truly statues!

Deserving credit must be given Mr. and Mrs. Elza Kilroy and little Margaret Phariss, all of Nevada City, in carrying out the Donner role. All were attired as depicted by the monument figures themselves. Kilroy, a trustee of Hydraulic Parlor and a strapping, stalwart figure towering over six feet, with his comely wife, leaning so trustingly against him, made a picture of long remembrance, while the little Phariss girl, huddled against his sturdy knee, completed the impressive interpretation.

There were seventeen floats entered in the gigantic parade by Parlors from widespread points in the state. The Donner float blazoned forth in popularity early in the line of march and was welcomed at every block with thunderous applause. Men stood with bared heads as the facsimile of one of California's greatest history chapters passed by. It was impossible for the judges to restrain from frank applause, a direct mark of approval.

Needless to say, the Donner float carried off the day's honors hands down. It was awarded first prize of $100 in good California gold, and both Parlors are still recipients of congratulations from far and wide for their noteworthy effort.—Earl J. Caddy.

Eureka School Dedicated.

Eureka—In the presence of over 1,500 people the Eureka junior high-school was dedicated September 12 by the grand officers. This is one of the finest school structures in the state and is so constructed as to take care of the needs and growth of the city for many years; it cost approximately one-half million dollars.

The dedication was arranged by a committee of Humboldt 14, Sam Silkwood chairman, assisted by Superintendent of Schools George B. Albee. On arrival at Eureka the grand officers were met at the depot and were guests of the Parlor at breakfast. Following the dedicatory ceremonies they were taken on an auto ride to Arcata and other places of interest in Humboldt County.

An exceptionally fine musical program was presented, and able addresses were delivered by Grand President Hilliard E. Welch and Junior Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler. Other grand officers assisting at the dedication ceremonies were: Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan.

Chain Extends.

Due to the efforts of Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, Los Angeles County is to have another parlor. It will be known as Santa Monica Bay No. 267, and will be instituted October 20. An immense crowd is expected to witness the ceremonies for, at the recent institution of Monrovia 266, Grand Trustee John T. Newell promised that he would present a marching flag to the Parlor having the largest percentage of its membership present at the next Los Angeles County institution.

Organization of Santa Monica Bay was perfected at a gathering of the charter signers at the Santa Monica Elks' Club September 15. The name of the parlor, which will be composed of members from Venice, Culver City, Ocean Park and Santa Monica, was agreed on, and it was decided to meet the first and third Wednesdays of each month in the Masonic hall at Ocean Park, a central location. It will not be surprising if over a hundred natives become affiliated with the Order at the institution.

Officers of the new parlor, selected at this gathering, will be: Eugene W. Biscailuz, senior past president; J. H. Blanchard, junior past president; Dwight C. Freeman, president; A. F. Giroux, first vice-president; Jack Curtis, second vice-president; Walter J. O'Bannon, third vice-president; David J. Davis Jr., marshal; Henry L. Levey, inside sentinel; B. W. Steinart, outside sentinel; A. P. Longworthy, Thomas C. Stephens, John J. Smith, trustees; Al. A. Spence, treasurer; George W. Burnett, recording and financial secretary; Dr. John C. Steele Jr. and Dr. Colan Steele, surgeons.

There was a full discussion of the aims and purposes of the Order, and much enthusiasm was displayed by the large number of charter signers present. Among the speakers were Past Grand President William I. Traeger, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Undersheriff Eugene Biscailuz, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer and Dr. W. J. Hanna (Sacramento 3), of the visitors, Dwight Freeman, A. F. Giroux, David Davis and others.

Past Grands in Reunion.

Napa—The annual outing of the Past Grand Presidents held at the Frank L. Coombs ranch near this city September 5 was an enjoyable event. For a number of years Judge Coombs has been the host at these yearly gatherings and they have become a feature which few Past Grands miss. Always a most genial and hospitable host, every detail is so carefully considered that each one of the events will linger long in the memories of those who have been so fortunate as to be invited.

The guests joined in an auto caravan at San Francisco and started from the Bay City at 9 a. m., arriving at Napa in time for the barbecue, served promptly at noon. Nathan Coombs was the chief cook and was assisted by his sisters, Dorothy Coombs and Mrs. Amy Coombs-Dunlap. Needless to say, the inner man was thoroughly satisfied.

These reunions are looked forward to by the Past Grand Presidents not alone because of the "big feeds" provided, but they delight to avail themselves of every opportunity to meet friends to whom they are attached by ties of affection and warmest friendship. Past Grand President Robert M. Fitzgerald invited the members of the Past Grands' association to be his guests at Oakland some time in October, and Past Grand Presidents Herman C. Lichtenberger and William I. Traeger announced that they would entertain the members next May at Los Angeles.

Past Grand Presidents in attendance included:

Eighteen Come Into Fold.

San Bernardino—The first initiation in the membership drive of Arrowhead 110 now being waged by two teams—the Grizzlies and the Bears—was held at the Parlor's Crestline clubhouse September 6. Eighteen candidates, mostly rounded up by the Grizzlies, J. W. Jasper captain, were brought into the fold.

Preceding the initiation a steak "feed" was served under the direction of D.D.G.P. "Sid" Mee. Charles Frost and Fred Grant had charge of the transportation. Among the visitors were Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer and Julius W. Krause (Ramona 109), the latter officiating at the piano for the initiation ceremonies.

Good-natured, hard-working John Andreson Jr., former Grand Trustee and Grand Director, was elected supervisor of San Bernardino County at the August primary. He recently had the misfortune to break his arm.

They Will Be Sorely Missed.

San Rafael—Mount Tamalpais 64 had the misfortune to lose by death within a few weeks two of its most prominent members—Hon. Thomas J. Lennon, justice of the State Supreme Court, and M. F. Cochrane, member of the San Francisco Harbor Commission and editor and publisher of the "San Rafael Independent." Both did much to further the cause of the Order, not only in San Rafael but throughout the state. Their services were always at the command of their Parlor and the Order.

A matchless orator, courteous, kindly and dignified, Justice Lennon was admired and respected by the entire community and was responsible for material increases in the membership of Mount Tamalpais. As editor of the "San Rafael Independent" Cochrane gave unlimited space to the Order and did much to keep it in the public eye. Both of them will be sorely missed.

Mount Tamalpias has extended an invitation to South San Francisco 157 to pay it a fraternal visit October 11. As the South boys are "live wires," a wonderful time is anticipated.

To Save the Forests.

San Francisco—A meeting of the Grand Parlor committee on forestry and reforestation was held September 4 in the Grand Parlor offices in Native Sons' Building. Organization was perfected by the election of Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger of Los Angeles as chairman and L. P. Bigelow (Hdyraulic 56) of Nevada City as secretary.

Plans were discussed for active work during the fall, winter and spring months. Every Subordinate Parlor will be called on to carry out a program which the committee is rounding into shape.

Secretary Bigelow, supervisor of the Tahoe National Forest, was battling a forest fire in the mountains near Truckee, and in order to attend the meeting the forest service placed an airplane and a pilot at his command. He left the mountains at 8 a. m., arriving in San Francisco at 9:25. At the meeting's close he departed by airplane for the scene of the conflagration.

Colusa School Dedicated.

Colusa—Under the auspices of Colusa 69 the grand officers dedicated the Colusa union high-school September 6. A fine program of speaking and musical numbers was presented. Music was furnished by the school's orchestra.

The principal speakers were Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Principal Noll H. Garrison of the high-school. Other grand officers who participated in the ceremonies were: Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' RELIEF CLUB GETS HANDSOME CHECK.

REDDING (SHASTA COUNTY)—SOME three months ago Charles H. Dickey, president of the Mount Shasta Coal Company, visited this county and was so delighted with its beauties and possibilities that he left with Mayor Earnest Dozier of Redding a check for $1,000, to be by him turned over to the charitable organization which, in the mayor's opinion, is the most deserving.

After a thorough investigation of what has been accomplished by various charitable organizations, Mayor Dozier has turned the $1,000 over to the Children's Relief Club of Hiawatha 140, of which Edna Saygrover, a former Grand Trustee, is president. The club is composed of about thirty members of the Parlor who meet weekly and sew for needy children; the club also furnishes provisions, medical attention and other things necessary for comfort. The check was received and gratefully acknowledged by the following representatives of the club: President Saygrover, Mrs. Jesse Young and Miss May Minear.

In announcing the award, Mayor Dozier said: "The money raised by the Native Daughters' Childrens' Relief Club is spent for relief of needy children in Shasta County. The club has accomplished much good work in the past and has provided food and clothing for scores of families who otherwise would have suffered. The donation of $1,000 just received will aid immensely in the work and will make it possible for the club to make many children and many mothers and fathers happy during the coming year." Dr. Dozier has himself recently donated $50 to the club.

Finance Committee Meets.

San Francisco—Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola, who has recently returned from a tour of Europe, presided September 10 at the third meeting of the Grand Parlor finance committee, of which she is chairman. Also in attendance were Grand President Pearl Lamb, Junior Past Grand President Sue J. Irwin, Chairman Board Grand Trustees Sallie R. Thaler, Anna Gruber-Loser. Many plans for the ensuing year were discussed.

Pioneers Are Guests.

Alturas—The Admission Day, September 9, annual reunion and dinner for the Pioneers of Modoc County, featured for several years by Alturas 159, was the most enjoyable and the best attended of any. The program opened with an invocation by Rev. S. C. Carson.

Mrs. Anna Fraley introduced President Mary Wickliffe of Alturas who, in turn, introduced Mrs. Cora Follett, a new member of 159, and she delivered a stirring address of welcome. She told of the Order's purpose, to honor the Pioneers, recounted what it is accomplishing, and pleaded for an exemplification of the commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother." In the way of musical numbers there were community singing, minuet and song by the Alturas grammar-school third grade pupils, piano and violin duet, "Love's Old Sweet Song," by Mrs. Irma Laird and Mrs. Irene Cummings, and a song, "Yankee Doodle," by 92-year-old "Grandma" Bare.

Miss Dorothy Gloster gave a reading, and E. C. Bonner spoke on "Know Modoc County History," in the course of which he lauded the Parlor's efforts to that end. Other speakers were: D. C. Berry, who eulogized Fremont; J. E. Niles, who commended the Native Daughters for perpetuating the memory of the Pioneers; Mrs. J. D. Flournoy, J. J. Munroe, Theodore Renner, Jess Parman, Mrs. Salisbury. The program concluded with old-time dances in which the Pioneers participated.

Grand President Pearl Lamb officially visited Alturas Parlor August 19. She was accompanied by D.D.G.P. Marguerite Sullivan of San Francisco. Among the many in attendance were Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster, D.D.G.P. Effie Kaufman and eleven members of Mount Lassen 215 (Bieber). Following a banquet several addresses were in order. During the evening Miss Helen Flournoy, in view of her approaching marriage to Dr. Merrill Auble, was given a kitchen shower.

September Girls Entertained.

San Jose—Members of Vendome 100 who were born in September were guests of the Parlor September 16 at a charming affair arranged by a committee made up of members whose birthdays come in August. The tables were beautifully decorated in gorgeously-colored flowers, and at each place was an individual birthday cake with a single red candle. Mrs. Ralph Farnsworth, chairman of the committee, extended the Parlor's good wishes, Grand Marshal Josephine C. Barboni read some original verses and the committee rendered an original song, "Happy Birthday to All." During October the September girls will entertain the October Vendomites.

The card party of September 16 was in charge of Mms. Myrtle Jung, Elsie Dietz and Sarah Oxtoby, and that of September 23 by Mms. Addie Hagen and Elsie Smith. Both were well attended. The Afternoon Sewing Club was entertained September 20 at the home of Mrs. Margaret Morgan, and the Evening Sewing Club met September 29 at the home of Mrs. Emma Nelson.

October 7, Vendome will have its annual reunion and dinner for the Santa Clara County Pioneers. In charge of the general arrangements is this committee: Mms. May Calice (chairman), J. C. Hayes, Huldah Buehren, George Frost, Edwina Buffington, Susie Bickford, Rose Baker, Etella Boggs, Addie Haagen, Cecil Smith, Ella Jennings, and Miss Sadie Jefferson. The program is in charge of Miss Tillie Brohaska and Mrs. Clara Gairaud.

With President Huldah Buehren presiding, the Parlor will initiate a large class of candidates October 21, the ceremonies to be followed by a social session. Natives were recent arrivals at the homes of Mrs. Gladys Nelson and Mrs. Irene Russell, both affiliated with Vendome.

Officers Installed.

Santa Ana—Officers of Santa Ana 235, with Mrs. Mamie Conn-Schonberg as president, were installed by D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt, who was assisted by members of Long Beach 154 and Rudecinda 230 (San Pedro). For the occasion, the hall was transformed into a veritable flower garden.

Among the speakers of the evening were Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, President Calista de Soto of Los Angeles 124, Past President Charlotte Bennett and Mrs. Rudecinda Sepulveda de Dodson of Rudecinda. Several applications for membership were presented, and a committee was appointed to confer with Santa Ana 265 N.S.G.W. relative to a proposed clubhouse.

Mountain Parlor Visited.

Quincy—Grand President Pearl Lamb officially visited Plumas Pioneer 219 August 16. She was accompanied by D.D.G.P. Marguerite Sullivan of San Francisco.

Four candidates were initiated. A banquet was served, and members of Quincy Parlor No. 131 N.S.G.W. were invited to attend and meet the Grand President. By the Parlor, Mrs. Lamb was presented with a souvenir spoon, and she was also given a beautiful bouquet by Past President Nellie Erwin.

Instructive Talk.

Eureka—In honor of Grand President Pearl Lamb, who was here on her official visit, Occident 28 gave a delightful dinner September 1, which was followed by a regular meeting. Members of Oneonta 71 (Ferndale), Reichling 97 (Fortuna) and Golden Rod 165 (Alton) helped to make the evening a success.

With Nora Fowler of Golden Rod as president and all the other officers picked from the Humboldt County Parlors, the ritual was exemplified and two candidates were initiated for Reichling. Grand President Lamb gave a beautiful and instructive talk on the aims of the Order. Vocal solos by Grace Wrigley and Marie East helped to round out an enjoyable evening.

The four Humboldt County Parlors plan to hold many joint meetings in the future. The members feel that this course will not only help perfect them in the ritual, but will bring them closer together socially. Plans are now being made by Occident for a large card party, to be held in the near-future.

District Gathering.

Hollister—The Parlors of the district comprising the counties of Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito, which includes Santa Cruz 26, El Pajaro 35 (Watsonille), Aleli 102 (Salinas), Copa de Oro 105 (Hollister), Junipero 140 (Monterey) and San Juan Bautista 179 (San Juan), will hold their annual district get-together meeting and over-night party at Asilomar, Saturday and Sunday, October 16 and 17.

A 6:30 dinner will form the opening function, after which a short business session will be devoted to a discussion of topics of interest to the Order in general, to be followed by a social session when stunts and entertainment numbers will be presented by the different Parlors. Games and social conversation will fill the remainder of the happy hours. Sunday will be devoted to beach amusements.

Native Daughters from other districts are cordially invited to attend. The Asilomar management has made the very low rate of three dollars for room and three meals. Reservations should be made in advance.

Boys' Band Presented Flag.

Modesto—Morada 199 is making plans for the entertainment of the Grand Parlor here next June. Florence Giovanetti has accepted the general chairmanship and will appoint the chairmen of various sub-committees.

September 3, at a concert in the park, the Parlor presented the Stanislaus County boys' band with a State (Bear) Flag. The presentation speech was given by President Frances Bell and the flag-bearers were Lena Browder and Anna Sargent. Morada is very proud to belong to the patrons' club of this band which has won the state championship at the Sacramento State Fair for five consecutive years.

Bridal Couple Reception Guests.

Byron—In honor of Mrs. Clifford Wallam, a recent bride, and her husband Donner 193 gave a reception September 1 at which cards were featured. On the Parlor's behalf Mrs. Edna Hill presented the bride with a silver steak set. A delicious chicken supper, prepared by Mms. Mabel Peterson, Mary Wright, Kate Richardson, was served.

Ross of Antioch 223 motored to the Livermore Base Hospital September 1 and delivered to the war-boys there eighty-four jars of jellies and jams, six cartons of cigarettes, homemade candy, nuts and three and one-half dozen packs of playing cards. A fine response was received, and the Red Cross worker in charge was truly grateful for the generous donation from the Parlor.

At Sacramento, Admission Day, Antioch and La Junta 221 (Martinez) made a fine showing in the parade, the members being costumed in white, with yellow hats and corsage bouquets of California poppies. They were escorted by members of General Winn 32 N.S.G.W. (Antioch). Plans are under way for a large class initiation in the near future, and large delegations from all the Contra Costa County towns are expected.

Anniversary Observed.

Pilgrimage to Landmark.

Santa Ana — A delegation of one hundred members of Santa Ana 265 and Santa Ana 235 N.D.G.W. made a pilgrimage to Mission San Juan Capistrano September 19 and thoroughly inspected the historic landmark. Rev. St. John O'Sullivan extended them a royal welcome and imparted the history of the mission.

As a result of this visit the Parlors have under way a movement to rebuild the baptistry of San Juan Capistano, jewel of the California missions. The cost will be about $600. From the landmark the delegation went to Capistrano Beach and enjoyed a picnic supper.

sponsored by Reina del Mar 126. Miss Mary Wood extended a welcome on behalf of the Native Daughters and there was a program of appropriate vocal selections.

Among the speakers, who recounted early-day incidents, were: Mrs. J. A. Kimberly, the third American woman to arrive in Santa Barbara; Mrs. Alice Brinkerhoff Nidever Lawton, Judge R. B. Canfield, C. A. Storke, Judge R. D. Smith, Mrs. Lucy Foster Sexton, Mrs. James R. Heath and Mrs. M. J. Rolf. Mrs. William J. Eddy prepared a paper, which was read by Miss Jennie Kimberly, who introduced the speakers.

Out of this enjoyable gathering there will probably come an organization of Pioneers to meet regularly for social purposes and to collect facts of historical interest, and Reina del Mar is working to that end.

"Dr. Foolem" Entertains.

Oroville—Grand President Pearl Lamb, accompanied by Mrs. Claire Ludwig of Tracy and Mrs. Marguerite Sullivan of San Francisco, paid her official visit to Gold of Ophir 190 September 16. Following a dinner the Parlor met in regular session, with President Irene Lund presiding. Visitors were present from Annie K. Bidwell 168 (Chico) and Plumas Pioneer 219 (Quincy). In an address which inspired her hearers the Grand President expressed pleasure at the manner in which the Parlor carries on. Gifts of silver were presented Mrs. Lamb and D.D.G.P. Florence Boyle.

"Dr. Foolem" (Florence Boyle) and "his" medicine men then put on an old-time medicine show. In telling of the great wonders of "his" "favorite prescription," testimonials of those cured were presented. That of Grand President Lamb being most valuable she was presented with a boudoir pillow. Gifts were also presented Mrs. Sullivan and Mrs. Ludwig. Demonstrations were made by Irene Lund, Mattie Lund and Georgia Nystrom. An elaborate banquet followed the entertainment.

Committees in charge of the evening's doings included: Reception—Vernal Parker, Elice La Voy, Florence Boyle. Entertainment—Alta Hengy, Bernice Renfrow, Florence Boyle. Decoration—Alta Baldwin, Cornelia Lott. Refreshment—Maggie Bowers, Mae Hickok, Rosa Crum, Hattie McCoy. The following day the visitors were shown the surrounding country and entertained at the home of Florence Boyle.

President Entertains.

Hollister—Hilda A. Thompson, president of Copa de Oro 105, entertained the officers of the Parlor at a pleasing bridge party at her home September 3. Handsome prizes were awarded to Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs for the highest score and to First Vice-president Gladys Darling for the second highest. Delicious refreshments were served at the close of the card playing, after which musical numbers were rendered.

They Should.

"The September edition of The Grizzly Bear is out," said the "San Jose Mercury-Herald" of September 5. "From cover to cover it is full of interesting news to delight the heart of every true Californian.

"All native-born Californians should have this fine official organ of the N.S.G.W. and the N.D.G.W. in their homes, to keep in touch with the times and also to keep alive the history of our great state."

PERSONAL MENTION.

Miss Anna E. McCaughey (Reina del Mar 126) of Santa Barbara was a visitor last month to San Francisco.

SAN PEDRO PREPARING FOR BIG GATHERING

SEPULVEDA PARLOR NO. 263 N.S.G.W. was quick to respond to the call sent out September 21 by the local Red Cross for funds for the Florida disaster sufferers. Within thirty minutes after being appealed to for help, President Edwin E. Baldwin called the officers together and they appropriated $25 in the Parlor's behalf. Ottilie de Ropp of San Francisco gave an interesting account of conditions in Russia at the Parlor's September 14 meeting.

The Grand Parlor will meet in San Pedro next May, and Sepulveda will be in charge of the entertainment and housing of the guests. Some time ago James M. Mee was made chairman of the general committee to handle the numerous details. William Reuter is vice-chairman of the committee, J. V. Carroll secretary, V. E. Hopkins assistant secretary and J. Martin treasurer. September 14 Chairman Mee announced the appointment of seventeen sub-committees to assist in the big undertaking, the chairman of each being:

Finance, O. R. C. Grow; program, Joe Brannen; reception, J. H. Dodson Jr.; music, E. Reese; housing, Lazard Lippman; banquet, James Dodson Sr.; entertainment, B. B. Lippman; badge, W. Buchanan; law and order, E. E. Baldwin; transportation, John Swinford; grand ball, Robert Snodgrass; registration, William Maggio; printing, John Gower; decoration, L. Tilton; publicity, Stanley Wheeler; barbecue, Ramon Sepulveda; women's entertainment, Mrs. Rudecinda Dodson.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' DOINGS.

The good of the order committee of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W., Kate Dodson chairman, inaugurated a series of round robin parties during August and many delightful affairs have been held. The one of September 2 was given at the Cabrillo Club, through the courtesy of Past President Bertha Howard (Joaquin No. 5), the club's hostess. Hazel Raines, Charlotte Bennett, Carrie Kuhlman, Alma Werner, Modesta Contos, Marie Wilson, Abigail Hagenow were Parlor hostesses of the evening. Forty-three guests were in attendance. Leota Brucker was hostess at a card party at her home August 24, and was assisted in entertaining by Gertrude Riepe, Gertrude Buchanan, Florence Bostic.

Rudecinda has changed its meeting nights to the first and third Thursdays. The homeless children committee—Leota Brucker (chairman), Gertrude Buchanan, Katie Ross—has purchased a bolt of outing flannel and the Parlor will resume the making of nightgowns for the Allen Jr. Home. Lillian Denny (Los Angeles No. 124), an "old-timer" of Wilmington, was a visitor at the August 27 meeting. A mock wedding was enjoyed and refreshments were served under Mrs. Kate Dodson's supervision. Past President Charlotte Bennett, First Vice-president Gertrude Riepe, Marshal Alma Werner represented the Parlor at the reception to Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas in Los Angeles August 25. # SAN DIEGO'S HISTORICAL PRE-EMINENCE

WHEN PRESIDENT SERRA HEARD of the noble death of Father Jaume, he exclaimed: "God be thanked! now the soil is watered; now the reduction of the Dieguinos will be completed." And it was indeed a case where the blood of the martyr became the seed of the church. The mission was re-established and dedicated in 1777, though it was not completed until 1784, and was yet to be finally dedicated in 1813. But the uprising in which Father Jaume lost his life marked the end of the first hard period of struggle in which the outcome seemed doubtful, while the rapid recovery from that disaster signalized the beginning of the long day of mission greatness.

Of that day it is important that we should have a true conception, for it will always supply a romantic and picturesque background to local history; but it will be an error to suppose that it is vitally related to the city which finally grew up in the neighborhood of the pioneer settlements and which now bears the name of San Diego. The real history of the place begins at a later period than that which saw the passing of the mission fathers and the crumbling of their works under the pitiless footsteps of the years. Nor were their institutions or their influence much more substantial than their adobe walls. And yet, for a period of about two generatons, the Spanish soldier and the Frnciscan missionary ruled the land and, partly by leading and partly by driving, converted many of the savages to the ways of religion and civilization.

Conflicting tales come down to us from the earliest years of the joint reign of the soldier and the priest, and the written records are so bound with red-tape and saturated with conscious piety that it is frequently difficult to get at the facts; but there can be no doubt that the sword was the constant ally of the cross, and that the glory of God and of the king were utterly synonymous to the minds of that generation. Neither is there any doubt of the earnestness of the missionaries in bringing souls to Christ. They were so deeply in earnest that they did not hesitate to employ the military arm as a means of forcible conversion. There is reason to believe that whole villages were sometimes surrounded and their inhabitants driven to the missions. It appears that the soldiers themselves had a poor opinion of the Indians, yet co-operated heartily with the priests in bringing them under subjection. Apparently, neither the military nor ecclesiastical authorities were under any illusion concerning the inherent unfitness of the Indians for real citizenship. Both clearly understood that they could only be utilized in connection with a patriarchal establishment. Somebody else must think and plan and direct; it was their part to labor, and to labor in the fear of God.

As to the treatment of the Indians, accounts differ widely. They were better clothed, fed and housed than in their native state. They learned useful arts. They caught a spark of industry which, had they been made of more inflammable material, might easily have been fanned into a fierce enthusiasm for the modes of civilized life, and thus have lifted them permanently from barbarism. But there were many impartial observers who regarded their condition as no better than slavery. Thus Alfred Robinson, in his fascinating book, "Life in California," said that "it is not unusual to see numbers of them driven along by the alcaldes, and under the whip's lash forced to the very doors of the sanctuary." He adds: "The condition of these Indians is miserable indeed; and it is not to be wondered at that many attempt to escape from the severity of the religious discipline of the mission. They are pursued, and generally taken; when they are flogged, and an iron clog is fastened to their legs, serving as additional punishment, and a warning to others."

That the good fathers thought it more important to save the souls of the Indians than to spare their feelings or their backs, is easily susceptible of belief, for their missionary zeal knew no bounds. Better a converted soul in chains than a free heathen! There is no doubt that they sincerely subscribed to this doctrine, and they were no more fanatic than many others of their time all over the world. Nevertheless, the fair-minded student will not forget that while they were saving souls they were organizing a mass of cheap labor which worked for the enrichment of the Franciscan order, and founding settlements which they thought would secure the permanent possession of an opulent land for the benefit of their sovereign. In other words, their duty and interest happened to be the same, and they had thus a double motive for what they did. They thought it was good religion and good statesmanship.

When the Spaniards came, the whole beautiful western slope of the present San Diego County belonged to no one—but the Indians. With the raising of the royal standard it came under the nominal ownership of Spain, and it was agreed that each of the missions should take so much of the territory as it needed. The San Diego Mission laid under tribute something like forty square miles, with its religious and industrial headquarters in Mission Valley and its military base on Presidio Hill. It was expected that the mission would become self-supporting, and more. This expectation was grandly fulfilled after the first hard years had been outlived. But ships arrived each year in the harbor with supplies for the military establishment. The day came when they were able to depart with larger cargoes than they brought, for when the mission fathers had enrolled thousands of laborers, and when their herds had multiplied, they had a surplus of good things for exportation. The boundaries of the mission domain seem to have been quite indefinite, but when the property was finally transferred to Santiago Arguello, in 1846, the deed covered 58,208 acres; 22 and 21-100 acres, containing the mission buildings and gardens, were reserved for the church and still remain in its ownership.

In organizing the first expedition, in 1769, Galvez supplied it with material for planting such field, garden and orchard crops as he thought adapted to the climate. It is probable that the famous olive orchard, which still flourishes, and which is recognized as the mother of all the olive trees in California, owed its existence to the thoughtfulness of Galvez. There were many other varieties of trees of the early planting, such as peaches and pears, but the olive outlives all its contemporaries, and those ancient trees in Mission Valley should remain to receive the homage of generations unborn.

By 1783 the San Diego Mission had begun to assume something of its permanent appearance. The church occupied a space eighty-two feet long by fifteen wide, running north and south. The granary was nearly as large. There was a storehouse, a house for sick women and another for sick men, a modest house for the priests, a good-sized larder, and these enclosed on three sides a square one hundred and fifty-one feet long, the remaining side being enclosed by an adobe wall eight feet high. As the years went on the establishment was gradually extended to provide a series of small shops around the patio for the artisans and mechanics and accommodations for the increasing numbers of neophytes outside the walls, but close at hand. It was not until 1804 that the buildings took on the final shape which is preserved in the pictures of the mission period. But the plan of the fathers was always the same, with its low, gently-slanting roofs, its interior square, its Roman towers; and the material was always adobe, with burnt tile for roofs, windows and doorways. The walls were about four feet thick. There can be no question that the architecture harmonized with the landscape, for it was the architecture of Spain in a landscape resembling Spain in all essential aspects.

As the mission grew it became evident that the San Diego River could not support the large community without something better than the crude works which had been built at first. This condition gave rise to some talk about removing the mission, and there are early reports still extant which speak of the "barren soil." But the soil needed only water to make it produce successive crops of hay and vegetables, and annual harvests of fruit in great variety. There is nothing more remarkable about these priestly builders than the versatility of their talent and the manner in which they met all demands. Thus they were able to supply the engineering capacity to solve the problem of a permanent water supply.

They went ten miles up the valley, found bedrock, and proceeded to build a dam of solid masonry across the river bed, two hundred and twenty-four feet long and twelve feet thick. The remains of this work are still in existence and exhibit a wall fourteen feet high, as seen from the lower side. The water was conducted by means of well-built ditches and a short tunnel, and supplied the mission at all seasons of the year. It is this achievement which gives the mission fathers a high place in the history of irrigation, and the remains of that ancient dam should be regarded as a hallowed shrine in a land where water is the god of the harvest. Having thus thoroughly possessed themselves of the charming valley, and established the material life of their mission upon firm foundations, the Franciscan enthusiasts were at last ready to proceed triumphantly with their designs, both religious and secular.

It is pleasant to linger upon the personal character of these California fathers. While they furnished no exception to the rule that "there is a black sheep in every flock," they were for the most part men of the rarest virtues, consecrated to the work in which they were engaged. It would be difficult to select from human annals two loftier characters than Junipero Serra and Luis Jaume, yet these men are but conspicuous examples of the spirit which moved the Franciscans in all their labors for the upbuilding of California. The early priests came from Spain, the later ones from Mexico, and observers appear to have agreed in the opinion that the former somewhat excelled, both in attainments and zeal. It seems very remarkable that men so deeply immersed in spiritual concerns should also have been practical men of affairs and capable executives. Had they not been very competent in both respects they would have failed in their difficult undertaking. This very unusual combination of qualities seems to have been common to nearly all the priests, and it is little wonder that they obtained the confidence of the Indians to a very large degree and became their trusted advisers in all their troubles.

The ordinary dress of the Franciscan was a loose woolen garment, of brownish color, reaching nearly to the ground. It was made whole and put on over the head. The sleeves were wide, and the hood usually rested on the shoulders, though it could be drawn over the head when the weather required. A girdle was worn at the waist and was usually tied, with tassels hanging down in front. It was one of the requirements of the order that priests should have shaven crowns, the circular spot being about three or four inches in diameter. Thus the priest was readily distinguished wherever he went, and his benevolent, picturesque figure will always stand out clearly in California history.

As soon as the mission was firmly established the number of neophytes steadily increased, though it fluctuated a good deal with the passing years. The life of the place soon settled down into a regular routine, but it was ever marked by two predominant facts—worship and labor. The activities of the day began at daylight. Everybody who was able to move went to mass. Then the invariable breakfast of ground barley or atole was served and sunrise found everybody ready for the daily task. The midday meal was served between 11 and 12 o'clock. Again ground barley did duty in various forms. Sometimes mutton was supplied, and frequently the Spanish frijoles, or beans. The sick and aged were fed largely on milk, which was something of a luxury. An interesting custom was the distribution of a liquid made of vinegar and sweetened water, which was carried through the fields in the hot afternoon on the backs of burros and always received with enthusiasm by the workers. At six the evening meal was served. This consisted principally of the inevitable ground barley and of such nuts and wild berries as the Indians gathered for themselves.

The commissary department was organized on a semi-military basis, with a keeper of the granary in charge. He distributed rations to each individual or family. The unmarried neophytes carried their share to a common kitchen where it was prepared and then served at a common table. The married men took their rations to their homes and shared them with their families.

At sunset the angelus summoned the Indians, the workmen and the priests to the chapel, where the litany was sung and the evening blessing pronounced. This marked the ending of the long day of devotion to religion and labor. Each night found the mission a little richer and the Indian no poorer.

The life of the Indian girls and unmarried women was somewhat different and the echo of cheerful laughter comes down to us through the years. There was a low building built around an open court which served as a sort of nunnery under the supervision of a trusted old Indian woman. Here the girls and young women lived, weaving and spinning, and making all the cloth which was used at the mission. They seem to have been happy in this association and to have had many love affairs which ripened into lawful marriage with the approval of the priests.

The fathers ruled their little kingdom with a strong hand, which was doubtless necessary. It is easy to understand that discipline was indispensable and that the failure to maintain it must have resulted in speedy demoralization. Imprisonment was a common punishment, but the priests did not hesitate to use the rod for minor offenses. The most serious cases were turned over to the military authorities at the presidio and sometimes resulted in the execution of the culprits by shooting.

The economic life of the mission was not confined to the cultivation of the irrigated fields and gardens in the fertile valley or the simple manufacturing that went on in the quaint little shops around the patio. The mission fathers were the merchants, the great stockmen, and even the bankers of their period. They were busy men, indeed, with their spiritual affairs, their trade and their management of immense herds of livestock. Vessels came to the port in increasing numbers, travelers constantly passed along the trail from Lower California to the north, and ranches were gradually established in the mountains. Thus it happened that the mission establishment more and more fulfilled the function of an ordinary town as a trading center. There were great opportunities for making money, and the shrewd priests made the most of them. They were bent upon the enrichment of their order because this meant a constant increase of their power, including the power to do good to the Gentiles.

In those days the waters along the coast swarmed with sea-otters, a valuable fur-bearing animal. The priests encouraged the hunting of these animals by Indians and others, and thus built up a profitable fur trade. They also bought other skins, usually paying for them with goods from their store, and were thus able to make a double profit on the transaction. They were the first and best customers of the ships when they began to come around the Horn with cargoes from New England, and their store became constantly more important as a distributing center for all imported goods required in the country, and as a clearing house for surplus products available for shipment. They sometimes had large amounts of coin, which they kept beneath the tile flooring in their rooms. Their reputation for integrity was so high that they were implicitly trusted with the savings and property of others, and they were thus able to perform a useful service as bankers for their neighbors.

The largest business operation conducted by the priests was in connection with the livestock industry. They brought only eighteen head of cattle, but by the year 1800 they had six hundred cattle, six thousand sheep and nearly nine hundred horses. In 1830, the number of cattle had risen to fifteen thousand, of sheep to twenty thousand, and they had thousands of hogs. The horses which they originally brought to this country were shipped from Spain and were of Arabian blood. The annual harvest also reached large proportions, sometimes exceeding thirty thousand bushels of grain. The cattle were wastefully slaughtered, after the manner of the time, and were considered chiefly valuable for tallow and hides, which were sold to the masters of the ships coming to the port. Only the choicest portions of the beef were used for food.

SAN DIEGO'S GROWTH REFLECTED

(W. S. CARSON,
San Diego Chamber of Commerce.)

Twice within a period of twenty-four hours people of San Diego were recently treated to the sight of a huge cigar-shaped raft of logs coming into port. For about fifteen years a local lumber company has been following the plan of bringing its timber here from the vast forests of the Northwest "in the rough" and finishing the lumber in its yards and mills here. In all those years this is the first instance on which two consignments arrived at so nearly the same time.

Each of the rafts was about 900 feet long and they were brought to San Diego from the Columbia River by seagoing tugs. The distance is about 1,200 miles, and the time consumed was a little less than two weeks. In other words, the rafts traveled almost 100 miles per day. In addition to the 5,000,000 feet of lumber contained in each raft there was a deckload of poles lashed to each of the tows which will go to extend the service lines of the telephone, telegraph and electric power companies.

Four of these rafts are brought here each year, usually during the summer months, as transportation of such bulky tows by tugs in the winter season would be inadvisable because of the likelihood of storms along the sealanes between the Columbia River and the Port of San Diego.

Another evidence of the steady growth of San Diego is contained in the recent report of the city auditor on the valuation of taxable property in the city for 1926. The report shows the amount of property assessed to be $126,259,228. The valuation one year ago was fixed at $121,537,414, so that the gain is nearly $5,000,000. The tax to be realized this year is fixed at $2,817,921.

NATIVES' DOINGS.

The Admission Day, September 9, celebration at Mission Beach, sponsored by San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W. and San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W. was a huge success. A thousand dancers participated in the pageant ball in the evening, the colorful costumes representing early California history periods. Prizes for most attractive costumes were awarded Beatrice Jackson, Geraldine Taylor, Kathryn Keifer, Lloyd M. Hall, Ethel Lane, Georgina Sharp. The judges were Hal Hotchkiss, Lois M. Simpson, Roscoe Porter.

The Parlors are arranging for another delightful launch ride upon San Diego Bay, the night of October 6.

September 18 several members of San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W., headed by Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, attended a country dance at Otay and report a delightful time. September 27 the Parlor initiated a large class of candidates.

This climate makes it possible for one to work out in the open practically every week-day in the year in perfect comfort. There is no delay or interruption by excessive rains, freezing weather, snow, severe storms, etc. This being so, the worker should not be averse to quit his work occasionally and have a playtime. About the only thing the farmer has to complain about here is the never-ending season of growing and harvesting. There is something coming along every month in the year. This is compensated by giving him the greatest playground in the world right here in Southern California. Who needs a playground more than the farmer? Whether the choice be the mountains or the sea, or a scenic trip through the country, all are within a few hours' drive, over the finest of paved roads.

FERTILIZATION.

No land is so fertile that crops can be grown upon it for years without fertilizer. Eventually it becomes worn out. The best evidence is the abandoned farms in New England, New York and other states. A movement is on to redeem some of them. It can be done, but it will be expensive. California farmers should profit by such experiences and fertilize. It pays big dividends. Fertilization is extensively carried on here, especially among the orchards, groves and vineyards.

IRRIGATION AND DRAINAGE.

Some waters are worthless, even dangerous to the land, if used for irrigation, usually because they contain soluble salts of alkali. If such waters are used, in time the soil will become charged with alkali salts and ruined. Plant life will not thrive under such conditions.

Drainage of soil is a very important matter to the man who irrigates. This applies to underdrainage and especially to land under irrigation. If the water table is not more than two or three feet in depth there is trouble ahead in the near future and tile drainage will be necessary. In such a condition sub-irrigation causes the trouble. For irrigation, it is better if the water table be at a depth of five or six feet.

GENERAL INFORMATION.

California welcomes the prospective settler. If the newcomer wishes to take up any branch of agriculture, numerous sources of trustworthy and reliable information are available. Do not lose sight of the fact that California is different than the part of the country you came from. Farm practices in most parts of the country do not fit into those of Southern California. Prospective buyers of land should become acquainted with methods in vogue here. Take time, investigate, be governed largely by the use to be made of land.

Land might be worth one hundred dollars per acre for certain crops to which it is adapted. The same land might not be worth ten dollars per acre for crops to which it is not adapted. We see this feature all over Southern California.

One locality will be all grapes, another oranges, still another walnuts, cherries, canta oupes and so on down the list. No matter whether one is buying land around Kalamazoo, Oshkosh or anywhere in Southern California, he should be alert and well informed. Accumulate a fund of knowledge related to climatic, soil and water conditions existing here.

Statements are not always dependable, because of changing conditions. Those that may be trustworthy this year may not fit into the conditions prevailing last year nor those that may exist next year.

Proper investigation of Southern California's agricultural possibilities will show them to be very great. Study quality of land rather than quantity. Available capital put into quantity might be unwise.

Get local information in different localities and make comparisons and deductions. There is a great deal of specialized farming done here. Select kind of farming industry according to preference or experience, and locality best adapted to your preference.

In conclusion, it may be said that California's production of agricultural products is enormous and almost beyond comprehension. It requires about four hundred thousand cars annually to move these products to markets outside of this state and to the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards for export. The large consumption within the state is not included in the above movement.

HOUSE WRECKING ANTS CAUSE DAMAGE TO MANY BUILDINGS.

Buildings and homes all over the country are being torn down in the very presence of their inhabitants, who often are unaware of the fact. New houses as well as old, concrete buildings as well as frame structures, are slowly but surely crumbling on their foundations. All this wanton destruction is the work of a small white ant, ghost-like in its whiteness and mysterious ways, but very worldly in its wood-destroying activities.

It is impossible to estimate the damage done by this native insect, or termite as it is called by entomologists, but actual repair bills resulting from termite damage amount to millions of dollars annually, says T. E. Snyder, entomologist of the United States Department of Agriculture. Recently it was necessary for one government department to spend $25,000 to repair a temporary building damaged by termites. A simple precaution in constructing the building would have prevented the possibility of attack by the ants.

Practically all of the forty-two species of this house-wrecking ant are of subterranean habit. If they can be kept from reaching woodwork from the ground they cannot survive in the building. They need a continuous contact with the soil as a source of water supply in order to carry on their burrowing work in the wood of the building. It is a simple matter to so insulate a building, says Snyder, that this water supply will be cut off.

Plans are under way to erect a small model building on the department grounds which will demonstrate various ways of preventing termite damage. The department is also urging the adoption of certain building regulations in many cities as one of the most effective means of preventing termite attack.

Briefly, the regulations specify that no floors, sills, beams or wood which have not been treated with a creosote preventive material may be laid on or in the earth. All untreated wood, even if laid on concrete, must have at least one inch of solid cement underneath and separating it from the earth. Adherence to such slight modifications in building regulations by city engineers would save much property as well as time and worry to householders.

HOLLYWOOD CENTER OF GREAT INFLUX

Harry Barratt
(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

LIKE THE TRAIN OF FORTY-NINERS, a continuous stream of automobiles is winding westward. That Hollywood is already receiving a great influx of tourists and thousands more are on their way is the report received by the officials of the Hollywood Branch, Los Angeles Realty Board.

The rental departments of some of our foremost Hollywood realtors state that they have more clients than vacancies, particularly for single houses. Many of the apartment houses have hung out "no vacancy" signs, and those remaining are usually "singles." High-class furnished double apartments renting anywhere from $75 to $150 a month seem to be very much in demand, especially those having real bedrooms, an extra bed in the living-room and a small dinette or breakfast-room. Several very handsome apartment houses are in process of construction in the Hollywood district and doubtless will be ready for the rush of tourists during the early fall and winter. Reports from the East and Middle West indicate that they will all be needed to accommodate the people who are headed for Hollywood.

Prophesies made early this summer to the effect that Hollywood would, in the coming winter, find itself the center of great California Southland influx of people are daily coming true according to reports reaching the Hollywood Branch, Los Angeles Realty Board. These reports, Chairman A. B. Strode says, are coming from all possible sources having contact with the transportation or handling of travelers and the business growing out of this movement.

Speaking of the general rental condition, A. B. Strode, chairman of the Hollywood Branch, says: "Good furnished bungalow courts are still in demand, especially where the owner has been wise enough to allow each bungalow a maximum of space. People do not care to live in too close proximity to their neighbors and are willing to pay liberally for light and air." Court bungalows with two or more bedrooms are always in good demand.

The owner of several high-class furnished bungalow courts says he has fewer vacancies than at any time since 1923. Near the University of California in Hollywood, the owner of a small furnished court relates she has had a steady stream of tourists, mostly with young people who will enroll in the university. They want little homes where the children can go to school, and are coming here to live if they like it. The owner of one furnished bungalow court said the continuous train of automobiles with father, mother and the children seeking a new home, reminded her of the forty-niners.

August building permits confirm the report that there is a great demand for homes. Of the 135 building permits granted during August, sixty were for single dwellings representing a value of $503,175 out of a total of $905,718. Total building permits for the first eight months in 1926 for Hollywood represent an improvement value of $16,206,317 as compared with $13,441,826 during the same period of 1925, a gain of $2,764,491.

Statistics derived from the railroads, public utilities, realty sales organizations, renters and builders, all support the prophecy that Hollywood will enjoy a very prosperous fall and winter.

Since the year 1921 the average annual growth of population in Hollywood has been 20,000, with 1922 and 1923 the banner years. A slight check of the flow was observed in 1924 and 1925, but if today's indications are correct, the year 1926 is scheduled to eclipse all its predecessors since the motion-picture industry discovered Hollywood in 1911.

hagen, Norkoepping and Malma. Orange juice is beginning to find a world-wide market, shipments being made to Gottenburg, Sweden, London and Christchurch, New Zealand. Hongkong, Singapore and Shanghai, in the Orient, were also ports of call for unloading this item, as were also Calcutta and Rangoon.

Fish of all kinds found in local waters is exported, the principal recipients being the Straits Settlements, Manila, the Argentine, Dutch East Indies, India, Belgium and the United Kingdom. One firm alone shipped its product to ninety-seven different world ports during the present fish-canning period.

Feathers for Yokohama; condensed milk for Latin American ports; cheese for Hankow, China; confectionery for Central America; crackers for San Jose de Guatemala and Cristobal; cocoanut oil for New Zealand; cottonseed cake for Scandinavian countries and Canada; machinery for Africa; fuel oil for Alaska; Diesel oil for the Azores and the Virgin Islands; oil tools for Bolivia; old newspapers for Borneo; sardines for British Guinea, Ecquador, Greece and British India; asphalt and pipe for Chile; printed matter for Egypt; borax for England, Finland, Japan and France; cotton for Italy and Germany; peaches for Ireland; kerosene for Java; wearing apparel for Morocco; apricots and citrus fruit for the Netherlands; seeds for sowing for Palestine; asphalt for Panama; flour for Nicaragua; bricks for Roumania; canned fish for Siam and Sumatra are some of the various exports which find their way to the holds of the freighters that make this port.

Summing up the totals, I find that the value of exports through Wilmington approximate one hundred million dollars annually, representing five million tons of cargo.

In addition to the millions which have been spent for municipal work, double the amount has been invested by private companies within the confines of Wilmington, creating a payroll which reaches the sum of $1,638,000 monthly. This figure will shortly be augmented by several hundred thousand dollars, due to the establishment here of Ford's Pacific Coast factory and assembly plant.

The writer is reliably informed that fourteen nationally-known concerns are at present negotiating for sites in the vicinity of the Ford location, which will tend to make Wilmington the recognized center of industry and commerce on the Pacific Coast.

And while all these vast improvements have been going on, the shrewd businessman and investor has been gradually acquiring valuable property at prices which will show a larger percentage of profit on the investment than any city in California South. Can you imagine business property in a city with the future of Wilmington selling for from $100 to $500 per front foot? Nowhere in the world can an investor acquire property which offers the opportunity for enhancement in value that is offered in Wilmington.

MILLIONS FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Toward the support of the public-schools for the 1926-1927 school-year, the State of California will contribute $22,527,680 to the several counties. The first apportionment of this sum, $15,341,720, has been made.

Of that sum, Los Angeles County received the largest portion, $4,520,363. Alameda County came next, receiving $1,114,120, and San Francisco third, with $1,031,800. The apportionment is based on average daily attendance of students.

SON OF N.D. PAST GRAND DEAD.

Ventura—Jack H. Sifford, son of Cora B. Sifford, Past Grand President N.D.G.W., died September 19 as the result of injuries sustained in an auto accident. In addition to his mother, he is survived by a wife and his father, Frank Sifford. He was a native of Ventura, aged 35.

INDUSTRIAL.

The last United States census of manufactures was taken in 1923. Since that time careful record has been kept of new industries and expansions, and the following is an estimate of industrial activity in San Francisco, January 1, 1926:

Total number industries, 2,198; number of employees, 50,095; payroll, $69,418,000; annual value of production, $529,140,000.

The metropolitan area of which San Francisco is the center, includes the Cities of Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda and Richmond, all of which are highly industrialized. The entire area turns out products valued at over $1,250,000,000. According to the 1923 census the principal articles manufactured in San Francisco, and their value, were:

Printing and publishing, $31,833,132; coffee, spice roasting and grinding, $23,870,186; slaughtering and meat packing, $20,451,709; men's and women's clothing, $16,027,138; foundry and machine shop products, $14,704,193; bread and bakery products, $14,357,937; furniture, $13,009,786; tinware, $10,923,870.

Food industries of all kinds are very important, affording, as they do, an outlet for much of California's agricultural production. Besides those mentioned above, the following are extensively manufactured here: confectionery and ice-cream, flour and grain mill products, rice cleaning and polishing, chocolate and cocoa products, canned fruits and vegetables, pickles and preserves, sausage and other food preparations.

Some other industries of importance are: burlap and jute bags, lumber products, structural iron, electrical machinery and supplies, tobacco, cigars and cigarettes.

The total value of manufactured products in San Francisco as shown by the census of 1923 was $416,317,535, an increase of $88,818,118 in the two years between census periods.

The San Francisco Bay district as a whole is also extensively interested in the manufacture of: automobile bodies and parts, iron and steel products, sugar (cane and beet), soap, chemicals and fertilizers, paints and varnish, salt.

ASSESSED VALUATION.

The total assessed value of all property in San Francisco for the past five years was:

1921, $869,187,114.
1922, $878,062,426.
1923, $916,695,517.
1924, $989,217,070.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT.

Due to its limited area and large hotel and apartment dwelling population, San Francisco's school enrollment is not as high, in proportion to its population, as in some cities. It is, however, interesting to note the growth of the school enrollment during the last five years:

1921, 72,521.
1923, 76,250
1924, 81,480.
1925, 87,720.

POPULATION.

Basing our estimates on enrollment of school children, four public utility connections, registered voters, names in city directory and the increase between the 1910 and the 1920 census, we get an average of 706,391, which we believe to be a conservative estimate of San Francisco's population, March 1926.

A fairly comprehensive picture of the city is obtained from the above, but no one can really know San Francisco without seeing for himself its fifteen miles of busy wharves, its skyscraping financial district, its 1,600 hotels and 2,400 apartments spread over seven hills, its beautiful homes, parks and scenic drives. Come, and discover for yourself!

SAN FRANCISCO'S SESQUICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

San Francisco is making great preparations for a sesquicentennial celebration,—that is, a celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of its settlement and foundation,—October 9 to 12.

Word of the discovery of the great Bay of Saint Francis had been brought to Mexico shortly after the journey of Portola and Junipero Serra to California in 1769, to establish missions at San Diego and Monterey. Portola, on his journey north in search of Monterey Bay, had not recognized the port described by the navigator, Vizcaino, but had traveled on past it and to the north until his soldiers, on a hunting expedition, from the mountains of what is now San Mateo County looked down on the southerly arm of the great bay now known as San Francisco.

In 1775 Spain, desiring to found a permanent settlement on this bay, sent Captain Juan Bautista de Anza with a body of 240 soldiers, padres, farmers and artisans from Mexico to found there a mission and presidio. Anza reached San Francisco Bay in March 1776, over three months before the signing of the Declaration of Independence at Philadelphia, selected a site for the presidio above what is now the Golden Gate, and a site for the mission near a lagoon located at what is now Seventeenth and Mission streets. The presidio was founded September 17, 1776, and the mission October 8, 1776.

The celebration this year will consist of a parade Saturday, October 9, starting at 1:30 p. m. from San Francisco's Civic Center. United States troops from the army and the navy, Pioneers, Native Sons and Native Daughters and other patriotic organizations will participate and march along Van Ness avenue to the Presidio, where there will be a review of troops, an historical pageant depicting the arrival of Captain Anza and his followers and patriotic exercises.

Sunday, October 10, the celebration of the founding of the Mission Dolores will take place. A parade composed of military and civic organizations, Native Sons and Native Daughters and religious and fraternal societies will form at Market and Sansome streets and proceed out Market and Valencia streets to the historic Mission Dolores, where impressive ceremonies will be held.

Monday evening, October 11, a commemorative banquet will be held, attended by distinguished dignitaries of the church, federal and state officials, representatives of the army and the navy and the grand officers N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W.

Tuesday, October 12, will be children's day, with pageants, music and exercises in the Civic Center.

Native Sons and Native Daughters are taking an active part in planning the event, and the several local Parlors will participate in the parades and other features. Lewis F. Byington, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., is chairman of the general committee, of which President Pearl Lamb, Junior Past Grand President Sue J. Irwin and Grand Vice-president Mae Himes-Noonan of the Native Daughters are members. Hattie E. Roberts, Grand Secretary N.D.G.W., is a member of the lighting and decoration committee.

NEW MAP OF SAN FRANCISCO.

In order to provide a handy guide for Northern and Central California motorists who visit San Francisco, the California State Automobile Association has just published a detailed map of that city in folder form. The map shows every street in the city and the principal streets and roads used by automobiles are specially designated.

In addition, the map contains a summary of the principal places of scenic and historical interest in San Francisco and carries a digest of local traffic regulations. The map is being distributed through all of the association's twenty-six district offices and touring bureaus throughout Northern and Central California.

FLAGS PRESENTED SCHOOL.

Sunday, September 26, the Sanchez publicschool was dedicated, the program being in charge of Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. and Castro Parlor No. 232 N.S.G.W. In honor of Grand Trustee Mae L. Edwards, a member of the former, the Flag of the United States and the California State (Bear) Flag were given the school.

A splendid program was presented, the crack drill teams of both Parlors being featured and being well received by the big crowd in attendance.

DEPARTS FOR CHINA.

A delightful evening was spent by the members of La Estrella Parlor No. 89 N.D.G.W. August 23, when the birthdays of seven members, born in August, were celebrated. The table was beautifully decorated with seasonable flowers and greens. With games and a delicious spread, the evening was well enjoyed by all present.

August 29 members of the Parlor were guests of D.D.G.P. Helen Mann at her mountain home in Marin County. She proved a charming hostess and spared no efforts in entertaining her guests.

September 4 Alma Buhr Crispini, a past president of La Estrella, departed for Shanghai, China, where she will make her future home. As a token of friendship, she was presented with a gift of silver by the Parlor, and was also the recipient of numerous remembrances from the individual members.

WHAT NEXT?

Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. plans to have something each meeting night to bring out a large attendance and to keep the younger members interested.

September 1 ... was an old clothes party and when the members marched into the room in the strain of "When You and I Were Young Maggie," there were peals of laughter, for they were rotten up "regardless." Some wore old-fashioned male attire to escort their "lady friends" and as they made the circuit of the room two or three times to give the judges an opportunity to award the prizes to the satisfaction of all they certainly were a sight to behold. Refreshments brought a happy evening to a close.

All the uninitiated are wondering what will be next.

PUBLIC INSTALLATION.

A public installation of officers was held August 18 by James Lick Parlor No. 220 N.D.G.W. and James Lick Parlor No. 242 N.S.G.W. For the former, D.D.G.P. Irma Grant was the installing officer. Grand Vice-President Mae Himes-Noonan acted as grand marshal, and Grand Secretary Hettie E. Roberts and Grand Organist Lillian B. Troy served in their official capacities.

Dancing followed the ceremonies and refreshments were served. The affair was greatly enjoyed by the large number in attendance.

BRIDE-TO-BE SHOWERED.

Miss Ada Johnson of Dolores Parlor No. 169 N.D.G.W. was recently given a miscellaneous shower by Past Presidents' Association No. 1 N.D.G.W. Many beautiful gifts were received by the bride-to-be.

"WHY DENMARK?"

Miss Florence A. Lyons became the bride of Leo J. Kane, affiliated with Olympus Parlor No. 189 N.S.G.W., at Saint Charles church September 18. Several members of the Parlor attended the ceremony and wished the couple God-speed on their honeymoon through the northern part of the state and into Vancouver, B. C.

"Now that the Japs have free access to California via Honolulu," says Secretary Frank I. Butler, "I see, by the papers, that we must also make this country sweet for the Hindus. Well, we have everything else, so why not? Remember that old saying, 'something rotten in Denmark'? Why Denmark?"

September 29 the newly-appointed good of the order committee of Olympus, consisting of Dan Sheehan (chairman), Henry McGowan, Harvey Carte, Louis Magini and George W. Schonfeld, gave the first social affair under its auspices, a joint social dance, in conjunction with Fremont Parlor No. 59 N.D.G.W. There was a large crowd present from each Parlor and a goodly number of visitors from other San Francisco Parlors of the Native Sons and Native Daughters.

George W. Schonfeld produced two surprises during the evening: vocal selections by Eugene H. O'Donnell of Dolores Parlor No. 208 N.S.G.W., accompanied on the piano by "Butch" Noonan, and a recitation by James L. Foley of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 N.S.G.W.

BASKETBALL LEAGUE ORGANIZED.

The Native Sons' Basketball League of San Francisco was organized for the coming season at a meeting September 17. The following Parlors have entered teams: California No. 1, Rincon No. 72, Alcalde No. 154, South San Francisco No. 157, Precita No. 187, Marshall No. 202, Dolores No. 208, Twin Peaks No. 214, Guadalupe No. 231, Castro No. 232.

Joseph A. Belli of Marshall Parlor No. 202 was elected president of the league and Ray Craig of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 the secretary. At the next meeting, October 1, a schedule will be adopted.

ADMISSION DAY AT SACRAMENTO

derful pride in our heritage, but we should not be too satisfied and content with our civilization, lest we follow the footsteps of others who were too satisfied and soon be forgotten."

Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, Junior Past Grand President N.S.G.W., delivered the Admission Day oration, dealing with historic incidents in California's history. "To the red-shirted miner, lured by the spell of gold, Sacramento was a magic word," said Judge Cutler. "Sacramento then was a mecca of the Pioneer who, by toil and suffering, labored across the perilous plains, and it is appropriate that Sacramento should be the mecca of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West on the occasion of this, California's seventy-sixth birthday. Sacramento has given us a wonderful reception."

Then the crowd wended their way out to the California State Fair grounds, to view the best exhibition of the state's manifold resources in the history of the State Agricultural Society. A brief program attended the presentation of the Flag of the United States and the State (Bear) Flag to the society by the N.S.G.W. General Admission Day Committee of Sacramento.

John T. Skelton, Grand Trustee N.S.G.W., presided. The presentation address was made by Hilliard E. Welch, Grand President N.S.G.W., who traced the history of the flags and said: "We want every boy to know who looks upon these flags that if this country is to endure, the ideals and spirit that brought them into existence must be cherished." For the State Agricultural Society, the flags were accepted by President R. A. Condee.

At the State Fair grounds, too, participants in the Admission Day parade that had been awarded prizes were announced, as follows:

Best decorated float—San Francisco, first; Placerville Parlor No. 9 N.S.G.W., second.

Best historical float—Hydraulic Parlor No. 56 N.S.G.W. of Nevada City and Quartz Parlor No. 58 N.S.G.W. of Grass Valley, first, a replica of the Donner monument; Coloma Parlor No. 212 N.D.G.W. of Sacramento City, second, a replica of the cabin of James W. Marshall, discoverer of gold at Coloma, El Dorado County, in 1848.

Drum corps—Alcalde Parlor No. 154 N.S.G.W. of San Francisco, first; Guadalupe Parlor No. 231 N.S.G.W. of San Francisco, second; California Parlor No. 1 N.S.G.W. of San Francisco, third.

Among the Native Daughter Parlors, first prize for the best drill team was awarded to El Carmelo Parlor No. 181 of Daly City, and for the best drum corps to Bear Flag Parlor No. 151 of Berkeley.

The successful Admission Day celebration was arranged by a large committee of prominent Sacramento County Native Sons and Native Daughters, the officers of which were: John T. Skelton (Sunset No. 26), chairman; George A. Burns (Sacramento No. 3), vice-chairman; Albert W. Katzenstein (Sutter Fort No. 241), secretary; Edward H. Kraus (Sacramento No. 3), treasurer. Details of the many features that made up the day's program were given in The Grizzly Bear for September.

GRIZZLY BEAR PUBLICITY APRECIATED BY STATE FAIR.

"Editor Grizzly Bear—Dear Sir: As you are doubtles aware, the California State Fair of 1926 broke all former records in the matter of attendance by 50,000 admissions.

"This gratifying situation was due largely to the advance publicity given the fair by the press of the state, and the Board of Directors has instructed me to thank you for the support and cooperation given by The Grizzly Bear. To this let me add my apreciation of your kindly interest.

Very respectfully,
"CHAS. W. PAINE,
"Secretary-Manager.

"Sacramento, September 16, 1926."

REWARD FOR FIREBUGS.

A reward not exceeding $500 and not less than $100 is offered by the United States Forest Service for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person, in any court, on the charge of wilfully and maliciously setting on fire, or causing to be set on fire, any timber, underbrush or grass upon lands of the United States within a national forest.

Many fires have been maliciously set by incendiaries this year in the national forests of California. Unless a real fire conscience is developed in the citizens the forests of California are doomed. It is high time that public sentiment be thoroughly aroused against that vicious enemy of civilization who carries the firebrand into a forest with malice aforethought.

Realtors To Gather—The California Real Estate Association will gather in annual convention at Del Monte, Monterey County, October 13-16.

Apple Show—The Anderson Valley farm center is to have an apple show and fair at Boonville, Mendocino County, October 8, 9 and 10.

of those men and women who today gladly acknowledge a debt of gratitude to those captains of industry who have shown by their work that they are unwilling to live by mere material gains alone, whose breasts are yet stirred with a generous idealism.

Chief among our society's members who have labored with unremitting zeal in locating the sites of the battle of San Gabriel River and the battle of the Mesa, and in urging the placement of appropriate monuments, have been H. M. MacDonald, now deceased, Percival G. Cooney and Charles Prudhomme, while that energetic and loyal Californian, Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes, has ceased not, day or night, to give of her talent to the end that this day might be made memorable in our annals. In the name of the Historical Society of Southern California, I do sincerely and publicly express unfeigned appreciation of the hearty co-operation accorded by the great organizations whose representatives have this day made actual a dream of years.

"The battle of the Mesa, fought on the ninth day of January 1847, was the final contest in the American conquest of California. When the Americans re-entered Los Angeles on the following day and Captain Gillespie hoisted the self-same flag in the plaza that he had been compelled to haul down the previous September, the war in California was literally at an end and peace was signalized by the capitulation of Cahuenga three days later, to be confirmed by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848,—that most memorable of all the memorable years in the history of California.

"On this glad Admission Day let us all, with one accord, pay generous tribute to the brave Pioneer Fathers and Mothers, both Spanish and American. Let us pay homage to all California,—knowing neither north nor south. Let us enthrone in our hearts and transmit to our children those ideals that everywhere exalt life and reject everything that is base. Let us faithfully teach our children the fascinating story of their state. Let ours be the spirit of the unknown poet of an earlier generation who thus apostrophized our glorious Golden State:

"O California, prodigal of gold,
Rich in the treasures of a wealth untold,
Not in thy bosom's secret store alone
Is all the wonder of thy greatness shown.
Within thy confines, happily combined,
The wealth of nature and the might of mind,
A wisdom eminent, a virtue sage,
Give loftier spirit to a sordid age."

BRILLIANT GRAND OPERA SEASON.

With the most brilliant casts ever assembled on the Pacific Coast, the third annual season of the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association will be launched Monday, October 4, at the Shrine Auditorium.

Eleven operas, notable in world history, will be given in every metropolitan detail, from casts to opera chorus, directorate and ballet. The season will continue through slightly more than two weeks, with two matinee performances and a concluding opera, "Die Walkure," Monday, October 18.

Richard Hageman, for thirteen years a director of operas in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, is the general musical and artistic director of the season. Benjamin F. Bledsoe is president of the association, Merle Armitage is business executive, and George Leslie Smith general manager.

Some of the greatest artists of the continent and America will be heard in the leading roles: Tito Schipa tenor, Louise Homer contralto, Georges Baklanoff baritone, Luella Melius coloratura soprano, Rosa Raisa dramatic soprano, Virgilio Lazzari basso, Charles Marshall tenor, Giacomo Rimini baritone, Kathryn Meisle contralto, Aroldo Lindi tenor, Richard Bonelli baritone, Marcel Journet basso, Paul Althouse tenor, Edouard Cotreuil basso, Desire Defrere baritone, Antonio Cortis tenor, Elsa Alsen soprano, Vittorio Trevisan basso, Florence Macbeth soprano, Claudia Huzio soprano, Elinor Marlo soprano.

The season opens with the presentation of "Samson and Delilah," the evening of October 4. Then follow, in nicely balanced repertoire, the following operas on the following dates:

CARTHAY CIRCLE MONUMENT TO PIONEER.

Built as a lasting monument to the brave pioneers of '49 who laid the foundations of this glorious state, the Carthay Circle Theatre, located in the heart of the finest residential district in Los Angeles at Carthay Center, has proven to be the tenth wonder of the world.

With its marvelous paintings by Alson Clark and Frank Tenney Johnson, depicting the struggles of the hardy souls who struggled to realize their dreams, and its many relics of the early days, the Carthay Circle has been a mecca not only for pleasureseekers but also for those interested in the history of the state, and thousands of tourists have visited it.

The opening attraction, "The Volga Boatman," played to about three hundred thousand people in its nineteen weeks' run, and the new attraction, "Bardelys the Magnificent," King Vidor's production of Rafael Sabatini's great story starring John Gilbert, opened in a blaze of glory. Judging from the demand for seats it will equal if not surpass "The Volga Boatman" record.

Two performances are given daily, a matinee at 2:15 and an evening performance at 8:15. All seats are reserved and can be secured two weeks in advance by phoning Oregon 1104 or at the downtown box office, located at 720 South Broadway. Carli Elinor and his great orchestra and a Jack Laughlin prologue, called "Les Magnifique," are added features of the program that place this theatre in a class by itself among the photoplay palaces of the great southland.

DON'T FORGET THE CHARITY BALL!

The Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles County will sponsor a charity ball at the Shrine Auditorium, Los Angeles City, October 23, and, because the funds derived will be used to better the condition of California's homeless children, the immense auditorium should be jammed to capacity.

One cannot possibly contribute fifty cents—the price of a ball ticket—to a more worthy charity than this. Through the efforts of the Native Sons and the Native Daughters, thousands of children, without regard to race, creed or color,—many of them who would otherwise have become state charges—have been placed in the best of homes, and thousands of homes have been gladdened by their placement.

The grand march, to start at 8:30, will be led by Sheriff William I. Traeger, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., and his wife. Don't forget the date, and remember that the greatest of all charities is to aid those who are unable to help themselves—the homeless children.

MIDNIGHT INITIATION.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. "hung a man" at its meeting-place, Native Sons' Hall, September 30. The hanging was part of the "Hangtown Days" show, which brought out a big crowd. Dinner was served, and then the fun was on. "Repose," presented by Charles Lloyd, was disposed of. The proceeds go into the entertainment fund of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263, being accumulated to take care of the 1927 Grand Parlor needs at San Pedro in May.

September 2 the Parlor had a midnight initiation, and added to its list of members Eddie Nelson, who was appearing in "Tip Toes" at the Mason. Nelson, who left the next day for New York, expressed appreciation for the courtesy extended him.

During October, President Andrew G. Beazell will introduce an entertainment feature at each meeting. October 21 has been set aside for the monthly initiation. Los Angeles' history and landmarks committee is functioning and getting results.

HOUSE WARMING IN NEW HOME.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. has secured quarters in Patriotic Hall, 1816 South Figueroa street, where the entire fifth floor has been engaged for clubroom purposes. The meeting-hall and Secretary John V. Scott's office are on the October 1, when Ramona Lakes formal possession, will be given over to a house warming and dance, invitations to which have been extended to all Natives in Los Angeles County and their families. Four acts of vaudeville will be presented, to be followed by dancing. Cecil George will be master of ceremonies and will be assisted by Harry Stevens.

THE "BIG NIGHT."

Renewed activities are apparent in Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. since its removal to the East Side. The membership campaign, directed by Marshal Jimmie Bottiler, is making good progress. September 21 was visitors' night and among the visiting speakers were Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, President Leon Leonard and Inside Sentinel Ralph Harbison of Ramona.

September 28 a clas of candidates were initiated, the officers of Ramona Parlor No. 109 exemplifying the ritual. The good of the order committee, W. H. Trollinger chairman, presented an interesting program, including a talk on early days in Los Angeles by Charles Prudhomme. Refreshments were served.

October 19, Vaquero will initiate another class of candidates. October 26 has been designated the "big night," and the good of the order committee promises something out of the ordinary. There is every indication that, through the Parlor, a big Native Son organization will be built up on the East Side.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' DOINGS.

John T. Newell, Grand Trustee N.S.G.W., was given an enthusiastic welcome by Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W., when he spoke September 1 regarding the N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor at San Pedro next May. Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola has been recommended for award for social and philanthropic work in a nation-wide campaign being conducted by an Eastern magazine. Spanish, Italian, American and other dinner-dances are in contemplation, the table decorations and the waitresses' costumes to be typical. The September 22 dance was a big success.

From Belle H. Cooley the Parlor has received a punch bowl, and from Mrs. Mary McAnany a handsome pillow. The bridge club is in session the second Wednesday of each month at the meeting-place, I.O.O.F. hall. All enjoyed the meeting of the thimble club at the home of Gertrude Allen. The committee on dramatics presented a surprise program September 29. Grace C. Yarwood, chairman of "civics," gives a short, interesting talk on a vital subject each meeting.

October 6, Los Angeles will initiate a class of candidates. October 13 will be given over to the bridge club and a social evening. October 27 will be an open card meeting for all Natives and their friends; refreshments will be served.

BOXING FANS ENTERTAINED.

Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. featured a boxing fiesta September 20, and a crowd of about 150 witnessed four fast bouts arranged for by Clayton Fry of the Los Angeles Athletic Club. The membership drive is progressing, and several candidates were initiated during September.

Hollywood's October program follows: 4th, business and refreshments; 18th, initiation and refreshments. November 6 it will feature a Saturday night dance. President Floyd Riley hopes to double the Parlor's membership before the May Grand Parlor session at San Pedro.

"THE CIRCUS LADY."

By Josephine De Mott Robinson; Thomas Y. Crowell Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.50.

To be on the inside, looking out,—this was the preference of Josephine De Mott Robinson, the world's most famous bareback rider. The "big tent" was her world, and she was happy in it.

Coming from a lineage of famous circus riders, it is small wonder that the little girl, "Josie," should early love the circus life and crave for a chance to be a part of it. She was only four when her father at last allowed her to appear on the bill, as a bareback rider. The story of her life reads like that of a fascinating fiction.

"The Circus Lady" is truly an unusual book. Not only is it an entertaining autobiography of a famous woman, charmingly written, but it is also an interpretation—an "inside story"—of the life that goes on under the canvas tents.

Those of you who fall under the spell of the circus, of the glitter and the color and the motion of its great crowd of artists, surely should not miss reading "The Circus Lady."

"I WANT TO BE A LADY."

By Maximilian Foster; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Life in the cowboy town of Pinto was monotonously the same. At least so it appeared to Judy Caswell, who looked at it from behind the lunch counter of Fid Murchison's "eating place." Judy was queen of the lunch-counter. It was she who handed the trainmen and a few weary travelers the steaming coffee and the fragrant doughnut, for the "eating place" adjoined the railway station, and east-bound trains pantingly caught their breath for a few minutes' respite from the heavy grade.

Judy frowned now as she saw the slouching figure of Rand Farlow shuffle toward the poolroom of the "Palace," Pinto's own particular bit of hell. With tightened lips and square chin, Judy decided.

Rand Farlow was an excellent example of bum, fast becoming bummer. He was an Eastern man who had set out jubilantly to conquer the West, all in one night. Now, the West will tolerate, but it will not be conquered. Consequently, Rand found himself of the conquered, and the Palace saw more and more of him.

In olden days many a fair lady has been captured and borne off, but these are modern times. Rand Farlow raged and cursed, but to no avail. He was kidnaped and dragged away helplessly to the formidable mountain ranges that hemmed Pinto in. Why he should be selected as the victim he could not fathom. Judy did not tell him. To be trussed up and borne away by a mere girl, that was the galling thought.

So the story goes. Of the never-faltering resolution of the titian-haired Judy, of the final salvation of Rand,—these two themes wind together into the romance, "I Want To Be a Lady."

SCIENTIFIC SUGGESTIONS FOR THE ROASTING OF BEEF.

Hot roast beef may be anything from a cause of indigestion to a scientific problem. To many people, it may be the former, but Dr. Agnes Fay Morgan, chairman of the Department of Household Science at the University of California, and her assistant, F. Mabel Nelson, are among the few who have made a scientific study of roast beef.

The problems that perplex the average housewife who roasts meat were those studied by the household scientists. Why meat shrinks when it is roasted, how a roast may be speeded up without increasing shrinkage or impairing food value, and which utensils are best for roasting are among the questions given scientific attention. Among the findings made by the two experimenters were the following:

The use of nickel-plated copper skewers increases the speed of roasting from 30 to 45 percent. Small and less regular decreases in total shrinkage of weight were found in skewered roasts, as compared with unskewered.

No definite differences in speed or shrinkage are observed when meat is roasted in covered or in open pans.

The loss of volatized matter, largely water, was found to be 2 percent greater in covered than in open pan roasting; it also constitutes one-third of the total shrinkage of weight.

THE GREAT CLOCK.

The clock of life is wound but once,
And no man has the power
To tell just where the hand will stop
At late or early hour.
Now is the only time you own;
Live, love, toil with a will;
Place no faith in tomorrow, for
The clock may then be still.

JEDEDIAH SMITH

Cajon Pass, then northward through the San Joaquin Valley to join his men.

Smith found his men in their camp on the Stanislaus, November, 1827, almost destitute of food and anxiously awaiting his return. He remained in camp two days, then, with Indian guides, went to the San Jose Mission, expecting to be treated with hospitality. Instead of being welcomed, Smith was seized and put in prison, a mere hovel, where he was kept three days without provisions. The officers denied him the right of seeing the governor, but allowed him to write to Echeandia, who was at this time in Monterey. The governor answered, demanding Smith to appear before him under guard. Smith was thereupon sent under the guard of four soldiers, and arrived in Monterey after three days' journey. In the absence of interpreters difficulty was experienced in understanding the governor, but again captains of American vessels came to Smith's aid. They entreated in his behalf until the decision to throw him into prison was changed, November 15, 1827. Smith was released, but ordered off Mexican territory, Captain Cooper becoming responsible for his conduct. From Monterey he joined his men, who were then in San Francisco in a deplorable condition. Smith's route was designated, and he was to leave within two months, incurring no unnecessary delay. His men were too well acquainted with Mexican tactics to tarry long; hence we find them slowly moving up the Sacramento River.

The river could not be crossed at the place designated. After futile attempts to find a pass in the Sierra Nevadas, the party decided, about the middle of April, 1828, to cross the river and go northwest. Their course took them through the present counties of Humboldt and Trinity, across the Coast Range to the sea. The way was rough, as the Rogers journal indicates. The following entry was made under the date of Wednesday, May 14, 1828: "The travelling amazing bad; we descended one point of Brushy and Rocky Mountain, where it took us about 6 hours to get the horses down, some of them falling about 50 feet perpendicular down a steep place into a creek; one broke his neck; a number of packs left along the trail, as night was fast approaching, and we were obliged to leave them and get what horses we could collected at camp; a number more got badly hurt by the falls, but none killed but this one that broke his neck." Game was scarce; fish and berries were purchased from the Indians, and served as the chief food of the party.

That the men realized the dangers of their life is evidenced by a prayer which Rogers put in his diary May 22. He wrote, "Oh God, may it please thee, in thy divine providence, to still guide and protect us through this wilderness of doubt and fear, as thou hast done heretofore, and be with us in the hour of danger and difficulty, as all praise is due to thee and not to man, oh! do not forsake us Lord, but be with us and direct us through."

There was a great deal of trapping along the way. Many valuable furs and about one hundred and fifty horses were in the possession of Smith and his men when they reached the shore just above the Klamath River. They followed the coast northward quite closely, at times even traveling on the beach sand.

Arriving at the lower part of the Umpqua River, Smith learned from the Indians that the fertile Williamette Valley was near. He rejoiced with his companions that their hardships and suffering would soon be over, as indeed they were for most of his men. The Umpqua Indians were apparently friendly, trading fish and beaver skins. The river was crossed, and the road to the north was discovered to be in a bad condition on account of recent heavy rains. Determined to find a better road, Smith left camp alone on the morning of Monday, July 14, 1828. While he was gone the Indians raided the camp, putting to death all of the men but two. Turner, who was serving as cook that morning, used a firebrand, a half-burned pistol stick, as a weapon to knock down or kill the four Indians who attacked him. The other American who escaped was a man named Arthur Black. Black had just cleaned and loaded his rifle when three Indians leaped on him. He being a man of powerful strength, shook the Indians off, firing into the crowd. He escaped to the woods, while Turner ran the other way, meeting Smith as he was returning from his search for a road. Black was not aware that any other of the men had escaped, and Smith and Turner were ignorant of Black's presence in the same country. The Indians had taken everything from the camp, and the only alternative for Smith was to walk on in hopes of finding aid in recovering the confiscated goods at Fort Vancouver. The journey to the fort was just another terrible tramp in the wilderness. Life was sustained only by eating toads, snails, bugs and fern roots. Keeping in their course north up the Villiamette, Smith and Turner arrived at Fort Vancouver in August, 1828. They were surprised to learn that Black had arrived just one night preceding.

The British factor, Dr. McLoughlin, at Fort Vancouver, was friendly and courteous. He was kind enough to send an expedition down to the Indians and recover Smith's stolen property. For his trouble McLoughlin charged for his men's time at the rate of sixty dollars a year, and four dollars for any horses that were lost on the trip. The British fur company was kind enough, also, to buy furs for $20,000, paid by a draft on London. Not until March, 1829, did Smith and Black leave the fort, going to join the two partners, Jackson and Sublette, on the headwaters of the Snake. After joining his partners Smith did not return again to California.

On August 4, 1830, the partnership of Smith, Jackson and Sublette sold out to younger men. On the same day the three partners left for Saint Louis. Jedediah Smith nowgave in to the lure of the famous Santa Fe trade, leaving Saint Louis April 10, 1831, with is former partners, two brothers, Colonel J. J. Varner as clerk, and many employees.

As veteran mountaineers he party felt themselves capable of going anwhere, but the hot desert journey was different from the mountain regions, and there was no guide in the train competent to direct them. The way to the Arkansas was not difficult, bu from that place on to the Cimarron there was no definite road, only a great network of misleading trails. After two days without water Smith, with his usual daring, set out to find a stream. He soon came to the Cimarron River and, forgetting to take the usual precautions, allowed his animal to drink, then satisfied his own thirst. Arising from the bank he became aware of the fact that he was surrounded by a band of hostile Comanche Indians. The Indians fired on him and wounded him fatally, but before giving up his life Smith sought his revenge by killing the chief and two others of the band. The pistol which Smith used was sold by the Indians to some Mexican traders, who revealed the story of the American's death to his company. The percussion cap pistol and the watch carried by Smith are now in the possession of Walter Bacon of Los Angeles, a grandnephew of the "Pathfinder of the Sierras."

With the death of Jedediah Strong Smith in the spring of 1831, the most remarkable explorer of the Far West ended his earthly life to enter into perhaps a more interesting field of adventure. His journeys on earth were of exceeding importance from a geographic standpoint, for he traversed a region which was still very hazy in the minds of Americans. Lewis and Clark had opened a transcontinental route to the Pacific through the north, over the Missouri and the Columbia; Pike had done the same for the southwest, and the Santa Fe trade linked the Mexican settlements along the upper Rio Grande with Americans in Missouri. It remained for Smith to open up the Great Basin from the Snake River to the Colorado, and from the Rocky Mountains to the Sierras, as well as the inland valleys of the San Joaquin and the Sacramento. Smith as a fur trader and trapper furnishes one of the best examples of daring and adventure in the West. He was the forerunner of advancing civilization, the pathfinder of the trans-montane emigration. Without aid or protection from the government, he pushed into unexplored regions.

Most of the early trappers did not concern themselves with the idea that perhaps they were opening up new territory for the westward flowing tide of Americans. They did not consider themselves as benefactors of the human race. Smith must have had some idea of the importance of his contribution, for he kept a careful journal of his travels and adventures. He also prepared maps of the country, intending to publish a book of his travels. His papers and maps were collated, but the entire collection of valuable material was burned shortly after his death. Mr. Bacon of Los Angeles, in an interview, stated that he is certain that Smith had turned his papers over to Washington Irving for the great novelist to use in the writing of the book in question, and that the papers were burned in a fire which destroyed the home of the author, on the Hudson. But a mere conflagration could not obliterate the great role which the explorer, trader and trapper played in opening up the Rocky Mountain West, and an overland path to California. Indeed, a finer and more heroic Pioneer cannot be found than Jedediah Strong Smith, the "Pathfinder of the Sierras."

GRIZZLYETTES

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

Because the junior United States Senator from California who voted in the Federal Congress for, and has publicly declared himself in favor of, this country's entry into the "World Court"—was nominated at the August primary for return to Washington, claims are now being advanced that a majority of the voters of California favor the "World Court"—and, eventually, racial equality.

As a matter of fact, Senator Shortridge was not nominated by a majority of his party, much less by a majority of all the voters. Figures for the entire state are not available, but as an instance, in Los Angeles County, out of a total of 192,171 votes cast by Republican electors, he received but 73,679.

The November election will decide whether California is or is not a "World Court" state. Certainly a majority of the people of this state are not going to jeopardize the welfare of the commonwealth by voting to have California represented in the United States Senate by any man, irrespective of party, who favors entangling this country in European affairs through putting it into the League of Nations via the "World Court" trap-door. "World Court" entry assures racial equality, and racial equality assures California's doom, so far as the White race is concerned.

Twenty-eight proposed laws, among them eight initiative measures, will be submitted to the electorate of California at the November general election. To give an intelligent decision on the merit of each at the polls, the voter had better begin now to read and closely scrutinize—particularly for "jokers"—the several propositions.

In the untimely passing of Thomas J. Lennon, associate justice of the California Supreme Court, this state lost one of its most devoted Native Sons and an exceptionally able servant.

We concur in this wish, expressed by Anna L. Monroe, Past Grand President N.D.G.W., in a letter dated Ferndale, Humboldt County, August 2:

"August Grizzly Bear arrived this morning. Wonderfully interesting along so many lines, and profitable reading for everyone interested in things Californian. Wish every Native Daughter and Native Son perused it as religiously as I do."

AUTO-PAS SAFETY LIGHT

AUTO-PAS light on your machine will make the "other fellow" think of you and see you at night.

It is a safety light for automobiles, attached to the left running board opposite the driver's seat to eliminate front, rear and side collisions and side-swiping. Just as important protection as headlights and tail lights. Meets a want never cared for heretofore in successful manner 3 lights in one.

It reflects a white light upward, a green light forward and a red light toward the rear. The white light shows the hand signal plainly for a great distance; heretofore it has been difficult to see the hand at night—it is generally conceded the hand signal is the most practical and safe signal to use. The passing driver realizes that by clearing the green or red lights he takes little chance of running off the highway and passes in safety.

At intersections, the driver approaching from the left sees both green and red lights, indicating your right of way.

Because of its location the AUTO-PAS is the only light on your car that you can always be sure is burning, and if your tail light goes out the AUTO-PAS red light furnishes a satisfactory substitute and may save you a fine.

THE AUTO-PAS ASSOCIATION

927 So. Main St., LOS ANGELES, Calif.

¶ The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is founded upon the same broad patriotic principles that have been the inspiration of similar organizations in older States of the Union. Each State has its history. Into that history is interwoven a narrative of deeds performed by a mighty race of men who frontiered and pioneered the pathway for the countless thousands to follow. They transplanted the spirit, the life, the institutions of the Colonists, and wherever a State was erected there were established the ideals of the Fathers of the Republic.

¶ Therefore, the membership of our Order is limited to those born within the State, because we believe that pride of nativity is inherent in the breast of every person and moves that person to a consecrated loyalty to his native land. We do not maintain that birthplace alone confers any special privilege; rather do we teach that this casts upon the citizen an increased obligation to become interested in all material matters affecting its development and progress. National strength and national greatness have been commensurate with State strength and State greatness.

¶ California was the thirty-first State to be admitted into the Union. She contributed a citizenship and a golden treasure at an opportune time in the affairs of the nation. The many events connected with its settlement and organization as a State played a prominent part in shaping the destiny of the American people, and geographically she occupies a strategic position in the world-wide problems of the present and the future.

¶ We have taken an active interest in the conservation of our natural resources; the preservation of our scenic wonders and making them accessible to all; the retention of the State and its soil for the White race; all legislation, Federal and State, affecting the State and its interests.

¶ In our Fellowship endowment at the University of California we have expended over fifty thousand dollars in the preparation and preservation of the history of California and the Pacific Coast, and it has become the incentive for the Student Body of that institution and of the high-schools throughout the State to learn and teach that history. In this work we have laid the foundation for a text-book to be used in the public schools.

¶ We visit places where important events transpired and we have identified and marked the same with tablet and monument. Responding to the patriotic objects of our Order, we observe each recurring anniversary day of the Admission of California into the Union by public ceremonies in the various cities of the State. We actively participate in public dedicatory ceremonies of grammar-school and high-school buildings, on which occasions the students and citizens are addressed by officials of our Order on patriotic subjects.

¶ We maintain a "Homeless Children" Bureau and have placed in the childless homes over twenty-six hundred homeless boys and girls, insuring their development into a splendid citizenship amid elevating environments. In this activity we have expended over two hundred thousand dollars, contributed generously and voluntarily by the membership of the Order.

¶ It thus appears that the work of our organization appeals to every citizen of the State, irrespective of place of birth. It matters not where we were born in this land of ours; we are all citizens of a common country, we pledge our allegiance to one flag, and we are best evidencing our love of country and our loyalty to that flag by deservedly wearing the badge of public service wherever we exist and have our home.

¶ We welcome to our Membership the sons of California, and we promise nothing in return, save that compensation which comes to the citizen who conscientiously endeavors to perform his part in the cause of a greater and better civilization.

HILLIARD E. WELCH,

Grand President, Native Sons of the Golden West.
